YOUR AFFAIRS AND MINE.

Robert G. Ingersoll spoke a great truth when he said: "It takes too men to make an encampment, but one woman can make a home." A multitude of men here in Winchester know this to be so, for what is a home without a woman? The child misses, greater than we can tell, the mother. The young men and young women miss her too; and the same is true of the elders who have had the love and protection of a mother. The mother—she, too, misses the children, the son and daughter. Why is this so? Is it not because of the love each has for the other? And what a love that is! When death enters a home and takes away the mother, how sad is that home thereafter? The pen of The Spectator cannot picture the loneliness that enters therein, only those who have suffered the loss of a fond parent know how distressing it is to lose that parent. The young wife, she, too, is greatly missed when she is gone never to return. So is the wife of the older folk or in middle life. It makes no difference, the same blow is felt. This being true, should we not all think well of woman? We know she has her faults, and so has man; but can the love of man be compared with that of woman? In many respects it can, but in others it cannot. Woman's love is the greater. Read what Ingersoll once said of woman:

"I not only admire woman as the most beautiful object ever created, but I reverence her as the redeeming glory of humanity, the sanctuary of all virtues, the pledge of all perfect qualities of heart and head. It is not just nor right to lay the sins of men at the feet of women. It is because women are so much better than men that their faults are considered greater. The one thing in this world that is constant, the one peak that rises above all clouds, the one window in which the light forever burns, the one star that darkness cannot quench, is woman's love. It rises to the greatest heights, it sinks to the lowest depths. It forgives the most cruel injuries. It is perennial of life and grows in every climate. Neither coldness nor neglect, harshness nor cruelty, can extinguish it. A woman's love is the perfume of the heart. This is the real love that subdues the earth, the love that has wrought all miracles of art, that gives us music all the way from the cradle song to the grand closing symphony that bears the soul away on wings of fire. A love that is greater than power, sweeter than life and stronger than death."

The Spectator regards it as commonplace to say that most persons here in Winchester as elsewhere live too much at home. The meaning is very clear, is it not, that most persons are afflicted by too great proximity to the things that count least in the sum of the effects of true and inspired existence? It is not worth while to review the things of proximity, the things at hand. The Winchesterite knows them all, from the hand of ingratitude to the lap of luxury; from the pain in the heart to the ache in the mind. How many, how very many, are the things that one sees, tastes and handles in his every day commerce of living. They are so familiar that one can hardly reflect upon them without sharing the stereotyped opinions of others; he cannot enter into them with individuality and zest; that is, if he is not accustomed to being abroad as well as at home. Because of the burden of the known and the pressure of the circumstance and the despair bred of battlement, men and women are told to look to the great beyond. And this is the highest wisdom, for from the hills cometh the help that man may derive from nowhere else. Yet there would be infinitely less of tragedy inspiring the look to the everlasting hills if there were no such complicity on the part of the person to foster the ills of his existence. For we measure to the brim the cup of bitterness for ourselves and we pour out the bitter draught of distress of spirit for our own lips. Sometimes a Winchesterite gets into a nervous state, at other times he regards himself as temperamentally afflicted, again he believes that life is so dark that melancholy is alone possible in his existence. Truly there is no place like Home Sweet Home. And for this reason the Winchesterite should not encumber it with the mortal woes and afflictions of spirit that may be avoided. He who forms the habit of living outside himself and his surroundings is the one who learns the art of widening his horizon. More than this the Winchesterite who trains his spirit to abstract itself from the things at hand learns to revel in contemplation of the beautiful and the good to take up the song of life as given forth by the poets and the philosophers and to study the lines of beauty in existence, from the canvas of the painter and the mable of the sculptor. These Winchesterites have learned to live away from home. They are not artists, literateurs, poets, philosophers, but they have learned to live with a sense of change and they derive the benefits. In the same way a Winchesterite can live in the lives of others. The whole round world invites to communion, to reflection, to character formation, to the widened horizon, to the eternal open and zest for action and acquisition. Living half lives is the cause of the vast bulk of distress. They who live full-robed lives live as those who feel that sentiment is too true to be missed and service is too agreeable not to be attended to and that the highest sanction for its existence must be sought in the best experiences of one's fellows. Just to get away from the narrow entering of life will bring one back to homely duties vastly refreshed and quickened.

An incident not without its amusing side occurred in the fells last week. A well known Winchester gentleman, together with a lady of his church, were giving a picnic through their respective Sunday School classes to a party of North End children from Boston. The ice cream was so bountifully supplied that the party could not use it all, and the gentleman being approached by another crowd of picnickers with the request that he sell them some of his over-supply, readily consented. After the cream had been transferred he was approached by a park officer and requested to show his license for selling the cream. Not having any he was requested to furnish his name and address, and he is now awaiting developments.

"Man of Straw." The phrase "a man of straw" had its origin in England at a time when men might easily be procured to furnish evidence upon oath in almost any emergency. It appears that persons of this description were accustomed to walk openly in Westminster hall with a straw projecting from their shoes, thus signifying that they sought employment as witnesses; hence the expression. An advocate who desired a convenient witness knew by this sign where to find one, and the colloquy between the two was brief. "Don't you remember?" the advocate would ask. The party would glance at the fee and give no sign, but when the fee was increased his powers of memory increased with it, and straw shoes went into court and swore as desired. —Boston Herald.

Social Surgery. The newly rich dame took her daughter to a fashionable school and interviewed the haughty principal. "I want my daughter to learn to act as if she had moved in aristocratic circles all her life," she explained. "I see," mused the principal. "And are you willing to be separated from her that long?" —Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Historical. "Children," asked the visitor who was addressing the school, "how many of you can tell me what it was that Napoleon's soldiers used to call him?" Nobody answered. "Think a moment. 'Little'?" — Still nobody spoke up. "Little Corp?" — "A little corpulent!" shouted the children. — Chicago Tribune.

OAKLAND

Model 42 Oakland

MODEL 42 five-passenger touring car is bound to create a deep impression before the season is far advanced. It embodies sound engineering principles and possesses enough meritorious innovations to distinguish it from the common type of touring car. The body has a number of daring lines which stamp it as an individual design, and the aluminum steps, shroud and V-shaped radiator give the car a dashing appearance. Oakland is made in four and six cylinder types—$1000 to $3000—four, five and seven passenger touring cars, limousines, coupes and roadsters.

PICTURESQUE WINCHESTER.

Residents are Enthusiastic Because of Its Charms.

One cannot talk for five minutes with a resident of picturesque Winchester, Mass., without experiencing a desire to pack up one's goods and chattels and move to the town at once, so convincing is every resident's enthusiasm regarding its charms as a place of residence. The reason for this enthusiasm lies in the fact that the beauty of Winchester's site and natural surroundings has been most admirably supplemented by the good taste and good sense of its citizens in putting up attractive residences, in maintaining shady, well-kept avenues and streets, in spending freely for the town's improvement, and in making ceaseless efforts to keep out of the community anything that would make it less desirable as a home for those wishing the conveniences of city life along with the freedom of the open country.

That the people of Winchester love their town with good reason even the chance visitor must soon admit, for its pleasing advantages are evident on every hand. No doubt many a business man, sojourning here for a day or two has mentally noted the town as the place where in after years he would build him a home and settle down to enjoy life as he had not done since the days when as a boy he dreamed away precious hours under the open skies, close to nature's heart. Or perchance the poet passing through the town of Winchester has had visions of the day when, having educated the public to appreciate his verse, he would return rich in pocket to make his abode in this pleasant haven where the ever changing beauty of hills, rivers and lakes is a perpetual inspiration.

Winchester occupies an area of about six square miles in the Mystic valley. Here are found the far-famed Mystic lakes surrounded by the Mystic valley parkway where every turn in the road brings a new vista of loveliness. Through part of the town flows the Aberjona river on its dreamy way to the Mystic lakes and thence to the ocean by way of the Mystic river. On one side of the town are 262 acres of the Middlesex Fells reservation with its picturesque paths, splendid roads and shady woodlands. In the extreme southwestern part of the town are prosperous farms, while from the hills over which the town extends one may look far out over the surrounding country as well as down into the town's center where church spires catch the last glint of the setting sun.

Manchester field, a public playground occupying several acres at the town's center, serves not only as a place of recreation for the children but also as convenient and suitable grounds for baseball games, athletic sports and band concerts. Another source of delight is found in Winchester's clubs, some of which give special opportunity for outdoor enjoyment. There is the Winchester Country Club for instance, which maintains an excellent clubhouse and grounds of some 60 acres with a first-class nine-hole golf course. The Winchester Boat Club owns a boat house and float on the shore of one of the Mystic lakes, and the Calumet Club boasts fine tennis courts and a club house with a charming outlook upon Wedge pond. The Winchester Women's Club as well as the Fortnightly are flourishing organizations which not only afford their members much social pleasure but which exist to serve the town's best interests.

The public schools of Winchester are modern in architecture and equipment and bear out the reputation for efficiency earned by the schools of Massachusetts. The town hall is a handsome building and houses the public library as well as the quarters of the town officials. Stores and banks in sufficient number to meet the citizens' needs, an ample police force, a good fire department, drinking water supplied by three reservoirs owned by the town, gas, electricity, and an adequate sewer system help to make the place a most desirable residential town, especially for people having business in Boston, from which it is only eight miles distant. Between 30 and 40 daily trains run between the two places, and for those who have leisure there are electric cars running into Boston by way of Medford, Somerville and Arlington, as well as the Mystic valley parkway, over which, connected at West Medford with Revere beach parkway, the drive to and from Boston may be made with ease and pleasure. Electric lines also connect Winchester with Woburn, Stoneham, Reading, Wakefield and Malden.

The history of Winchester has been not unlike that of many New England towns. The place was originally part of the territory granted to Charlestown in 1640. A little over 200 years later it was incorporated as the town of Winchester, having been first part of Woburn, then a village by the name of South Woburn. The name Winchester was given to the town for Colonel Winchester, one of its most public spirited citizens. Since 1850 the town's growth has been steady, due to those superior facilities and attractions which promise to continue to allure an increasing number of discriminating, nature-loving people to become permanent residents. —Christian Science Monitor.

W. C. T. U. NOTES.

National prohibition is the great end toward which the W. C. T. U. forces are working. "A saloonless nation in 1920" is their watchword. And why may not this be? Prohibition has been proved good for towns and cities and states; why is it not a good thing for the whole country?

"We give below parts of an article by Enos W. Ricker in the 'Union Signal' entitled 'What National Prohibition Would Do.'"

It would stop the sale of nearly all of the liquor which is now being used and the $2,000,000,000 which is now annually spent for liquors would be used in the purchase of necessities or of comforts for those who are now deprived of them because of the liquor traffic.

An enormous army of men are now kept busy hanging over saloon bars and emptying glasses down their throats in consuming the $2,000,000,000 worth of liquor annually sold. Prohibition would "demobilize" this army, and the men could be employed at some useful and productive occupation. With the enormous sum now spent for liquors turned into proper channels, and the army of drinkers employed in producing instead of consuming, why should not the high cost of living drop a few notches?

It would stop the production of children with inherited appetites for intoxicants and the production of children endowed with brutal tendencies by parents who have been made brutes by drink.

It would remove the principal breeding places for vice, crime, corruption and debauchery of all kinds and the only place where gamblers, thugs, outlaws, et al. feel at home.

It would stop the annual sacrifice of thousands of human lives on the altar of Bacchus.

It would do away with the misery, want, sorrow, degradation and crime that is now the result of the traffic.

It would very nearly, if not quite, populate the jails, prisons, poor-houses, insane asylums and houses of prostitution.

These are a few of the great things that prohibition would do.

BOUGHT PART OF ABERJONA RIVER.

An auction was held at the offices of Edward T. Harrington Company on Common street Monday afternoon, for the sale by the Ellen M. Mead estate of rights in the Aberjona River and Wedge Pond.

George S. Littlefield, Esq., was the purchaser, paying the sum of $175 for the rights in the river from Walnut street to the Burns estate and for about one-third of the bottom of Wedge Pond, more or less.

It was generally understood that the Town had purchased all of the rights in the water-ways about the centre, but it appears that to have absolute control it will be necessary to make further purchase.

Other bidders were present at the sale, including Mr. Jonas A. Laraway, who has property adjoining that part of the river bed transferred.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

McDONOUGH—POWERS.

The wedding of Miss Abbie Teresa Powers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Powers of Glenwood avenue, and Mr. James C. McDonough, also of this town, took place on Sunday evening at seven o'clock at the parochial residence of St. Mary's church. The ceremony was performed by Rev. John H. W. Corbett. Miss Katherine McDonough was bridesmaid and Mr. Martin A. Powers was best man. The bride was dressed in champagne satin, trimmed with Irish point lace, and carried a shower bouquet. The bridesmaid wore Irish point lace over white satin and carried a bouquet of marguerites.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, which was largely attended by friends and relatives of the couple. The residence was decorated for the occasion with palms, marguerites, carnations and roses. Assisting the couple in receiving were Mr. and Mrs. Powers and Mr. and Mrs. McDonough.

Among the guests were Dr. and Mrs. N. King, Dr. James O'Connor, Dr. J. Foley, Mr. and Mrs. O'Halloran of Newton and Mr. and Mrs. Clancy of Chelsea. Many valuable and useful gifts were received by the couple.

RECITAL

The piano recital by the Dorchester and Winchester pupils of Miss Sadie F. Bowser was held last Saturday afternoon at Dorchester.

A large number attended who heartily applauded the fine rendition of the program which ranged from juvenile pieces played by first-year pupils to advanced scholars of six and seven years study, who played selections from Chopin, Beethoven, Rubenstein, Godard, Chaminade, Scharwenki and many others. Parents and friends commented on the progress shown by the year's work.

Special mention should be made of a little tot of six and a half years who played surprisingly well, as did a little girl of seven; both gave much pleasure to all present, as did the playing of the entire first-year class.

Variety and further enjoyment was added to the program by a number of songs sung by Mr. William L. Bowser, tenor, and later a duet by Mr. and Miss Bowser which was well received, as was also a violin and piano selection by Miss Katherine Tougass and Miss Edna Adams. The spacious parlors were profusely decorated with roses and ferns.

A RIFT IN THE LUTE.

Charles Zueblin of Winchester, who was the Progressive party candidate for senator last fall, is apparently anxious to know how it happens that the Progressive party has become tied up with a new-navy demonstration at Newport. He also wants to know why the party does not adopt a scientific labor program.

"If the Progressive party," he said with a note of forboding which will distress some of the enthusiasts, "would save itself and save the nation it will authorize a committee immediately to formulate a democratic scientific labor policy."

He also says: "The new political alignment is not complete. Many of the best Progressive, democratic federalists are still in the Democratic Republican and Socialist parties."—Ex.

WINCHESTER LOST

TO MALDEN.

In a poorly played game on Manchester Field last Saturday afternoon, the Winchester base ball team lost to Malden Athletics by a score of 13 to 7. The feature of the game was a home run by Murray in the seventh inning, which tied the score. Winchester proved unequal to following it up however, and the visitors piled up six more runs with little effort.

ENLARGED AND IMPROVED.

The Bryant & Stratton School, Boston.

In its new building, the school is removed from all surrounding influences which might distract the minds of pupils from their studies. The extension of Arlington Street during the past year has bounded the building by three streets, Boylston, Arlington and Providence, and made every foot of floor space desirable for school purposes. As one inspects the various rooms he is impressed with the abundance of light and purity of the air—two qualities so essential to the health and best progress of the student.

The school's record is its reference, and the very best possible guarantee of its ability to prepare earnest young men and women for responsible positions in the business world.

Its patronage comes to it unsolicited, because the merit of its work makes it unnecessary to adopt the practice common with many schools of sending solicitors from house to house seeking patronage. Plans for the practice of business in which the individual teaching system is employed originate with this school. Each pupil has a special course of study planned out for him and carefully adjusted to his personal requirements. This splendid system of combining study with practice enables pupils to advance in accordance with their ability and application, and graduate at any time when they have passed the established requirements. The demand from business houses for graduates of the school the past year has been the greatest in the school's history.

Another feature which makes this school unique is the adherence to the calendar governing the regular academic institutions. The sessions are from 9 to 2 daily with no attendance on Saturdays or evenings, or during the summer season.

WENT INSANE WITH HEAT.

The extreme heat of Tuesday caused James Gorgan of Lowell, who was working for the B. & M. Railroad laying rails at the shop of Beggs & Cobb Co. to go insane. The man felt bad and requested permission during the afternoon to stop work for a time. This was granted, and not long after the police were notified that a man was violently insane at the freight yard. Chief McIntosh and Officer McCauley went to the yard with Dr. McCarthy and found Gorgan, who was very violent.

He was taken to the police station and treated by Dr. McCarthy, and gradually improved. Wednesday morning he was taken to the Tewksbury Hospital, where he will remain until he recovers.

Intentions of marriage have been filed at the office of the town clerk, between William H. Mobbs of 13 Elmwood avenue and Miss Mary Jane Wallace. Mr. Mobbs is First Lieut. of Co. G. 5th Regt., Woburn, and Miss Wallace was formerly of the Winchester Hospital staff.

WISE WORDS
A Physician on Food.

A physician of Portland, Oregon, has views about food. He says: "I have always believed that the duty of the physician does not cease with treating the sick, but that we owe it to humanity to teach them how to protect their health especially by hygienic and dietetic laws."

"With such a feeling as to my duty I take great pleasure in saying to the public that in my own experience and also from personal observation I have found no food to equal Grape-Nuts and that I find there is almost no limit to the great benefit this food will bring when used in all cases of sickness and convalescence. "It is my experience that no physical condition forbids the use of Grape-Nuts. To persons in health there is nothing so nourishing and acceptable to the stomach especially at breakfast to start the machinery of the human system on the day's work. In cases of indigestion I know that a complete breakfast can be made of Grape-Nuts and cream and I think it necessary not to overload the stomach at the morning meal. I also know the great value of Grape-Nuts when the stomach is too weak to digest other food."

"This is written after an experience of more than 20 years treating all manner of chronic and acute diseases, and the letter is written voluntarily on my part without any request for it." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Look in pkgs. for the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville."

GREATEST GATEWAY.

Largest Freight Terminal in the United States.

New England's greatest gateway, the portal through which passes nearly all of her imported food stuffs and by far the larger part of her raw materials and likewise through which she sends her manufactured goods, is the great Harlem River freight terminal of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad, stretching along the Harlem River and part of the Sound shore in the eastern part of the Bronx, New York City.

One of the largest freight terminal yards in this country, covering half of a square mile and containing a total of eighty-six miles of track, this will be the first noiseless and smokeless freight yard of any size in this country.

For the past few months fifty per cent. of the freight in this immense yard has been moved by electricity. Within six months all of the terminal will be so operated, and not only that but the forty and fifty-car freight train which enter and leave it every hour bound to and from New England will then be handled by 150-ton electric freight locomotives all the way between the yard and New Haven, a distance of seventy-three miles.

To one accustomed to the usual freight yard with its array of tracks and electrified terminal it presents a strange sight, indeed, particularly if the system employed is the overhead system, such as that on the New Haven.

Standing upon one of the highway bridges which span the yard it looks for all the world as if some gigantic spider had spun his web as a covering for the ganglia of railroad tracks beneath. This mesh of wires, this spider-like structure stretching in all directions as far as the eye can see is whence the smokeless freight yard gets its motive power. Your eye follows these wires just as it follows tracks. At intervals of 300 feet throughout the yard, poking up above the roofs of the thousands of freight cars, are the big steel towers from which hang this web structure of steel and copper wires. They have to be very strong, these towers, for the pull on them of this weight of wire is great. Scattered throughout this big and busy terminal they look like so many sentinels guarding a scene of wonderful activity.

Here and there under the wires as you look down through the meshes of this web below you, cars are moving singly and in trains. A train of perishable fruit from the South, just floated around from the Pennsylvania railroad, is being "classified" preparatory to being rushed to Boston, Providence and other New England cities. That means that it is separated, broken up on different tracks as one would sort a hand of cards. But not a sound comes to indicate whose hand is doing all this. There isn't a cloud of black smoke rising and spreading out over the yard as is usually the case to show where the switch engine labors at its task. These cars loaded with the commerce of the country are being slanted on to tracks by some invisible hand, as it were. The only noise from the yards comes from the occasional squeak of a wheel or the coupling of the cars.

But if you watch this scene closely enough, you will finally discern through the maze of wires amid the roofs of the myriad freight cars a queer looking object, a cheese box on wheels, gliding noiselessly about, picking up a car and dropping it again. This is the electric switch locomotive—"mother hubbards" they call them because of their peculiar appearance in contrast with the electric passenger locomotives. It goes about its task without showing any of those signs of distress so common in the steam switch engine, no exhausted breathing, no puffing and panting, no cloud of smoke ascending in the air to mark its location. It seems the embodiment of power and efficiency.

There are really four parts to the Harlem River terminal—the Harlem River yard proper, the Oak Point yards adjoining it and running along the Sound shore and the auxiliary classification yards at Van Nest and Westchester a few miles east. The electrification of this immense terminal covering all these yards has taken about a year and a half. Electrical operation was begun in a small way last fall and within the last few months all of the terminal has been energized with the exception of the Harlem River yard proper, where the "juice" will be turned on in a short time. Then the last of the steam switch engines with their noise and smoke will probably be retired.

At the present time there are seven electric switch engines working in the terminal, and the same number of steam engines. As the electric switch engines are able to do more work than the others, there is really at present more than fifty per cent. of the total car movement accomplished by means of electric propulsion. When it is considered that the total car movement in this yard averages 5,000 cars a day, it will be seen what this means already in the elimination of smoke and noise.

The system by which these yards have been electrified differs but slightly from the system employed on the four track main line of the New Haven and on the six track freight and passenger road running from New Rochelle on the main line to the Harlem River. The construction in the yards is of a somewhat lighter character. In place of the triangle of wires seen on the main line each track in the freight yard carries a single seven-eighths inch cable supported from the cables strung between the towers. From this cable is suspended a conductive wire of copper and below this is the contact wire of steel against which the pantograph, as the trolley is called, runs. For the switches steel deflectors are used to keep the pantograph running smoothly. The towers are arranged far enough apart so that the wires suspended from them cover from eight to ten tracks.

Except at points where they go under the highway bridges the contact wire is 22 1/2 feet above the top of the rail. This gives about a two foot clearance for the brakeman riding on top of the cars. While there would seem to be danger even with that amount of clearance the fact that out of 500 men constantly at work in the yard not one has been hurt since the electrical operation began, would indicate that the hazards in the electrified freight yard are practically no greater than in the ordinary yard.

The electrified freight yard, owing to its overhead wires to be sure, has had the result of bringing about a change in the old time methods of the yardmen. In the electric freight yard much less work is done on top of the cars than formerly, and more from the ground. The old "break into two" signal of the brakeman cannot be used on top of the cars in this yard because it would probably mean death for the brakeman. This was a swing of the lantern at arm's length over the head, indicating to the engineer that the train had broken in two. But this signal has practically been rendered extinct any way by the introduction of the air brake which stops the loosened part automatically.

The electric freight yard is arranged by units. By means of a knife switch the "juice" can be cut off from a unit and thus repairs can be made without danger.

Electrification of this terminal has already shown many advantages. Cars can be picked up much quicker by the electric locomotive and there is the saving of valuable time formerly lost in coal and cleaning engines. For example, a steam engine arriving from a long run requires two hours before it can turn around and start back. An electric locomotive can start pulling back another train in thirty minutes. In the Westchester auxiliary yard two electric switch engines are doing the work for which three steam engines were formerly used.

But the saving to the railroad is as nothing compared to the immense civic benefit it has conferred on those communities which were once bothered with the smoke and noise of freight handling. The Harlem River terminal is not the only yard now electrified. New Rochelle, Mount Vernon, Woodlawn and Stamford now have noiseless and smokeless freight yards. At these places no longer does the switch engine disturb the nocturnal slumbers of their citizens. It has meant the elimination for them of all that made the railroad objectionable and has made it possible for dwellings to be erected close to the freight yards. Indeed, the electrification of the freight yard in the Bronx has already resulted in apartment houses going up close to the yard on land formerly considered undesirable. In fact, the civic advantages thus accruing from the large expenditure this has involved for the railroad have far outweighed the advantages in operation for the road. What is true of New York City, New Rochelle and Mount Vernon, will of course be true of all other places between New York and New Haven when electrification is completed to that point.

When this has been accomplished the "way freight" stopping to drop off its cars at stations will be a thing of the past. Indeed, it is to-day for places between New York and Stamford, for an electric freight engine now does this work, hauling a train out of the Harlem River yard and pushing cars on to electrified sidings all along the line to Stamford.

That the New York, New Haven and Hartford is the most advanced railroad in the country in working out electrification on such a tremendous scale and applying it to one of the biggest freight terminals in the country, making it practically noiseless and smokeless, is attested by the fact that a commission was sent on last fall from Chicago on purpose to examine the construction and operation of the Harlem River yard in the hopes that some such plan could be evolved for Chicago.

With the completion of the electrification as far as New Haven, a distance of 73 miles, and the hauling of all freight and passenger trains over this entire distance by electricity, the New Haven will further emphasize its claim to be the most advanced railroad in the country in respect to electrification and the benefits accruing therefrom to the communities which it serves.

SMITH, BROWNS AND JONES.

There are more Smiths, Browns and Jones listed in the summer edition of the telephoned directory, delivery of which commenced June 25, than the total number of telephone subscribers in East Boston. The Smiths alone number over 1,000, the Browns 500 and the Joneses 350. Approximately as many Smiths have telephones as there are subscribers in Wellesly and more than there are in the city of Woburn.

People with these names would make a large exchange if grouped by themselves. It would be pretty nearly as large as Wakefield and nearly four times as large as Needham.

This indicates that the Smiths, Browns and Jones are really a prosperous lot and recognize the value of telephone service. But as there are over 3,000 Smiths in the Boston city directory the field for development in this one family alone is large.

About 212,000 copies of the summer edition have been printed each containing 424 pages, a total of nearly 100,000,000 pages for this one issue. The book contains 35,000 changes, including removals, additions and corrections, and has about 130,000 names of subscribers, about 9,000 more copies than the winter issue.

It took six days to deliver these books, according to the following schedule:

June 25, 1913. Central District Exchanges, Hull and Boston Hotels.

June 26, 1913. Revere, Winthrop, Weymouth Quincy, South Boston and Arlington.

June 27, 1913. Hingham, Cambridge, Roxbury, Brookline, Belmont, Braintree and Dedham.

June 28, 1913. Dorchester, Chelsea, Hyde Park, Malden, Melrose, Newton West, Somerville, Waltham, Charlestown, East Boston, Cohasset, Lexington and Needham.

June 30, 1913. Everett, Newton North, Brighton, Woburn and Norwood.

July 1, 1913. Medford, Newton South, Canton, Bellevue, Wakefield, Jamaica, Wellesley, Milton, Stoneham, Randolph, Reading, Lincoln and Winchester.

B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE.

Next week will be the third and positively last of the engagement of "The Meistersingers In The Wild Woods" at B. F. Keith's Theatre.

An entirely new programme will be offered on this occasion, with new songs and new soloists. Second only in importance to the last week of "The Meistersingers In The Wild Woods," will be the appearance of Donald Meek, the popular character actor of the Castle Square Stock Company, in a brand new comedy of country life written especially for him. Mr. Meek will be supported by an excellent company.

Other excellent features of a fine bill will be Ben Deely and company in "The New Bell Boy"; Maurice Golden, the yiddle with a hille, and Grace DeWinters, the kid ventriloquist, in a novel act; the Heumir Trio of wonderful cyclists; Carl McCullough, in "Footlight Impressions"; Cathryn Cauloner and company in "Kate's Press Agent," a new comedy; Carson and Brown, dancing experts; and The Balliots, wonderful experts on the Roman rings.

FINED FOR ASSULT UPON AN OFFICER.

Mrs. Carolyn I. Murray wife of Joseph Murray, who last week was arranged in Woburn court on the charge of shooting an adopted son of his wife's and held for the Grand Jury was Friday morning found guilty before Judge John G. Maguire on the charge of assault and battery on an officer and for attempting to rescue a prisoner. For the first offense she was fined $10 and for the second offense fined $25. At the request of counsel she was given time to consider an appeal.

No Restful Sleep for Seventeen Months!

Dangerous, distressing kidney and bladder trouble removed by Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy.

Mr. C. H. Smith, 320 Washington St., Providence, R. I., writes: "I thank you for the free sample bottle of Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy you sent me. Since taking this I have continued its use and have used three large bottles, with much relief. I had been troubled severely with constipation for years. My case was supposed to be chronic. Now my bowels are regular. I was also a great sufferer from kidney and bladder trouble and for seventeen months I had no rest at night, as it was necessary to get up so often, sometimes as often as twice an hour. I am pleased to say that now I do not have to get up more than twice during the night and sometimes only once. Your Favorite Remedy has proved a blessing to me. I feel better all over. The heavy 'loggy' feeling has left me, as well as the bloated eyes. I sincerely thank you, for if I had not first tried the sample bottle I would to-day probably be in the same old condition, with aches and pains and all tired out."

BASEBALL STRATEGY.

A Game That Was Won by Two Players and a Live Snake.

Tommy Tucker lost a game for Washington to Chicago once and started a battle all because of a trick Bill Dahlen and Bill Everett put up on him. Tom never did like snakes. Indeed, he held them in abhorrence, and in some way Dahlen discovered this. Washington was to play Chicago that afternoon, and during the morning practice on the west side grounds Dahlen and Everett discovered a small garter snake and treasured it up.

Along in the fourth inning Everett cracked out a hit, and as soon as he landed on first base Dahlen, ignoring his usual custom, ran out to coach, and a moment later he slipped the harmless little reptile to Everett, who dropped it into Tucker's hip pocket.

Tommy discovered the snake just as the pitcher was delivering the ball and, with a yelp, he deserted first base. The batter had hit to the shortstop, who gathered up the ball on the run and started to throw to second, but was too late and threw toward first. Tommy was twenty feet off the base, jumping up and down and hunting for something with which to kill that snake, and the ball went to the stands and Chicago scored four runs before the inning ended.

Tucker protested wildly, but the umpire couldn't find anything about snakes in the rule book and let it go at that.

GET IN THE SUNSHINE.

Then Profit by the Shadows in Which You Have Lingered.

If you are in a hurry don't get behind a lame man. "Hitch your chariot to a star." Beware of the sneerer and the scoffer. Seek the man who believes in things that are good and who is trying to make everything else better by deeds and words.

Come into the sunshine for a little while. It is a good world after all. You have had hard luck, ill health and hard blows, but open your ledger and see if the credit doesn't overbalance the debit side.

Be frank with yourself and see how much of the debts can be charged to your own fault—a lack of foresight, trusting the untrustworthy, overreaching selfishness, stupidity, extravagance, failure to learn by experience or refusal to profit by advice.

Take a few precious moments for self examination. Don't mourn because some one who started in life with fewer advantages than you had has done so much better. Think of those you have left behind in the race. Yours must be a hopeless case if you are last in line.

Happiness is from within, not from without. No greater happiness can be found than that which comes from the sweet content of right thinking, right living and a good conscience. Try it. See how warm and inviting its sunshine is.—John A. Stelcher in Leslie's.

Applied Legal Tactics.

A gray haired lawyer enjoyed a laugh at the expense of his friend, an uptown bank cashier, the other day.

The youngest member of the law firm, also known to the cashier, thinking possibly to make the latter the butt of a practical joke, had attempted without success to change a counterfeit fifty cent piece at the window.

Told of the incident an hour later the elderly lawyer reached into his pocket and drew out a number of coins.

"When you are weak on any one point," he said, as he selected $150 from the handful, "try burying it under as much other evidence as may be adjudged relevant—in short, let me have that bad half-confuse the question at issue. Here, Jimmie," calling an office boy, "take this change down to Mr. —, the cashier, and get a two dollar bill."

And the boy did.—New York Sun.

Wudna Suit the Kilt.

In the early days of the territorial army there was a boom in recruiting for it. In one part of the highlands almost every man in the district joined the local battalion of "kilties," and the men were signed on without medical examination. It being quite usual in some country districts to wait until the annual camp before medically examining recruits. On arrival in camp it was noticed that one man was wearing the trews at drill instead of the regulation kilt, and, being asked the reason, he explained that he had left his kilt at home. "Why on earth did you do that?" inquired his company officer. "Well, you see, sir," replied the recruit. "I'm afraid I wudna suit the kilt vera well, as I've got a wooden leg."—Glasgow News.

Synonymous.

It was Springer's afternoon off, and he thought he would take the children for a little outing.

"My dear," he said, approaching his wife, "suppose we take the children to the zoo today."

"Why, Will, you promised to take them to mother's."

"All right, if it's all the same to the children."—Lippincott's.

A Wonderful gun.

Since the introduction of gunpowder as a propellant and the general use of firearms in warfare and hunting there has been a more or less insistent demand for mechanisms that would give the soldier or hunter a number of shots at his command without reloading and enable them to be rapidly discharged. The first patent for a firearm of this description seems to have been issued by the British patent office in 1718 to James Puckle, a citizen of London, for a gun mounted upon a tripod, having a single barrel and a revolving cylinder. Strangely enough, one of the claims set forth in this patent appears almost verbatim 135 years later in a patent taken out by Rollin White, an American inventor of a revolving pistol. Another curious claim of the patent was: "The mechanism permits the use of square bullets against the Turk and round bullets against Christians. Moreover, so great is the velocity of fire that ships armed with the gun cannot be boarded by any attacking force."—S. J. Fort in Outing.

The Unicorn.

The unicorn was one of the fabled monsters of antiquity. It was, according to a summary of the opinions of several of the old time writers, a beast about the size of a common horse, but with very short legs. The people of the middle ages believed in the existence of three kinds of unicorns—the magnificent white unicorn, which had a purple face and blue eyes and a single horn a yard in length; the evil-serious, which resembled a gigantic deer and had a very sharp horn growing from the middle of the forehead, and the monocoeros, or common unicorn. The white unicorn's horn was of three different colors—white at the lower part, black as ebony in the middle and red at the point. Common unicorns were said to have had horns about eighteen inches in length, but so strong that they could easily kill an elephant.

The House of Romanoff. The house of Romanoff passed out of existence with the death of its last survivor, Empress Elisabeth, daughter of Peter the Great, who was succeeded as ruler of Russia by her nephew, Peter of Oldenburg, duke of Holstein-Gottorp, son of her younger sister, Grand Duchess Anna. It is from this czar, who reigned as Peter III., that the whole of the reigning house of Russia are descended, and they are, therefore, not Romanoffs, but Oldenburgs.

Paid Her a Compliment.

Dr. Johnson never had a reputation for paying compliments, but it is related that once when Mrs. Siddons, the great actress, called on him in Bolt court and the servant did not readily bring her a chair he said, "You see, madam, wherever you go there are not seats to be had!"

The Two Sides.

"There are two sides to every argument," said the ready made philosopher. "Yes," replied the gloomy person, "but it makes a difference which side you choose. There are two sides to a piece of fly paper."—Washington Star.

Nicely Fitting.

"It was a very appropriate birthday present our young friend, the lawyer, got, wasn't it?" "What was the present?" "A new suit."—Exchange.

Commonwealth of Massachusetts.
LAND COURT.

To the Winchester Cooperative Bank, a duly existing corporation having its usual place of business in Winchester, in the County of Middlesex, and said Commonwealth, Jennie F. Marble, George H. Hamilton, Christina T. Milne, George L. Milne and Everett L. Milne, of said Winchester, Henry B. Lawrence, of Waverley, in the County of Norfolk, and said Commonwealth, any heirs, devisees or legal representatives of Samuel Symmes, Jr., late of said Winchester, deceased, who have not released their interest in the land hereinafter described, and to all whom it may concern:

Whereas, a petition has been presented to said Court by Edith M. Johnson, of said Winchester, to register and confirm her title in the following described land:

A certain parcel of land with the buildings thereon, situate in said Winchester, bounded and described as follows: Beginning at a point on the westerly side of Highland Avenue distant eighty-one feet north from its intersection with the northerly line of Lincoln Street, formerly called Highland Street, at land now or formerly of Marble; thence running northerly by said Highland Avenue seventy-four and 5/10 feet to a stake at land now or formerly of Lawrence; thence turning and running westerly by said land now or formerly of Lawrence one hundred forty-one and 5/10 feet to a stake at land now or formerly of Milne; thence turning and running southerly seventy-four and 5/10 feet to a stake at said land of Marble; thence turning and running easterly by said land of Marble one hundred forty-one and 5/10 feet to the point of beginning, and containing 10.75 square feet.

The above described land is shown on a plan filed with said petition, and all boundary lines are claimed to be located on the ground as shown on said plan.

You are hereby cited to appear at the Land Court to be held at Boston in the County of Suffolk, on the Tuesday next, to-wit: July 4, 1913, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause if any you have, why the prayer of said petition should not be granted. And unless you appear at said Court at the time and place aforesaid your default will be recorded, and the said petition will be taken as confessed, and you will be forever barred from contesting said petition or any decree entered thereon.

Witness, CHARLES THOMAS DAVIS, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this twenty-third day of June, in the year nineteen hundred and thirteen.

PRECIOUS MUGS.

The Crucibles Used in the New York Assay Office.

In the government assay office on Wall Street, New York, there is a corner that looks very much like a mug rack in a country barber shop, where every customer has his individual mug highly decorated in gilt letters.

On this rack are perhaps fifty crucibles for melting down gold. The crucibles are decorated with crude initials and numerals and are the property of the biggest gold mining corporations in North and South America.

The reason for the individual mugs is that the clay of crucibles takes up a considerable quantity of gold in the process of smelting which otherwise would be lost to the customer bringing the gold to the government to be refined. After two or three smeltings the clay is saturated and takes up no more gold. When it is finally succeeded by a new crucible it is returned to the customer to be broken up for its hidden gold.

Mugs that are used for melting down random lots of gold are carefully preserved by the government refiners and sold. Uncle Sam pockets the proceeds, as in these random lots there is no way of computing to what amount each of perhaps twenty customers may be entitled. It is only the smelting concern that sells the government enough gold at one time to monopolize a single melting that obtains the right to a mug on the rack. — New York Tribune.

Ice Cream and a Nerve.

Why do we sometimes get an ache in the nose when eating ice cream? There is a nerve running along the back of the nose which doctors call the anterior palatine nerve. This has a branch running along the base of the nasal cavity and another branch running along the palate. The ends of these branches join through their branches which run through openings in the palate near the front teeth. When we get some ice cream in the mouth and keep it in front for a moment so that the irritation produced by the cold reaches the fine connecting branches the sensation may be carried to the branch in the nose. Irritation of this branch produces the sensation of pain. We get the same sensation when breathing very cold air. — New York American.

Mercy and Words.

George Meredith according to the London Chronicle "employs that abominable contrivance of a night. It can't be a printer's error, for it occurs more than once. And he uses it as early as 1823, so that the abusers of our language may now claim Meredith of all men as their prophet. This is one of those things that baffle explanation particularly from a writer whose use of words was meticulous and who always refused to delete the first 'e' in 'judgment' always spelling it 'judgement' in his novels. Some of us, however, will fight 'alright' to the bitter end."

SERVIA AS A NATION.

It Originated in the First Half of the Seventh Century.

The birth of Servia as a nation, settled in or near its present home, may be dated in the first half of the seventh century. About 600 A. D. when the Avaric empire of desolation was established on the Danube, two tribes, the Croats and the Serbs, retiring before the ravages of the Tartar horsemen, settled in the countries now known as Croatia, Bosnia and Servia.

They were Slavs, but the Croats perhaps had, like the Slavs of Moesia in after years, adopted the name of a Tartar tribe. Both, fleeing from the Avars, were naturally hostile to them, and it is possible that they settled in the empire with the consent or even at the invitation of the Emperor Heraclius I. At any rate, they appear to have been considered as vassals of the empire. Their first settlements lay rather westward of the country now called Servia, the Drave, the present western boundary, being the dividing line between Bulgar and Serb in the eighth century. Here the Serbs dwelt more or less uneventfully for three centuries. They generally formed a loose confederacy under chiefs called zupans. They were commonly, in a loose fashion, loyal to the eastern empire mainly through fear of their dangerous neighbors, the Bulgarians. About 840 they united under a chief named Vlastimir to repel the latter.

The country rose to great heights under Stephen Dushan, the czar of the Serbs, but after his death Murad I conquered the country, and it was not until 1815 that the Serbs partially threw off the Turkish yoke. — Exchange.

Hopelessly Tangled.

Professor Thinkout was about to be married and had just received an invitation to his own wedding, which he had absentmindedly mailed to him self.

"Well, well," he mused, "what does this mean? My fiancée's name on a wedding invitation! The faithless husky! And great Logarithms! There's my name on it too. Either she's untrue or I'm about to be a bigamist." — Exchange.

Testing His Love.

"Has he ever tried to tell how much he loves you?" "Frequently, but I am going to get some inside information this afternoon."

"How?" "I am going to take my engagement ring to the jeweler." — Houston Post.

Probing the Jury.

Judge (to jury)—Have you agreed upon a verdict? Is the prisoner guilty or not guilty of theft, as charged in the indictment? Foreman—We have not yet reached a verdict, your honor. I missed my pocketbook in the night, and I would respectfully ask that each juror be searched.

MOSES, THE GOODLY CHILD.
Exodus 1:22-2:10.—July 6.

"Whom receiveth one such little child in My name, receiveth Me." Matthew 18:6.

JOSEPH was the Grand Vizier of Egypt for eighty years—dying at the age of one hundred and ten years. Surely the Israelites suffered no oppression during that time. Shortly thereafter, however, another Pharaoh came into power who "knew not Joseph"—who ignored his services to Egypt and the tentative covenant with the Israelites. This Pharaoh is supposed to have been Rameses II., a hard-hearted, selfish despot.

This Pharaoh perceived that the Israelites were multiplying much more rapidly than were the Egyptians. Therefore he considered them a menace. At first they had been viewed as a protection, because Goshen lay eastward, and an invading army would encounter the Israelites first. Egypt's only antagonist in those days was Assyria. When the Israelites would outnumber the Egyptians, an invading army might bribe them, and thus the rule of the Pharaohs be overturned.

To meet this contingency, various expedients were tried. First, an edict compelled the Israelites to perform arduous labors, which it was hoped would undermine their strength. On the contrary, they seemed to flourish increasingly with every burden. The next repressive measure was the edict that every male child of the Israelites should be strangled at birth. But this command was disregarded, the midwives claiming that they arrived too late. The final resort was the royal edict that the Israelites must drown every new-born male infant. Failure to do this was made a punishable crime.

It was under these conditions that Moses was born. The account indicates that both his parents were pious, and hence we are not surprised that the babe "was a goodly child"—beautiful. Comparatively few parents realize that where children are otherwise than "goodly"—graceful in feature and character—a responsibility for the defects rests upon them. We do not mean that any human pair could bring forth absolutely perfect children. "Who can bring a clean thing out of an unclean?"—Job 14:4.

What we mean is that as careful breeding affects the form, features and character of the lower animals, so also it is patent in respect to humanity. Parents have in their own control the most wonderful power whereby to influence the character and form of their children before birth, and not to be ignored after birth—the power of the mind. Were this law of nature clearly recognized by intelligent, conscientious people, what a change would speedily be effected!

Co-operating With God's Providences.

Doubtless Moses' parents thought how to advance the plan which proved so successful in saving his life. They knew that the Egyptian princess resorted to a certain secluded spot on the Nile for her bath, presumed to have been part of a religious ceremony. A little basket was woven of bulrushes, and made watertight with pitch. The babe was placed therein, and at a proper time was left near the spot visited by the princess. Moses' little sister Miriam stood near, ready to suggest the bringing of a nurse. It is quite possible that the princess perceived the ruse, and merely co-operated, believing that the child might as well have the mother's care.

Aided and Protected.

How much there is of wonderful romance in this story! Think of the lendings of Divine providence in this case! One day the child Moses is a danger in his parents' home. At any moment his presence might be discovered, and he would be killed. Possibly his parents would also be put to death for disobeying the royal edict. The next day, through Divine providence, the child is back in the same home, and his mother paid by the princess for caring for him.

It is assumed that the child was weaned at the age of four years. Then he was claimed by the princess as her own. He was given the name Moses, of which Professor Sayce says: "The Greek form of the Hebrew Mosheh—Moses—is derived by Josephus from the Coptic (ancient Egyptian) Mo (water) and uses (saved out of it). In other words, the princess made a pun of the name, as though she had said: 'This is my son, because I brought him forth—out of the water.'"

The Princess Finds No-Idence.

Truly, we never know when Divine Wisdom is working human woof into the Divine web, or plan. God's people are ever to remember that He is "working all things according to the counsel of His own will." While using human instrumentalities, God nevertheless respects the human will, and merely co-operates with it. And who ever most zealously co-operates with God receives proportionately the larger share of the Divine blessing. This simple lesson, received into good and honest hearts, gives us greater faith in God.

We show herewith cut of "KITCHEN HEATER," which can be attached to any style or make of gas range.

Its purpose is to heat the kitchen and heat the water for domestic purposes at such times as it is desirable to maintain some coal fire for heating purposes.

Many of our consumers are installing this heater, saying that it overcomes all other objections to using a gas range exclusively.

Ask for our representative to call and explain the many good points of this heater which space forbids us to tell here.

BY-LAWS TOWN OF WINCHESTER

Adopted at Town Meeting March 3, 1913

ARTICLE I.

TOWN MEETINGS.

SECT. 1. The annual town meeting shall be held on the first Monday of March.

SECT. 2. Service of the warrant for every town meeting, unless a different time or method is prescribed by law, shall be made by leaving a copy thereof at every dwelling house in town, four days at least before the time named in the warrant for holding said meeting.

SECT. 3. Notice of every adjourned meeting shall be posted by the Town Clerk at the Town Hall, and, if the period of adjournment will permit, shall be advertised in a newspaper, if any, published in Winchester, as soon as practicable after the adjournment, stating briefly the business to come before the adjourned meeting.

PROCEDURE AT TOWN MEETINGS.

SECT. 4. The proceedings of town meetings shall be governed by the rules of practice contained in Cushing's Manual of Parliamentary Practice, except as modified by law or by the seven following sections.

SECT. 5. No vote shall be reconsidered except by a two-thirds vote. If, when the previous question is moved, the meeting shall decide that it shall not be ordered, the debate shall continue as if the previous question had not been moved.

SECT. 6. Upon a motion to lay on the table, or for the previous question, not more than ten minutes shall be allowed for debate, and no person shall speak thereon more than three minutes.

SECT. 7. A motion shall, if required by the Moderator, be reduced to writing before being submitted to the meeting.

SECT. 8. If a motion is susceptible of division, it shall be divided and the question put separately upon each part thereof, if ten voters so request.

SECT. 9. When a question is before the meeting, the following motions, to wit:

- to adjourn,
- to lay on the table,
- for the previous question,
- to postpone to a time certain,
- to commit (or recommit) or refer,
- to amend,
- to postpone indefinitely,

shall have precedence in the order in which they are placed in this section.

SECT. 10. On proposed amendments involving sums of money, the larger or largest amount shall be put to the question first, and an affirmative vote thereon shall be a negative vote on any smaller amount.

SECT. 11. No person shall speak more than five minutes at one time without a vote of permission by the meeting.

ARTICLE II.

TOWN FINANCES.

SECT. 1. No money, except State and County taxes, and principal and interest of town notes or bonds shall be paid from the town treasury except upon a warrant therefor, signed by a majority of the Selectmen.

SECT. 2. A finance committee consisting of fifteen voters, but none of whom shall be town officers, shall be appointed at each annual town meeting by the moderator of the meeting and the chairman and secretary of the finance committee for the preceding year, and shall serve until the dissolution of the next annual town meeting. Said committee shall consider all business proposed to be acted upon at all town meetings held during the year for which they shall have been appointed, except such matters as may be referred to other committees and shall report at all such meetings, their report on the business proposed to be acted upon at the annual town meeting to be in print, and to be distributed with the town warrant. Said committee shall have power to fill vacancies occurring during the year, and shall have power to expend such sums as may be appropriated therefor.

ARTICLE III.

STREETS, ETC.

SECT. 1. The streets in the town shall be called and known by the names given to them respectively until such names shall have been changed by vote of the town.

SECT. 2. No person shall break or dig up, or aid in breaking or digging up, any part of any street, or remove any earth or gravel therefrom, without having first obtained a written license from the Selectmen for that purpose, and no person traveling on a public way shall break or injure the surface thereof by the use of brakes, chains, or other mechanism so applied to the wheels of any vehicle under his control as to cause said wheels to slide, slip or coast on said way.

SECT. 3. No person shall obstruct any street by placing therein any house or other building, without the license of the Selectmen in writing specifying the terms and conditions upon which such obstruction of the street shall be allowed; and the licensee shall fully comply with all said terms and conditions.

SECT. 4. No person shall tie or fasten any horse or other animal to any tree, not his own, standing in any highway, street or public place in this town, or in any manner cut or mutilate such tree. No person shall maliciously or negligently injure, or allow any animal or vehicle of any kind under his care to injure the grass borders or other ornamental borders upon the public streets, plots or parks of the town.

SECT. 5. No owner or person having the care of any sheep, swine, horses, oxen, cows or other grazing animals shall permit or suffer them to go at large or to graze on any street, lane, common, square, or other public place within this town, nor permit any such animal to go or stand upon any sidewalk therein, nor allow them to be baited or fed, standing or resting in said streets or public places within one quarter of a mile of the Town Square, or suffer said animals to be fed in any other streets or ways within the town limits in such a manner as to impede public travel or to litter said streets or ways.

SECT. 6. No person shall place or cause to be placed in any public street or way of this town the contents of any sink, cesspool or privy, nor place or cause to be placed any rubbish or garbage therein, except for the purpose of immediate removal therefrom.

SECT. 7. No person, unless required by law, so to do, shall make any marks, letters or figure of any kind, or place any sign, advertisement or placard upon or against any wall, fence, post, ledge, stone, tree, building or structure in or upon any street in this town, without the permission of the owner thereof.

SECT. 8. No person shall coast in any of the streets or public walks of this town except such streets as are publicly designated for that purpose by the Selectmen.

SECT. 9. No person shall swim or bathe in any of the waters within the town so as to be exposed to the view of persons in any street, lane, alley or house within the town.

SECT. 10. No person shall own or keep in this town, any dog which by biting, barking, howling, or in any other manner, disturbs the peace or quiet of any neighborhood, or endangers the safety of any person. Whoever violates the provisions of this section shall be liable to a penalty of ten dollars.

SECT. 11. No person shall deposit advertising circulars or other matter on the streets nor team manure, hay, rubbish, liquid or other material in such a manner as to litter, pollute or injure said streets.

SIDEWALKS.

SECT. 12. No person shall drive or draw any cart, wagon, sled or other vehicle (except invalids' or children's hand carriages) over or upon any public footpath or sidewalk in the town.

SECT. 13. No person shall stand on any sidewalk in such manner as to obstruct a free passage for foot passengers after a request to move is made by a constable or police officer.

SECT. 14. No person shall behave in a rude or disorderly manner, or use any indecent, profane or insulting language in any public place, or near any dwelling house, or other building in the town, or be or remain upon any sidewalk, or upon any door step, or other projection from any house or other building, so as to annoy or disturb any person or obstruct any passage to such house or building, and every person so being or remaining as aforesaid, when ordered by any constable or police officer, or by the owner or occupant of any such building, shall immediately and peaceably depart and stay therefrom.

SECT. 15. No person shall place any obstruction in a street or on a sidewalk, and allow it to remain there, without first obtaining the consent in writing of the Board of Selectmen.

SECT. 16. Whoever, being the owner, tenant, occupant or agent in charge of an estate abutting upon a sidewalk upon a public street, within a radius of one quarter of a mile of the railroad crossing in the centre of the town, said estate being used wholly or in part for stores, public offices or places of public resort, shall place any snow or ice on a sidewalk on which such store, office or place of public resort abuts, or suffers it to remain thereon for more than five hours between sunrise and sunset, shall forfeit not more than ten dollars for each offence. If snow or ice through weather conditions, is evenly spread over a sidewalk and frozen thereto so as to be difficult of removal, it may remain until it can be more easily removed, if the sidewalk be kept in safe condition by sanding or otherwise.

SECT. 17. No person shall collect, deal in, or keep a shop for the purchase, sale or barter of junk, old metals or second hand articles within the limits of the town, unless licensed by the Board of Selectmen.

SECT. 18. No person shall throw any snowball, stone or other substance, in any public or private way; nor shall any person so engage in any amusement, game or exercise, in any public or private way as to interfere with the free, safe and convenient use thereof.

SECT. 19. No person, except the duly authorized agents and employees of the Selectmen, shall carry in or through any of the streets, squares, courts, lanes, avenues, places or alleys within the town of Winchester, any house-dirt, ashes or house-offal, either animal or vegetable, or any grease or bones, or any refuse substances from any of the dwelling houses or other places in the town, unless a person so carrying the same, and the mode in which it may be carried, shall have been licensed by the Board of Health upon such terms and conditions as they may deem the health and interest of the town require.

SECT. 20. No person shall, without the license of the Board of Health, throw into, or leave in, or upon, any street, court, square, lane, alley, public square, public enclosure, pond or body of water or vacant lot within the limits of the town, where it would be offensive or injurious to health, any dead animal, dirt, sawdust, soot, ashes, cinders, shavings, hair, shreds, manure, oyster, clam or lobster shells, waste water, rubbish or filth of any kind, or any refuse animal or vegetable matter whatsoever.

SECT. 21. No person shall, except as authorized or required by law, fire or discharge any gun, fowling-piece or other firearms or an air-rifle on or within two hundred feet of any street in the town of Winchester, nor on any public grounds therein, nor on any private grounds beyond said two hundred feet limit unless with the consent of the owner thereof; but the provisions of this section shall not apply to the use of such weapons at any military exercise or in the lawful defence of the person, family or property of any citizen.

SECT. 22. Whoever violates the provisions of any section of this article, except sections ten, sixteen and seventeen shall be punished by a fine not exceeding twenty dollars for each offence.

ARTICLE IV.

HACKNEY CARRIAGES.

SECT. 1. The Board of Selectmen shall, from time to time, grant licenses to such persons and upon such terms, as they may deem expedient, to set up, use or drive hackney carriages for the conveyance of persons for hire from place to place within the town, and they may revoke such licenses at their discretion, and a record of all licenses so granted or revoked shall be kept by the Selectmen.

SECT. 2. The Board of Selectmen shall give notice by publication in some newspaper, or otherwise, that, on or before a given date, all persons who desire to set up, use or drive a hackney carriage or carriages must apply for a license therefor.

SECT. 3. No person after said given date shall set up, use or drive in the town any hackney carriage for the conveyance of persons for hire from place to place within the town, without a license for such carriage from the Board of Selectmen, under a penalty not exceeding twenty dollars every time such carriage is used. Such license shall expire on the first day of May next after the date thereof, and no license shall be sold, assigned or transferred without the consent of said Board endorsed thereon.

SECT. 4. For every license so granted, the sum of one dollar shall be paid to the Town Treasurer for the use of the town, but no license so granted shall operate to relieve the licensee from any penalty herein prescribed against persons without a license if he neglects or refuses to take out and pay for his license within ten days after notice that it has been granted.

ARTICLE V.

HAWKERS AND PEDDLERS.

SECT. 1. No person shall hawk or peddle any of the articles enumerated in section fifteen of chapter sixty-five of the Revised Laws and all amendments thereof until he has recorded his name and residence with the Chief of Police and has been assigned a number by him, nor unless any vehicle or receptacle in which he may carry or convey such articles shall have painted on the outside thereof in letters and figures at least two inches in height the name of the person selling and the number given him by the Chief of Police and be approved on the first Monday in every month by the Chief of Police.

SECT. 2. No person hawking, peddling or selling, or exposing for sale, any article enumerated in section fifteen of chapter sixty-five of the Revised Laws, and acts in amendment thereof, shall cry his wares to the disturbance of the peace or comfort of the inhabitants of the town.

SECT. 3. The Board of Selectmen may from time to time grant licenses to suitable persons to be hawkers and peddlers of fruit and vegetables within the town.

SECT. 4. Every license so granted shall expire on the first day of May next following the date thereof, but no such license shall be effective until the licensee shall have paid to the Town Treasurer a fee of ten dollars to the use of the town.

SECT. 5. Any hawker or peddler of fruit or vegetables who conducts his business within the town, and is not licensed as provided in section four of this article, and any person who violates any of the provisions of the foregoing sections of this article shall be punished by a fine of not more than twenty dollars for each offence.

ARTICLE VI.

REGULATIONS AND RATES OF THE WATER WORKS.

SECT. 1. There shall be a Water and Sewer Board consisting of three legal voters, one of whom shall annually be elected by ballot at the annual town meeting for a term of three years, and who, before entering upon the performance of his duties, shall be sworn to the faithful performance thereof. No member shall receive any salary or other compensation for his services.

SECT. 2. Said Board shall have and exercise all the powers vested in the town, by chapter two hundred and sixty-five of the Acts of the year eighteen hundred and seventy-two and by any Acts in addition thereto, so far as the same may be legally delegated; and may appoint a Water Registrar and other necessary subordinate officers, agents and assistants, and fix their salaries or compensation.

SECT. 3. Said Board shall, annually, on or before the first day of January, present to the Selectmen a report, made up to and including the last day of December, containing a statement of the condition of the water works and of the lands and other property connected therewith, and any information or suggestions which they may deem important; and shall, at the same time, transmit to the Selectmen the report of the Water Registrar, mentioned in the following section.

SECT. 4. The Water Registrar, under the direction of said Board, shall assess the water rates hereinafter established; he shall once in each year personally visit, or cause to be visited, the premises of every water taker, examine the service pipes and fixtures, and see that the rules and regulations are strictly observed. He shall, annually, on or before the first day of January, present to said Board a report containing a statement of the number of water-takers, the amount of water rates assessed and the amount of abatements, and perform all other duties required of him by said Board. He shall transmit the bills for water rates to the Collector, who shall collect them and pay the proceeds over to the Town Treasurer weekly.

SECT. 5. Water rates shall be payable to the Collector on the first day of January and July in each year. All charges for specific supplies, unless determined by meter, shall be payable before the water is turned on.

SECT. 6. Upon the non-payment of the water rates for sixty days after they are payable, the Collector shall serve a summons upon the delinquent; and, unless said rates are paid within ten days thereafter, together with twenty cents for said summons, the Collector shall notify the Registrar, who shall shut off the water, and it then shall not be turned on until the amount due, together with the twenty cents for the summons and fifty cents for the shutting off and fifty cents for the turning on, is paid. The foregoing provisions shall apply if two or more parties take water from the same service pipes, although one or more of them may have paid the proportion due from him or them. Said summons may be served in any of the ways provided by law for the service of a summons for the non-payment of a tax.

SECT. 7. The Water and Sewer Board may make abatements in the water rates in such cases as they may deem proper; and may shut off the water from any street after notice of their intention so to do.

SECT. 8. Said Board shall keep suitable books in which shall be entered the names of all water-takers, the kind of building to which water is supplied, the name of the street on which it is situated and its number thereon, the nature of the use, the number of taps, and the amount charged; which books shall be open to inspection.

SECT. 9. Said Board shall lay all service pipes from the main in the street to the inside of the building which is to be supplied in such location and manner, and using pipe of such quality and size as the owner may desire and said Board deems proper, the cost thereof to be charged to the owner, but the service water pipe from the service box to the inside of the house may be furnished and installed by any competent person whose work shall be satisfactory to said Board or its inspector. An estimate of the cost shall be made and the amount shall be deposited with the Town Treasurer before the work is begun.

SECT. 10. If any person shall open a hydrant, or lift or remove the cover thereof, or make any opening or connection with any pipe or reservoir, or turn on or turn off the water from any pipe, fountain, reservoir or hydrant, except in case of fire, or by authority of the Water and Sewer Board or Registrar, he shall be liable to a penalty of not more than twenty dollars.

SECT. 11. Clause 1. All persons who take water shall keep the meters within their buildings protected from frost, at their own expense, and will be held responsible for all damage which may result from their failure so to do.

Clause 2. They shall prevent all unnecessary waste of water, and shall not conceal the purposes for which it is used.

Clause 3. No alteration shall be made in any of the pipes or fixtures inserted by the town, except by persons authorized by the Water and Sewer Board or Registrar, who are to be allowed to enter the premises supplied, examine the fixtures, and ascertain if there is any unnecessary waste.

Clause 4. No water shall be supplied to parties who are not entitled to its use, unless by written permit of the Water and Sewer Board.

Clause 5. A charge of fifty cents shall be made whenever the Water and Sewer Board, at the request of a water-taker, turns on or shuts off the water in any service.

A copy of this section shall be printed on all bills for water rates.

SECT. 12. Upon a violation of any of the provisions of section eleven, the water shall be immediately shut off from the building or place where such violation occurred, although two or more parties may take the water through the same pipe, and shall not be turned on again except by order of the Water and Sewer Board, and upon the payment of one dollar; and in case of such violation, said Board may declare any payment made for the water by the person guilty of such violation to be forfeited.

SECT. 13. The owners of premises shall be charged on the first days of January and July for the use of water for the succeeding six months when the rate is by fixture, and for the preceding six months when a meter is used, at the following rates per annum:

WATER RATES.

DWELLING HOUSES.
Dwelling houses occupied by one family, for first faucet.	$4.00
For each additional faucet, to be used for same family.	1.00
When a house is occupied by more than one family, one faucet only being used by all, for each family.	4.00
When a house is occupied by more than one family, the highest rates will be charged for each family having the water carried into its part of the house.
For each bath tub.	2.50
For each water closet.	2.50
When bath tubs or water closets are used by more than one family, for each family.	2.50
When two faucets are used, one for hot and one for cold water, both emptying into one basin, but one charge will be made for both.
HOSES.
For hose not over three-eighths of an inch orifice, used for washing windows, sprinkling streets, or watering gardens (the use of which may be limited to one hour per day, not less than)	3.00
FOUNTAINS.
For not more than three hours in any one day, and for not more than four months in the year:
1-16 of an inch jet	3.00
1-8 of an inch jet	5.00
1-4 of an inch jet	8.00
3-8 of an inch jet	10.00
STABLES.
All stables containing fixtures shall be on meter service. If there are no fixtures in the stable, the following charges shall be made:
For each horse	2.00
For each cow	1.50

METER CHARGES.

All charges for boarding houses, public baths, stores, offices, warehouses, markets, saloons, restaurants, workshops, manufactories, and for boilers used for power or to make steam for manufacturing purposes, shall be ascertained by meter.

The charge for metered water shall be at the rate of two cents per hundred gallons.

The Water and Sewer Board may require a deposit in case of meter service.

The Water and Sewer Board shall have the right to stop the use of large quantities of water for special purposes whenever, in its judgment, it is necessary to conserve the water for domestic uses.

BUILDING PURPOSES.

Special rates to be made by the Water and Sewer Board.

SECT. 14. The Water and Sewer Board may set a meter in any place they shall deem it for the interest of the town so to do. Any water-taker may demand to have a meter set on written application, and the payment of a deposit to cover the estimated cost of the meter and its installation.

SECT. 15. No charge shall be made for water used through fixtures which are installed solely for protection against fire.

SECT. 16. The Water and Sewer Board may charge the Fire Department the sum of fifteen dollars annually for each and every hydrant established within the limits of the town; and for water supplied to fountains, and for other public purposes, they may charge the department of the town for which the water is used the same rates as individuals or corporations would be charged for like purposes.

SECT. 17. The Water and Sewer Board may grant an application for an extension of the water pipes on an unoccupied way, if, in their judgment, the increase in the value of the land abutting on or reached from such way, due to the extension of the water service, will be sufficient to yield an increase in taxes, exclusive of water rates, equal to six per cent, at least on the cost of such extension.

ARTICLE VII.

REGULATIONS FOR THE INSPECTION AND CONSTRUCTION OF BUILDINGS.

INSPECTOR OF BUILDINGS.

SECT. 1. The Board of Selectmen shall annually, in April, appoint an Inspector of Buildings for the term of one year from the first day of May following or until a successor is appointed and has qualified in his stead. His compensation shall be determined by the Board of Selectmen. He shall be familiar with building construction and shall not be interested in any contract for building for the town, or for furnishing materials to the town. The Board of Selectmen shall have power to discharge the Inspector for failure to perform his duties, and to fill any vacancy in his office.

SECT. 2. The Inspector shall keep a record of the business of his office, ascertain all facts and make all returns which shall be required by law. He shall report to the State Board of District Police any violation of the laws of the Commonwealth in relation to the construction of buildings that may come to his notice. He shall, if necessary, enter upon the premises wherein any fire has occurred, in order to investigate the origin of the fire.

BUILDING PERMITS.

SECT. 3. Every person before erecting or altering any building, shall obtain from the Inspector a building permit, first filing therefor an application, in which he shall give a description of the intended building or alteration, shall submit plans and specifications for the same, and state the purpose for which the same is to be used and the dimensions and location of the site.

SECT. 4. The Inspector shall examine all buildings under applications for permits for alterations and make a record of his examination. He shall issue permits for the erection or alteration of buildings in all cases where the proposed new building or altered building will conform to the requirements of this article and to the laws of the Commonwealth, and in such cases only; but permits for his own work or any building in which he is interested, shall be issued only by some disinterested person appointed by the Selectmen for that purpose. No permit shall be valid for a longer time than one year.

SECT. 5. A copy of the plans and specifications of every public building shall be deposited and left on file in the office of the Inspector.

INSPECTION OF BUILDINGS.

SECT. 6. The Inspector shall examine all buildings in course of erection, alteration or repair, as often as practicable, and for that purpose shall have the right of entry thereto, and shall make a record of all violations of this article, with the location of the building where such violations are found, the name of the owner, lessee, occupants, architect and master mechanic, and all other matters relative thereto.

SECT. 7. The Inspector shall examine all buildings reported dangerous, or damaged by accident or fire, and make a record of such examination, including the nature and amount of such damage, with the location of the building, the name of the owner and lessee, and for what purpose occupied, and report the facts to the Board of Selectmen, and, for that purpose, shall have the right of entry thereto.

BOARD OF APPEAL.

SECT. 8. The Board of Selectmen shall annually appoint a committee of three voters of Winchester for the term of one year, or until their successors are appointed and qualified, to be called the Board of Appeal. In case of doubt as to the true meaning, intent or application of any section of this article either the Inspector or any one aggrieved by the ruling of the Inspector thereon, may by petition bring the matter before said Board for determination. The Board shall thereupon give a hearing on such petition and determine the true intent, meaning and application of any section of this article. A decision of a majority of said Board shall be binding on all parties affected thereby.

DEFINITIONS.

SECT. 9. In this article, unless the context or subject matter otherwise requires: — "Cellar" means a basement or lower story, of which one-half or more of the height from the floor to the ceiling is below the level of the street, if adjoining, or if not on a street, below the average grade of the ground outside the wall. "Foundation wall" means that portion of any external wall below the level of the street curb, or if not on a street, below the grade of the ground outside the wall, and that portion of any partition or division wall below the basement floor. "Division wall" means every wall built in order to be used as a separation of two or more buildings. "Partition wall" means every interior wall of masonry in a building. "External wall" means every outer wall or vertical inclosure, except a division wall, of any building. "Height" of a building means the distance from the top of the outside foundation wall, to the highest part of the roof. "Tenement" or "apartment house" means any building for three or more families, or for two or more families where the building is used in part for mercantile or manufacturing purposes. "Inspector" means the Inspector of Buildings appointed under Section 1 of this article.

BY-LAWS TOWN OF WINCHESTER

Adopted at Town Meeting March 3, 1913

ARTICLE I.

TOWN MEETINGS.

SECT. 1. The annual town meeting shall be held on the first Monday of March.

SECT. 2. Service of the warrant for every town meeting, unless a different time or method is prescribed by law, shall be made by leaving a copy thereof at every dwelling house in town, four days at least before the time named in the warrant for holding said meeting.

SECT. 3. Notice of every adjourned meeting shall be posted by the Town Clerk at the Town Hall, and, if the period of adjournment will permit, shall be advertised in a newspaper, if any, published in Winchester, as soon as practicable after the adjournment, stating briefly the business to come before the adjourned meeting.

PROCEDURE AT TOWN MEETINGS.

SECT. 4. The proceedings of town meetings shall be governed by the rules of practice contained in Cushing's Manual of Parliamentary Practice, except as modified by law or by the seven following sections.

SECT. 5. No vote shall be reconsidered except by a two-thirds vote. If, when the previous question is moved, the meeting shall decide that it shall not be ordered, the debate shall continue as if the previous question had not been moved.

SECT. 6. Upon a motion to lay on the table, or for the previous question, not more than ten minutes shall be allowed for debate, and no person shall speak thereon more than three minutes.

SECT. 7. A motion shall, if required by the Moderator, be reduced to writing before being submitted to the meeting.

SECT. 8. If a motion is susceptible of division, it shall be divided and the question put separately upon each part thereof, if ten voters so request.

SECT. 9. When a question is before the meeting, the following motions, to wit:

to adjourn,
to lay on the table,
for the previous question,
to postpone to a time certain,
to commit (or recommit) or refer,
to amend,
to postpone indefinitely,
shall have precedence in the order in which they are placed in this section.

SECT. 10. On proposed amendments involving sums of money, the larger or largest amount shall be put to the question first, and an affirmative vote thereon shall be a negative vote on any smaller amount.

SECT. 11. No person shall speak more than five minutes at one time without a vote of permission by the meeting.

ARTICLE II.

TOWN FINANCES.

SECT. 1. No money, except State and County taxes, and principal and interest of town notes or bonds shall be paid from the town treasury except upon a warrant therefor, signed by a majority of the Selectmen.

SECT. 2. A finance committee consisting of fifteen voters, but none of whom shall be town officers, shall be appointed at each annual town meeting by the moderator of the meeting and the chairman and secretary of the finance committee for the preceding year, and shall serve until the dissolution of the next annual town meeting. Said committee shall consider all business proposed to be acted upon at all town meetings held during the year for which they shall have been appointed, except such matters as may be referred to other committees and shall report at all such meetings, their report on the business proposed to be acted upon at the annual town meeting to be in print, and to be distributed with the town warrant. Said committee shall have power to fill vacancies occurring during the year, and shall have power to expend such sum as may be appropriated therefor.

ARTICLE III.

STREETS, ETC.

SECT. 1. The streets in the town shall be called and known by the names given to them respectively until such names shall have been changed by vote of the town.

SECT. 2. No person shall break or dig up, or aid in breaking or digging up, any part of any street, or remove any earth or gravel therefrom, without having first obtained a written license from the Selectmen for that purpose; and no person traveling on a public way shall break or injure the surface thereof by the use of brakes, chains, or other mechanism so applied to the wheels of any vehicle under his control as to cause said wheels to slide, slip or coast on said way.

SECT. 3. No person shall obstruct any street by placing therein any house or other building, without the license of the Selectmen in writing specifying the terms and conditions upon which such obstruction of the street shall be allowed; and the licensee shall fully comply with all said terms and conditions.

SECT. 4. No person shall tie or fasten any horse or other animal to any tree, not his own, standing in any highway, street or public place in this town, or in any manner cut or mutilate such tree. No person shall maliciously or negligently injure, or allow any animal or vehicle of any kind under his care to injure the grass borders or other ornamental borders upon the public streets, plots or parks of the town.

SECT. 5. No owner or person having the care of any sheep, swine, horses, oxen, cows or other grazing animals shall permit or suffer them to go at large or to graze on any street, lane, common, square, or other public place within this town, nor permit any such animal to go or stand upon any sidewalk therein, nor allow them to be baited or fed, standing or resting in said streets or public places within one quarter of a mile of the Town Square, or suffer said animals to be fed in any other streets or ways within the town limits in such a manner as to impede public travel or to litter said streets or ways.

SECT. 6. No person shall place or cause to be placed in any public street or way of this town the contents of any sink, cesspool or privy, nor place or cause to be placed any rubbish or garbage therein, except for the purpose of immediate removal therefrom.

SECT. 7. No person, unless required by law, so to do, shall make any marks, letters or figure of any kind, or place any sign, advertisement or placard upon or against any wall, fence, post, ledge, stone, tree, building or structure in or upon any street in this town, without the permission of the owner thereof.

SECT. 8. No person shall coast in any of the streets or public walks of this town except such streets as are publicly designated for that purpose by the Selectmen.

SECT. 9. No person shall swim or bathe in any of the waters within the town so as to be exposed to the view of persons in any street, lane, alley or house within the town.

SECT. 10. No person shall own or keep in this town, any dog which by biting, barking, howling, or in any other manner, disturbs the peace or quiet of any neighborhood, or endangers the safety of any person. Whoever violates the provisions of this section shall be liable to a penalty of ten dollars.

SECT. 11. No person shall deposit advertising circulars or other matter on the streets nor team manure, hay, rubbish, liquid or other material in such a manner as to litter, pollute or injure said streets.

SIDEWALKS.

SECT. 12. No person shall drive or draw any cart, wagon, sled or other vehicle (except invalids' or children's hand carriages) over or upon any public footpath or sidewalk in the town.

SECT. 13. No person shall stand on any sidewalk in such manner as to obstruct a free passage for foot passengers after a request to move is made by a constable or police officer.

SECT. 14. No person shall behave in a rude or disorderly manner, or use any indecent, profane or insulting language in any public place, or near any dwelling house, or other building in the town, or be or remain upon any sidewalk, or upon any door step, or other projection from any house or other building, so as to annoy or disturb any person or obstruct any passage to such house or building, and every person so being or remaining as aforesaid, when ordered by any constable or police officer, or by the owner or occupant of any such building, shall immediately and peaceably depart and stay therefrom.

SECT. 15. No person shall place any obstruction in a street or on a sidewalk, and allow it to remain there, without first obtaining the consent in writing of the Board of Selectmen.

SECT. 16. Whoever, being the owner, tenant, occupant or agent in charge of an estate abutting upon a sidewalk upon a public street, within a radius of one quarter of a mile of the railroad crossing in the centre of the town, said estate being used wholly or in part for stores, public offices or places of public resort, shall place any snow or ice on a sidewalk on which such store, office or place of public resort abuts, or suffers it to remain thereon for more than five hours between sunrise and sunset, shall forfeit not more than ten dollars for each offence. If snow or ice through weather conditions, is evenly spread over a sidewalk and frozen thereto so as to be difficult of removal, it may remain until it can be more easily removed, if the sidewalk be kept in safe condition by sanding or otherwise.

SECT. 17. No person shall collect, deal in, or keep a shop for the purchase, sale or barter of junk, old metals or second hand articles within the limits of the town, unless licensed by the Board of Selectmen.

SECT. 18. No person shall throw any snowball, stone or other substance, in any public or private way; nor shall any person so engage in any amusement, game or exercise, in any public or private way as to interfere with the free, safe and convenient use thereof.

SECT. 19. No person, except the duly authorized agents and employees of the Selectmen, shall carry in or through any of the streets, squares, courts, lanes, avenues, places or alleys within the town of Winchester, any house-dirt, ashes or house-foal, either animal or vegetable, or any grease or bones, or any refuse substances from any of the dwelling houses or other places in the town, unless a person so carrying the same, and the mode in which it may be carried, shall have been licensed by the Board of Health upon such terms and conditions as they may deem the health and interest of the town require.

SECT. 20. No person shall, without the license of the Board of Health, throw into, or leave in, or upon, any street, court, square, lane, alley, public square, public enclosure, pond or body of water or vacant lot within the limits of the town, where it would be offensive or injurious to health, any dead animal, dirt, sawdust, soot, ashes, cinders, shavings, hair, shreds, manure, oyster, clam or lobster shells, waste water, rubbish or filth of any kind, or any refuse animal or vegetable matter whatsoever.

SECT. 21. No person shall, except as authorized or required by law, fire or discharge any gun, fowling-piece or other firearms or an air-rifle on or within two hundred feet of any street in the town of Winchester, nor on any public grounds therein, nor on any private grounds beyond said two hundred feet limit, unless with the consent of the owner thereof; but the provisions of this section shall not apply to the use of such weapons at any military exercise or in the lawful defence of the person, family or property of any citizen.

SECT. 22. Whoever violates the provisions of any section of this article, except sections ten, sixteen and seventeen shall be punished by a fine not exceeding twenty dollars for each offence.

ARTICLE IV.

HACKNEY CARRIAGES.

SECT. 1. The Board of Selectmen shall, from time to time, grant licenses to such persons and upon such terms, as they may deem expedient, to set up, use or drive hackney carriages for the conveyance of persons for hire from place to place within the town, and they may revoke such licenses at their discretion, and a record of all licenses so granted or revoked shall be kept by the Selectmen.

SECT. 2. The Board of Selectmen shall give notice by publication in some newspaper, or otherwise, that, on or before a given date, all persons who desire to set up, use or drive a hackney carriage or carriages must apply for a license therefor.

SECT. 3. No person after said given date shall set up, use or drive in the town any hackney carriage for the conveyance of persons for hire from place to place within the town, without a license for such carriage from the Board of Selectmen, under a penalty not exceeding twenty dollars every time such carriage is used. Such license shall expire on the first day of May next after the date thereof, and no license shall be sold, assigned or transferred without the consent of said Board indorsed thereon.

SECT. 4. For every license so granted, the sum of one dollar shall be paid to the Town Treasurer for the use of the town, but no license so granted shall operate to relieve the licensee from any penalty herein prescribed against persons without a license if he neglects or refuses to take out and pay for his license within ten days after notice that it has been granted.

ARTICLE V.

HAWKERS AND PEDDLERS.

SECT. 1. No person shall hawk or peddle any of the articles enumerated in section fifteen of chapter sixty-five of the Revised Laws and all amendments thereof until he has recorded his name and residence with the Chief of Police and has been assigned a number by him, nor unless any vehicle or receptacle in which he may carry or convey such articles shall have painted on the outside thereof in letters and figures at least two inches in height the name of the person selling and the number given him by the Chief of Police and be approved on the first Monday in every month by the Chief of Police.

SECT. 2. No person hawking, peddling or selling, or exposing for sale, any article enumerated in section fifteen of chapter sixty-five of the Revised Laws, and acts in amendment thereof, shall cry his wares to the disturbance of the peace or comfort of the inhabitants of the town.

SECT. 3. The Board of Selectmen may from time to time grant licenses to suitable persons to be hawkers and peddlers of fruit and vegetables within the town.

SECT. 4. Every license so granted shall expire on the first day of May next following the date thereof, but no such license shall be effective until the licensee shall have paid to the Town Treasurer a fee of ten dollars to the use of the town.

SECT. 5. Any hawker or peddler of fruit or vegetables who conducts his business within the town, and is not licensed as provided in section four of this article, and any person who violates any of the provisions of the foregoing sections of this article shall be punished by a fine of not more than twenty dollars for each offence.

ARTICLE VI.

REGULATIONS AND RATES OF THE WATER WORKS.

SECT. 1. There shall be a Water and Sewer Board consisting of three legal voters, one of whom shall annually be elected by ballot at the annual town meeting for a term of three years, and who, before entering upon the performance of his duties, shall be sworn to the faithful performance thereof. No member shall receive any salary or other compensation for his services.

SECT. 2. Said Board shall have and exercise all the powers vested in the town, by chapter two hundred and sixty-five of the Acts of the year eighteen hundred and seventy-two and by any Acts in addition thereto, so far as the same may be legally delegated; and may appoint a Water Registrar and other necessary subordinate officers, agents and assistants, and fix their salaries or compensation.

SECT. 3. Said Board shall, annually, on or before the first day of January, present to the Selectmen a report, made up to and including the last day of December, containing a statement of the condition of the water works and of the lands and other property connected therewith, and any information or suggestions which they may deem important; and shall, at the same time, transmit to the Selectmen the report of the Water Registrar, mentioned in the following section.

SECT. 4. The Water Registrar, under the direction of said Board, shall assess the water rates hereinafter established; he shall once in each year personally visit, or cause to be visited, the premises of every water taker, examine the service pipes and fixtures, and see that the rules and regulations are strictly observed. He shall, annually, on or before the first day of January, present to said Board a report containing a statement of the number of water-takers, the amount of water rates assessed and the amount of abatements, and perform all other duties required of him by said Board. He shall transmit the bills for water rates to the Collector, who shall collect them and pay the proceeds over to the Town Treasurer weekly.

SECT. 5. Water rates shall be payable to the Collector on the first day of January and July in each year. All charges for specific supplies, unless determined by meter, shall be payable before the water is turned on.

SECT. 6. Upon the non-payment of the water rates for sixty days after they are payable, the Collector shall serve a summons upon the delinquent; and, unless said rates are paid within ten days thereafter, together with twenty cents for said summons, the Collector shall notify the Registrar, who shall shut off the water, and it then shall not be turned on until the amount due, together with the twenty cents for the summons and fifty cents for the shutting off and fifty cents for the turning on, is paid. The foregoing provisions shall apply if two or more parties take water from the same service pipes, although one or more of them may have paid the proportion due from him or them. Said summons may be served in any of the ways provided by law for the service of a summons for the non-payment of a tax.

SECT. 7. The Water and Sewer Board may make abatements in the water rates in such cases as they may deem proper; and may shut off the water from any street after notice of their intention so to do.

SECT. 8. Said Board shall keep suitable books in which shall be entered the names of all water-takers, the kind of building to which water is supplied, the name of the street on which it is situated and its number thereon, the nature of the use, the number of taps, and the amount charged; which books shall be open to inspection.

SECT. 9. Said Board shall lay all service pipes from the main in the street to the inside of the building which is to be supplied in such location and manner, and using pipe of such quality and size as the owner may desire and said Board deems proper, the cost thereof to be charged to the owner, but the service water pipe from the service box to the inside of the house may be furnished and installed by any competent person whose work shall be satisfactory to said Board or its inspector. An estimate of the cost shall be made and the amount shall be deposited with the Town Treasurer before the work is begun.

SECT. 10. If any person shall open a hydrant, or lift or remove the cover thereof, or make any opening or connection with any pipe or reservoir, or turn on or turn off the water from any pipe, fountain, reservoir or hydrant, except in case of fire, or by authority of the Water and Sewer Board or Registrar, he shall be liable to a penalty of not more than twenty dollars.

SECT. 11. Clause 1. All persons who take water shall keep the meters within their buildings protected from frost, at their own expense, and will be held responsible for all damage which may result from their failure so to do.

Clause 2. They shall prevent all unnecessary waste of water, and shall not conceal the purposes for which it is used.

Clause 3. No alteration shall be made in any of the pipes or fixtures inserted by the town, except by persons authorized by the Water and Sewer Board or Registrar, who are to be allowed to enter the premises supplied, examine the fixtures, and ascertain if there is any unnecessary waste.

Clause 4. No water shall be supplied to parties who are not entitled to its use, unless by written permit of the Water and Sewer Board.

Clause 5. A charge of fifty cents shall be made whenever the Water and Sewer Board, at the request of a water-taker, turns on or shuts off the water in any service.

A copy of this section shall be printed on all bills for water rates.

SECT. 12. Upon a violation of any of the provisions of section eleven, the water shall be immediately shut off from the building or place where such violation occurred, although two or more parties may take the water through the same pipe, and shall not be turned on again except by order of the Water and Sewer Board, and upon the payment of one dollar; and in case of such violation, said Board may declare any payment made for the water by the person guilty of such violation to be forfeited.

SECT. 13. The owners of premises shall be charged on the first days of January and July for the use of water for the succeeding six months when the rate is by fixture, and for the preceding six months when a meter is used, at the following rates per annum:

WATER RATES.

All stables containing fixtures shall be on meter service. If there are no fixtures in the stable, the following charges shall be made:
For each horse	2.00
For each cow	1.50

METER CHARGES.

All charges for boarding houses, public baths, stores, offices, warehouses, markets, saloons, restaurants, workshops, manufactories, and for boilers used for power or to make steam for manufacturing purposes, shall be ascertained by meter.

The charge for metered water shall be at the rate of two cents per hundred gallons.

The Water and Sewer Board may require a deposit in case of meter service.

The Water and Sewer Board shall have the right to stop the use of large quantities of water for special purposes whenever, in its judgment, it is necessary to conserve the water for domestic uses.

BUILDING PURPOSES.

Special rates to be made by the Water and Sewer Board.

SECT. 14. The Water and Sewer Board may set a meter in any place they shall deem it for the interest of the town so to do. Any water-taker may demand to have a meter set on written application, and the payment of a deposit to cover the estimated cost of the meter and its installation.

SECT. 15. No charge shall be made for water used through fixtures which are installed solely for protection against fire.

SECT. 16. The Water and Sewer Board may charge the Fire Department the sum of fifteen dollars annually for each and every hydrant established within the limits of the town; and for water supplied to fountains, and for other public purposes, they may charge the department of the town for which the water is used the same rates as individuals or corporations would be charged for like purposes.

SECT. 17. The Water and Sewer Board may grant an application for an extension of the water pipes on an untraced way, if, in their judgment, the increase in the value of the land abutting on or reached from such way, due to the extension of the water service, will be sufficient to yield an increase in taxes, exclusive of water rates, equal to six per cent, at least on the cost of such extension.

ARTICLE VII.

REGULATIONS FOR THE INSPECTION AND CONSTRUCTION OF BUILDINGS.

INSPECTOR OF BUILDINGS.

SECT. 1. The Board of Selectmen shall annually, in April, appoint an Inspector of Buildings for the term of one year from the first day of May following or until a successor is appointed and has qualified in his stead. His compensation shall be determined by the Board of Selectmen. He shall be familiar with building construction and shall not be interested in any contract for building for the town, or for furnishing materials to the town. The Board of Selectmen shall have power to discharge the Inspector for failure to perform his duties, and to fill any vacancy in his office.

SECT. 2. The Inspector shall keep a record of the business of his office, ascertain all facts and make all returns which shall be required by law. He shall report to the State Board of District Police any violation of the laws of the Commonwealth in relation to the construction of buildings that may come to his notice. He shall, if necessary, enter upon the premises wherein any fire has occurred, in order to investigate the origin of the fire.

BUILDING PERMITS.

SECT. 3. Every person before erecting or altering any building, shall obtain from the Inspector a building permit, first filing therefor an application, in which he shall give a description of the intended building or alteration, shall submit plans and specifications for the same, and state the purpose for which the same is to be used and the dimensions and location of the site.

SECT. 4. The Inspector shall examine all buildings under applications for permits for alterations and make a record of his examination. He shall issue permits for the erection or alteration of buildings in all cases where the proposed new building or altered building will conform to the requirements of this article and to the laws of the Commonwealth, and in such cases only; but permits for his own work or any building in which he is interested, shall be issued only by some disinterested person appointed by the Selectmen for that purpose. No permit shall be valid for a longer time than one year.

SECT. 5. A copy of the plans and specifications of every public building shall be deposited and left on file in the office of the Inspector.

INSPECTION OF BUILDINGS.

SECT. 6. The Inspector shall examine all buildings in course of erection, alteration or repair, as often as practicable, and for that purpose shall have the right of entry thereto, and shall make a record of all violations of this article, with the location of the building where such violations are found, the name of the owner, lessee, occupants, architect and master mechanic, and all other matters relative thereto.

SECT. 7. The Inspector shall examine all buildings reported dangerous, or damaged by accident or fire, and make a record of such examination, including the nature and amount of such damage, with the location of the building, the name of the owner and lessee, and for what purpose occupied, and report the facts to the Board of Selectmen, and, for that purpose, shall have the right of entry thereto.

BOARD OF APPEAL.

SECT. 8. The Board of Selectmen shall annually appoint a committee of three voters of Winchester for the term of one year, or until their successors are appointed and qualified, to be called the Board of Appeal. In case of doubt as to the true meaning, intent or application of any section of this article either the Inspector or any one aggrieved by the ruling of the Inspector thereon, may by petition bring the matter before said Board for determination. The Board shall thereupon give a hearing on such petition and determine the true intent, meaning and application of any section of this article. A decision of a majority of said Board shall be binding on all parties affected thereby.

DEFINITIONS.

SECT. 9. In this article, unless the context or subject matter otherwise requires: — "Cellar" means a basement or lower story, of which one-half or more of the height from the floor to the ceiling is below the level of the street, if adjoining, or if not on a street, below the average grade of the ground outside the wall. "Foundation wall" means that portion of any external wall below the level of the street curb, or, if not on a street, below the grade of the ground outside the wall, and that portion of any partition or division wall below the basement floor. "Division wall" means every wall built in order to be used as a separation of two or more buildings. "Partition wall" means any interior wall of masonry in a building. "External wall" means every outer wall or vertical inclosure, except a division wall, of any building. "Height" of a building means the distance from the top of the outside foundation wall, to the highest part of the roof. "Tenement" or "apartment house" means any building for three or more families, or for two or more families where the building is used in part for mercantile or manufacturing purposes. "Inspector" means the Inspector of Buildings appointed under Section 1 of this article.

ALTERATIONS AND ADDITIONS.

SECTION 10. Any alteration or addition to a building already erected or hereafter to be built, shall be subject to this article, except ordinary alterations or repairs not affecting the construction of the external, division or partition walls, chimneys or stairways.

SECTION 11. No building already erected, or hereafter built, shall be altered in such manner that, as a whole, it will not conform to the provisions of this article as to new buildings. This section shall not apply to single or double dwelling houses retained as such.

BRICK OR STONE WALLS.

SECTION 12. In all buildings having masonry walls, the brick or stone shall be solidly laid in lime or cement mortar. No stone walls shall be less than eighteen inches thick, if of rubble, or sixteen inches thick, if of blocked stone backed with brick.

SECTION 13. In such buildings, all foundation walls, if of brick, shall be at least four inches thicker than the walls directly above, and shall be bracketed out eight inches at least at the base, or rest on a concrete footing eight inches wider than the wall, and one foot thick. Where rubble is used, the wall shall be thoroughly bonded. Foundation walls shall also be thick enough to resist lateral pressure, and the Inspector may order an increase of thickness for that purpose. They shall be laid solid in cement mortar, at least one-half cement to one-half lime, and shall rest on a footing course of large stone or Portland cement concrete, in either case at least eight inches wider than the wall, and at least twelve inches thick. Such walls, if of rubble stone, shall be at least twenty inches thick, and shall also be as many inches thick, less ten, as the wall is high in feet. If of block stone, they may be six inches less in thickness than is required for rubble walls, but shall be at least eighteen inches thick and at least four inches thicker than the wall above.

SECTION 14. Except as provided in the following section, in all two-story buildings, the brick external and division walls above ground, and in the first story above the basement shall be at least twelve inches thick, and in the second story at least eight inches thick, but no eight-inch wall shall be more than twenty feet long without adequate lateral support.

SECTION 15. Dwelling houses of not over two and one-half stories may have foundation walls as provided in section twenty-five, and may have ten inch hollow walls bonded every two feet in length and every five courses in height with metal or brick ties. Wherever joists are built into the wall, it shall be solidly bonded with brick for three courses below the joist.

SECTION 16. In all buildings of more than two stories, the brick external and division walls shall be not less than twelve inches thick throughout the three upper stories and throughout every two stories below shall be four inches thicker than the wall directly above. Not more than twelve feet shall be counted as a story; but tenement or apartment houses of not more than four stories may have external and division walls not less than twelve inches thick.

SECTION 17. Vaulted walls shall contain, exclusive of wickets, the same amount of material required for solid walls, and shall be tied together with ties not more than two feet apart every five courses.

SECTION 18. The walls of brick buildings, except dwelling houses, shall be anchored to each other at all corners, every ten feet in their height, by tie anchors, made of at least one and one-quarter inch by three-eighths of an inch wrought iron.

SECTION 19. Each floor and also the roof of all masonry buildings, except dwelling houses, shall have its beams so tied to the walls and to each other with wrought iron straps or anchors, at least one and one-quarter inches by three-eighths of an inch in section, as to form continuous ties across the building not more than eight feet apart. The walls running parallel with the floor joist shall be properly tied to the floor beams once in eight feet by iron straps or anchors of the size above specified.

TENEMENT OR APARTMENT HOUSES.

SECTION 20. Every tenement or apartment house shall have two staircases independent of each other, and each directly accessible from each tenement.

SECTION 21. All tenement or apartment houses shall be of fireproof construction.

SECTION 22. Fireproof construction shall consist of fireproof material throughout, with floors constructed of iron, steel or reinforced concrete beams, filled in between with terra-cotta, or other masonry arches or with concrete or reinforced concrete slabs.

SECTION 23. Wood may be used only for under or upper floors, windows and door frames, sashes, doors, interior finish, hand rails for stairs, necessary sleepers bedded in the cement, and for isolated furrings bedded in mortar.

SECTION 24. In such construction there shall be no air space between the top of any floor arches and the floor boarding.

WOODEN BUILDINGS.

SECTION 25. Every wooden building shall have a foundation of stone, concrete or brick carried up to the surface of the ground, and the foundation, if of concrete, shall be not less than ten inches thick, and if of brick, shall be not less than twelve inches thick, and laid in cement mortar, at least one-half cement to one-half lime; if of rubble stone, it shall be not less than sixteen inches thick and laid in cement mortar, at least one-half cement to one-half lime, with headers extending through the wall every four feet in each direction; and if of block stone, shall be not less than sixteen inches thick and laid in equally good mortar. In each case, the wall shall rest on a footing course at least twenty inches wide and one foot thick.

SECTION 26. The underpinning above ground of a wooden building, if of brick, shall be not less than twelve inches thick, except that for the upper six feet thereof, it shall be not less than eight inches thick.

SECTION 27. Such part of the foundation wall of a wooden building as may be below the grade of the cellar bottom may be laid of large stones without mortar, provided the wall is at least two feet six inches thick.

SECTION 28. Such buildings or structures as the Inspector shall approve may rest on trench walls carried three feet, six inches below grade or to a ledge, on foundation walls laid without mortar, or on brick piers or iron or wood posts. Such piers or posts shall rest on a solid footing three feet, six inches below grade.

SECTION 29. In every dwelling house where ledger boards are used to carry any except the upper floor, the space behind the ledger board shall be filled solidly with blocks of wood nailed in place, or with some incombustible material.

SECTION 30. No wooden building shall be built, the walls of which to the main cornice exceed thirty feet in height, and no wooden building shall have its walls placed at a less distance than seven feet from the side and rear lines of the lot upon which the building is to be erected, unless an external wall of masonry is substituted for one of wood on the side or sides adjoining such lines, said wall to be built up to the under side of the roof covering and of the thickness required for external walls. A wall with a coating of cement on a wood frame shall not be considered a masonry wall.

DOUBLE HOUSES.

SECTION 31. Every double house shall have a separating partition plastered on metal lath on both sides or wholly filled between the studs with brick and mortar or concrete up to the ceiling of the upper finished story and resting on an eight inch brick wall in the cellar.

SECTION 32. Every block of three or more dwelling houses shall have a brick division wall at least eight inches thick between each two dwellings, said wall to extend up to the under side of the roof covering.

PROJECTIONS.

SECTION 33. No bay window or other structure, except a cornice, shall be placed upon any building so as to project over any public way or square without the permission of the Board of Selectmen, given after due notice and hearing, and then only in such manner as shall be approved by the Inspector.

LEADERS AND SNOW BARRIERS.

SECTION 34. Water from the roof of a building now or hereafter erected shall not be allowed to flow upon or across the surface of a sidewalk. No person shall permit a leader or conductor from the roof of such a building owned by him to be so placed or maintained as to direct a volume of water upon or across the surface of a sidewalk.

SECTION 35. Every building now or hereafter erected upon the line or within eight feet of the line of any street or travelled way, having a slated pitch roof, sloping towards said street or way shall be provided with suitable snow barriers or guards to prevent the snow sliding therefrom.

FLOORS.

SECTION 36. All new or renewed floors shall be so constructed as to carry safely the weight to which the proposed use of the building will subject them, but the least capacity per superficial square foot, exclusive of materials, shall be for floors of

Dwellings,	40 lbs
School houses and offices,	60 lbs
Stores and buildings for light mechanical purposes,	120 lbs
Public and school assembly rooms,	120 lbs
Storehouses, manufactories, machine shops,	120 to 250 lbs

as may be required by the Inspector.

SECTION 37. The ends of all floor beams of a brick building shall enter the wall at least four inches and shall be cut with a splay of three inches in their width, or shall be carried by some approved form of joist hanger.

SECTION 38. There shall be not less than four inches of brick work between roof or floor timbers entering a division wall from opposite sides.

FIRE GUARDS.

SECTION 39. The six following sections shall apply to every tenement or apartment house, and to every building to be used as a hotel, lodging or boarding house with accommodations for more than ten lodgers above the first floor, and to every building of more than one story within the building limits.

SECTION 40. The inside of all furrowed brick walls shall have a fire stop at least six inches wide of some incombustible material, thoroughly set up between furrings at the top and bottom of each floor.

SECTION 41. All stud walls and partitions shall have the space between the floor joists immediately under said walls and partitions, and between studs from the under side of said floor joist to a line four inches above the top of said joist, filled solidly with brick and mortar, or some other incombustible material. If such stud wall and partition shall rest on a solid timber or joist, said filling shall be placed from the top of said timber or joist to the same height as above described. When there is no wall or partition below, a strip of metal two inches wider than the said studding may be substituted for filling above described.

SECTION 42. All air spaces around chimneys, pipes, shafts, etc., and all other spaces which form concealed air passages from one story to another shall have similar fire stops at each story.

SECTION 43. All ducts, chutes and shafts for ventilation, or other purposes, shall be of, or lined with, incombustible material.

SECTION 44. The spaces between stringers of all wooden staircases, unless said stringers are left exposed, shall be closed at intervals not exceeding four feet by substantial stops of incombustible material. The soffits of wooden stairs, if plastered, and the ceilings in and under staircase halls shall be plastered on metal lath.

SECTION 45. The partitions enclosing staircases or staircase halls shall be plastered on metal lath on both sides or be filled solidly between the studding with brick and mortar or concrete so as to form, with the metal lathed ceiling above described, a complete enclosure with no openings except for windows in external walls, and for doors. In cellars or basements, staircases or staircase halls, shall be enclosed by brick walls, except in the case of a flight of cellar stairs, not opening from a staircase hall on the first floor.

CHIMNEYS.

SECTION 46. All chimneys hereafter erected shall be constructed of brick, stone or other non-conducting fireproof material laid solid in mortar at least as good as best lime-mortar. Brick chimneys shall be plastered outside below the roofing, except when the brick work is exposed. The walls of all smoke flues shall be eight inches thick or lined with terra-cotta or tile flue linings. Every chimney not attached to a brick wall shall be built so that the centre of gravity of each section shall be six inches inside the chimney walls at the base.

SECTION 47. Chimneys not starting from the foundation walls shall rest upon a continuous support of metal or masonry extending to the ground.

SECTION 48. Adequate iron mantel bars or masonry arches shall be used over all fireplace or grate openings. The jambs and backs of all fireplaces, range or grate openings shall be at least eight inches thick. Hearths of fireplaces shall be laid on brick or other trimmer arches, or upon bars of iron supporting a four inch bed of masonry.

SECTION 49. Open fireplaces, set-grates, set-ranges, set-kettles and the like shall have fireproof foundations, with fireproof hearth extending not less than sixteen inches from the grate or ash pit. No masonry structure to contain fire shall be allowed on a wooden floor in any building.

SECTION 50. All chimneys shall be topped out at least two feet above the highest part of the roof to which they belong or three feet above a flat roof. No structural wood work of any kind shall be placed at a less distance than one inch from the outside of any chimney.

SMOKE PIPES.

SECTION 51. No smoke-pipe shall pass through a stud or wooden partition of any kind, whether the same be plastered or not, unless guarded either by metal collars, with suitable holes for ventilation, or by a soapstone ring. All smoke-pipes passing through closets shall be enclosed in metal pipes with a ventilated air space of at least two inches all around.

No cutaneous pipe shall be used for horizontal flues. No woodwork shall be placed at a less distance than six inches from any metal flue or smoke pipe.

SECTION 52. The smoke-pipes of any hot-air, steam, hot-water heater or other furnace passing beneath wooden beams or ceilings, shall be kept at least twelve inches therefrom, but the pipe may be placed within eight inches of the beam or ceiling if the woodwork shall be protected by a tin shield suspended at least two inches below said beams or ceilings. All other smoke-pipes shall be kept at least ten inches below any wooden beam or ceiling.

FURNACES.

SECTION 53. Tops of furnaces shall be at least one foot, six inches below any wooden beams or ceilings.

SECTION 54. Registers connected with hot-air furnaces shall be set in non-conducting, incombustible borders, at least two inches wide. Register boxes shall be made of metal, with a flange on the top to fit a groove in the border, and shall have a one-inch air space all around.

SECTION 55. Furnace or other pipes conveying heated air shall be of tin plate or its equal, and, except those from hot water or steam radiators, in partitions or between floors, shall be double with a free air space between, and elsewhere shall be kept at least one inch away from any wood work.

STEAM PIPES.

SECTION 56. Steam pipes shall be kept at least one inch from all wood-work or shall be protected by an incombustible ring or tube, or shall rest on iron supports, with an air space of at least one half inch all around, and when passing through partitions or floors shall be surrounded by incombustible tunnels at least three quarters of an inch larger in diameter than the pipes.

NOTICE OF UNSAFE CHIMNEYS.

SECTION 57. If any chimney, flue, or heating apparatus shall be found by the Inspector to be unsafe, he shall at once notify in writing the owner, agent, or other party having an interest in said premises, who, upon receiving said notice, shall make the same safe.

BOILER ROOMS.

SECTION 58. Rooms for power boilers shall be enclosed in brick, stone or concrete walls. Roofs or floors over such rooms or houses shall be made of iron, or masonry arches or slabs, or if of wood, shall be protected with fireproof tile or plastered on metal lath. All doors leading to such boiler rooms shall be covered with metal. The ceilings over all other stationary boilers, except those used for heating dwelling houses, shall be plastered on metal laths or covered with metal.

SECTION 59. The floors of rooms containing stationary boilers shall be made of incombustible material for at least five feet in front, and for a suitable distance on the sides and rear. Wooden floors under portable boilers shall be protected by incombustible material.

FLOOR AREAS.

SECTION 60. In all non-fireproof stores, warehouses and manufacturing buildings not adequately equipped with a system of automatic sprinklers in conformity to the rules of the National Board of Fire Underwriters, no single floor area between brick walls of a thickness corresponding to the main bearing walls shall exceed seventy-five hundred square feet; and no wall or part of wall in any existing building, nor in any building hereafter erected, shall be removed to produce a larger area unless so equipped. Openings in the brick fire walls of buildings of the class above mentioned shall in no case exceed eight feet in width, nor ten feet in height, and above each such opening there shall be a certain wall of at least two feet between the top of the opening and the ceiling line. Openings shall be provided with approved automatic, self-closing, standard, fireproof doors on both sides of the wall.

BUILDING LIMITS.

SECTION 61. The territorial limits within which no building shall be built unless in conformity with the requirements of section two of chapter one hundred and four of the Revised Laws shall be the area bounded and described as follows:—Beginning at land of the Boston and Maine Railroad one hundred feet south of Common Street and thence running parallel with and one hundred feet distant from said Common Street to and extended across Church Street to a point fifty feet northwest of Church Street; thence turning and running from said point to the northeasterly corner of Elmwood Avenue and Vine Street; thence running by the easterly and southerly side of Elmwood Avenue to Main Street; thence running across Main Street to the pond; thence running by the pond and river to a point thirty feet from the northerly side of Mt. Vernon Street; thence running easterly parallel to and thirty feet distant from Mt. Vernon Street to Washington Street; thence running southerly on Washington Street to the southeasterly corner of the Town Hall lot; thence running by the southerly boundary of the Town Hall lot extended to the pond; thence running due south to the parkway; thence by the parkway and Walnut Street to land of the Boston and Maine Railroad; thence across said land of said Boston and Maine Railroad to the point of beginning.

SPECIAL CONSTRUCTION.

SECTION 62. The erection of any building of a kind obviously not contemplated by the preceding sections of this article shall be subject to such analogous restrictions as the Inspector may require.

SECTION 63. The use of various forms of masonry construction such as concrete, concrete blocks, terra-cotta or hollow tile blocks, etc., not expressly provided for in this article shall be subject to such restriction as the Inspector may require in order to conform to the standard of strength and safety otherwise required by this article.

PENALTIES.

SECTION 64. Whoever violates any of the provisions of the preceding sections of this article shall be punished by a fine of not more than one hundred dollars for each offence.

ARTICLE VIII.

REGULATIONS RELATIVE TO PLUMBING AND DRAINAGE.

PERMITS.

SECTION 1. Upon application of a registered master plumber, on a form furnished by the Board of Health, said board shall grant a written permit to do the plumbing described therein, when in conformity with the law. Drawings of proposed work shall be filed if required. Permits may be revoked by the Board of Health if their conditions are violated. Permits for all plumbing, except for the repair of leaks, must be in the hands of the plumber before beginning any plumbing work.

SEWAGE DISPOSAL.

SECTION 2. Every building, used as a dwelling, tenement or lodging house, or wherein persons are employed, shall be separately connected with the public sewer when such sewer is provided; or if none is provided, with a cesspool constructed of such material and of such capacity as the Board of Health shall direct.

No plumbing shall be connected with the town sewer without the approval of the Board of Health.

No rain conductors, surface or ground water drainage shall be connected with plumbing or drainage pipes which discharge into the public sewer or into cesspools.

Wherever there is a public sewer with which the sewerage system of a building is to be connected, the owner or agent shall before determining the position of the main house sewer, obtain from the Water and Sewer Board the location of the sewer branch which is to serve that building and said connection shall be made in conformity to the rules of said Board.

No sewer from any building shall pass under another building; nor shall a sewer pass within five feet of the outside wall of any building, unless it be of extra heavy cast iron pipe, made with lead joints, thoroughly caulked and tested.

Every building in which gasoline, naphtha or other inflammable compounds are used for business purposes shall be provided with a special trap or separator, so designed as to prevent the passage of oils into the sewer, and shall be ventilated with a separate pipe to a point three feet above the roof. The waste of every washstand for vehicles shall be provided with a catch basin so designed that sand cannot pass into the drain. The waste pipe from the sink of every hotel, restaurant or other public cooking establishment shall be provided with a grease trap. The waste from every fixture, except refrigerators and other receptacles in which provisions are stored, shall be connected directly with the drain pipe.

DRAINAGE SYSTEM.

SECTION 3. The drain, from a point ten feet outwardly from the inside of the wall, shall be of cast iron, and of not less than four inches in diameter. It shall continue, with a one-quarter inch rise at least per foot, to and through the roof or the side of the house to a height of eighteen inches at least in any case, and to a height of eighteen inches above the top of any window or opening within twelve feet of such drains; and if the roof is used for clothes drying or other purposes, such drain shall extend to a height of eight feet at least above the roof. The connection between said drain and the earthen sewer pipe shall be made with Portland cement and shall be approved by the plumbing inspector before being covered. Lateral branches of soil or waste pipes, if more than 20 feet in length, shall be extended undiminished in size, and shall in no case be less than four inches in diameter where they pass to the outer air.

The drains shall, when connected with a cesspool, be provided with a running trap; but when connected with the public sewer a running trap may, at the option of the owner, be omitted; except that in all cases where a running trap has been installed, it shall not be removed without the written consent of the Board of Health. The running trap shall be of the same size as the house sewer, located either outside or inside the foundation walls of the building, but beyond all house connections, and shall be provided with an accessible cleanout.

Soil pipes from water closets shall be not less than four inches internal diameter, except that if it is impracticable to use such pipe, a three-inch soil pipe may, by permission of the Board of Health, be used for one set of bathroom fixtures, which shall comprise one bath tub, one basin and one water closet. Waste pipes from the traps of fixtures, such as sinks, basins, baths or wash trays, shall be of two-inch cast iron with short connections of lead. Such connections shall be of not less than one and one-quarter inch bore, and shall not be branched into each other, but shall be separately connected with the iron pipe.

Connections and changes in direction shall be made with long angle and long sweep bends and Y branches.

MATERIAL OF DRAINAGE SYSTEM.

SECTION 4. Drain, soil, waste and vent pipes and connections, which collectively make up the drainage system within the building, shall be constructed of the following material: extra heavy cast iron, galvanized wrought iron, lead and annealed "iron size" brass pipe. Cast-iron pipe and fittings shall be of a grade known to the trade as extra heavy, plain, and shall be uncoated until approved by the Inspector. All joints in cast-iron pipe shall be made with oakum and lead, run full, caulked gas and water tight, and left clean without paint, putty or cement, until approved by the Inspector.

Extra Heavy Cast-iron Pipe shall be of the following diameters and weight:

Diameters (inches)	Weight (pound per foot)
2 inches	5 1/2
3 "	9 1/2
5 "	17

Wrought iron soil or waste pipes shall be used only with the written permission of the Board of Health and under such conditions as that Board may direct.

If wrought iron vent pipes are used, they shall be galvanized. No slip joints, unions or flanges shall be used on threaded wastes or vents, except that slip joints may be used on the house side of trap to connect fixtures.

Lead pipe shall be of the following diameters and weights:

Diameter (inches)	Weight (pound per foot)

No lead waste up to and including two inches in diameter, unless exposed, shall be more than eight feet in length, including inlet and outlet of trap. A three inch or four inch diameter waste shall not be more than two feet in length.

Lead bends and traps shall correspond to the above weights.

Brass sleeves for connecting lead and cast iron pipes shall be extra heavy, at least one-eighth of an inch thick. Brass solder nipples for connecting lead and threaded pipes shall be either cast metal or seamless drawn tubing, size and weight corresponding with pipe to be connected. In connecting lead pipe together, or to brass calking or soldering nipples, full-sized wiped joints shall be used. Clean-outs, plugs, stoppers or any other fittings used in the drainage system shall correspond in weight and material with the above description.

FASTENING PIPES.

SECTION 5. Drain, soil, waste and vent pipes shall be supported every five feet on horizontal runs, and at least once in each story on vertical lines; horizontal runs shall be supported from beneath, or hung from overhead by iron "strut" hangers, not less than five-sixteenths of an inch in diameter. Vertical stacks shall be fastened by pipe rest at the floor, or clamps, drive hooks or hangers to the adjacent walls.

TRAPS.

SECTION 6. The waste pipe of every independent fixture shall be furnished with a separate trap, which shall be placed as nearly as practicable to the fixture which it serves. A sink and set of not more than three wash trays, or bathtub and basin, or any two similar fixtures, when they adjoin, may be connected with the house drain through one round trap not less than four inches in diameter if the waste pipes are not more than three feet in length from the floor line to the trap on the bathtub and basin and if the waste centres are not more than five feet apart on the sink and trays. The waste pipe of each fixture shall enter the trap separately, and the waste from the trap must be one size larger than the inlet pipes. Four washbowls or sinks in a continuous line may be connected with the house drain through one four-inch round trap. Lead bends for water-closets or slop sinks shall not be used to connect the waste with other fixtures. Earthenware traps shall have heavy brass floor plates soldered to the lead bends and bolted to the trap flange, and the joint made tight with grafting wax or other substance satisfactory to the Board of Health. A trap depending upon concealed partitions to retain its seal shall not be approved, except for earthenware fixtures where the trap seal is plainly visible. Trap screws for cleaning purpose shall be placed in all metal traps and shall be accessible at all times. All fixture traps shall be so installed that the water seal will protect the trap screw from sewer air. When side clean out traps are placed between ceilings and floors they shall be provided with an accessible and proper seal.

STABLES, GARAGES, LABORATORIES, ETC.

SECTION 7. Drainage of stalls, stable fixtures, garages and laboratories shall be installed in accordance with plans approved by the Board of Health.

CLEANOUTS.

SECTION 8. Every house sewer, soil or waste pipe shall have accessible heavy brass plug cleanouts with iron or brass bodies and taper threads, at such points as the Inspector shall deem necessary. A main cleanout shall be provided at every building below all connections and in as direct a line as possible with the street sewer connections.

VENT, BACK AIR PIPES, ETC.

SECT. 9. Traps shall be protected from siphonage and back pressure by special or brass air pipes of the same size as the waste. A continuous system of venting shall be used, and back air pipes shall not be connected to the trap or branched into the waste pipe except where a continuous vent is not practicable. Traps of S form shall not have more than twenty-four inches of waste pipe from trap to vent. Round traps not less than nine inches long and four inches in diameter may be placed five feet from the vent pipe. Two water-closets or two other traps on the same level, with not more than two feet of waste pipe and which connect with soil or waste pipe not more than eighteen inches below the top water line of the trap, shall not require other vent than the continuation of the soil or waste pipe full size for its whole length. Lead air pipes may be used for short connections only, and where exposed to view.

SCHEDULE OF BACK AIR PIPES AND VENTS FOR FIXTURES.

Fixtures	Size of Pipe (inches)	Greatest length allowed (feet)	Maximum Number of Fixtures
Baths, basins, sinks, urinals or similar fixtures	1 1/2	30	3
Water-closets, or slop sinks	2	70	9
	3	70	21

Two or more air pipes may be connected, but such connection must be made above the top of the fixture. All vent pipes shall be at least four inches in diameter where they pass through the roof. Vent lines shall be so graded that no condensation will remain in the pipes. In case of batteries of water-closets, the special air pipe from each trap may be omitted, provided the soil or waste pipe, undiminished in size, is continued to a point above the roof, or connected into the main system above all fixtures.

"Bow" venting will not be allowed except by special permission of the Board of Health, in which case the "bow" must be run the full size of pipe as high as the top of the fixture and returned without being trapped.

In buildings where there is only one water-closet and not more than two other traps, and said closet is connected below the traps and all traps are not more than three feet from the main sewer pipe, no back venting shall be required.

When old fixtures are replaced by new ones in plumbing which was constructed prior to the adoption of these regulations, and the traps attached to bath tubs, basins, sinks and wash trays are round traps not less than four inches in diameter and the waste pipe is not over five feet in length between such traps and the main soil pipe or drain, and the main soil pipe extends full size through the roof, a separate air pipe shall not be required. No connection of old plumbing with the public sewer shall be made that does not conform to such requirement.

TESTING AND INSPECTION.

SECT. 10. Pipes or other fixtures shall not be covered or concealed from view until approved by the Inspector of Plumbing. The work shall be examined and tested within two working days after notice that it is ready for inspection. Plumbing shall not be used unless, when roughed in, the wastes, vents, back air pipes and all caulked joints have first been tested in the presence of the Inspector, by water or sufficient air pressure, as the Inspector may require.

When the work in a building is sufficiently advanced so that the water may be turned on to all of the fixtures, the plumber doing such work shall, within five days thereafter, notify the Inspector in writing. The Inspector shall within two working days after receipt of such notice examine the work. Should the examination disclose any defects, the plumber shall be notified in writing and required to remedy the same without delay, and he shall again notify the Inspector as before. Should a plumber holding a permit neglect to send the notice as required, or neglect to remedy said defects for a period of more than five days, he shall not be granted any further permits until he shall have complied with these regulations and rules, or until action is taken by the Board of Health, and should such neglect be continued ten days longer, the Inspector shall file a complaint with the Board reciting all the facts of the case. The Board shall then take such action as it may deem advisable.

WATER-CLOSETS.

SECT. 11. Every building for habitation shall have such number of water-closets as the Board of Health may require, but in no case less than one for each tenement. Every building where persons are employed shall have at least one water closet for every fifteen persons employed therein; and in every building where persons of both sexes are employed, separate accommodations shall be furnished for each sex. Every enclosure containing one or more water-closets shall be provided with adequate ventilation to the outer air, either by window or suitable light shaft. No water-closet shall be set in any room or apartment that has not a window having an area of at least two square feet opening directly to the exterior air, unless there is a pipe of not less than three inches in diameter leading to a heated flue or other vent pipe. Water-closets shall be supplied with water from a tank above, or by flush valves set just above the seat, which in turn are supplied from tank or other adequate supply, capable of delivering five gallons of water to the closet in ten seconds. In all cases the flush pipe shall be not less than one and one quarter inches in diameter. Where local vents are used they shall connect with a heated flue when possible, and shall be not less than two inches for each fixture. All local vents shall be so constructed as not to act as a soil or waste pipe should the fixture become stopped. Connection to the flue shall be made by wrought-iron pipe, properly cemented; other piping may be of galvanized iron.

DRIP AND OVERFLOW WASTES.

SECT. 12. All drip or overflow pipes from tanks, coolers, safes or fixtures, or waste pipes from refrigerators or other receptacles for the storage of food or provisions, shall be carried to some open sink or place where they may be at all times visible.

No steam exhaust, blow off or drip pipe shall connect with the house sewer, soil, waste or vent pipe. Such pipes shall discharge into a suitable tank or condenser from which a proper outlet shall be provided.

DEFECTIVE PLUMBING, ETC.

SECT. 13. Alterations made in plumbing already in use, except as provided in section nine, shall in the future, be in accordance with these regulations, and such alterations shall be ordered by the Board of Health whenever in their opinion they judge it necessary for the public health and safety. It shall be so adjudged when after examination by the Inspector any old plumbing work is found to be defective.

If the Inspector finds old plumbing to be defective he shall report to the Board of Health the nature of the defects, and furnish the owner with a copy of his report. Should the owner neglect to remedy the defect within the time specified by the Inspector, the Board shall set a time for a hearing, and shall give the owner at least three days notice thereof, so that he may attend and show cause why he should not be required to make the alterations. Thereupon the Board may, if in its judgment the public safety and health so require, order such defect to be remedied.

When buildings which formerly connected with vaults or cesspools, are connected with the sewer, the old connection shall be uncovered outside of the building, a section of the same removed and the ends solidly cemented by the plumber.

The vaults and cesspools shall also be discontinued and filled by the owner with proper materials within three months after the sewer connection is made.

PENALTIES.

SECT. 14. Whoever violates any of the provisions of this article shall be liable to a fine of not more than fifty dollars for each offence.

ARTICLE IX.

REPEAL.

SECT. 1. All by-laws or parts of by-laws heretofore adopted which are inconsistent with the provisions of the foregoing by-laws, are hereby repealed and annulled; but the provisions of the foregoing by-laws, so far as they are the same as the provisions of by-laws heretofore adopted, shall be construed as a continuation thereof, and not as new enactments.

SECT. 2. The repeal of a by-law heretofore adopted shall not affect any act done, ratified or confirmed, or any right accrued or established, nor any action, suit or proceeding commenced or had in a civil case, nor affect any punishment, penalty or forfeiture incurred under such a by-law.

His Fellow Passenger

A Railroad Episode

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Burnell boarded the train at the Grand Central station and walked slowly through the crowded coaches until he found a vacant seat. There was only one, and the other occupant was a woman, young and slender and deeply veiled. He paused irresolutely, and the woman drew aside her skirts and made room for him. With a murmured word of thanks he hung his grip into the rack and settled himself behind the evening paper.

The train drew out of the station and into the stifling atmosphere of the tunnel. The dim light made reading impossible, and Burnell turned his eyes toward his fellow passengers. There were the usual aggregation of home-going commuters, a sprinkling of shoppers and a number of travelers who had made themselves thoroughly comfortable for a longer journey. He shot a glance at the other occupant of his seat and was startled into a prolonged stare.

She had thrown back her veil and revealed such a profile as Burnell had dreamed of. She was young, perhaps twenty-one, with delicate coloring and pale golden brown hair parted above a low, white brow, her nose was perfect, and her mouth adorable.

As the train glided out of the tunnel into the pale afternoon light the girl made a little movement, and the purse in her hand slipped to the floor. Burnell bent to pick it up, and as he restored it to her she thanked him with a smile and a flash of sea blue eyes that fairly made him dizzy.

He looked wistfully at his painting kit in the rack above and wished that he was going to Boston to paint a picture of this girl. Instead of that of a wealthy Back Bay spinster whose generous fee would support him for a year.

"Will you please stop the sandwich boy?" she asked fluently.

The artist whistled sharply and when the boy came she bought a package of chicken sandwiches and a couple of oranges. Burnell winced as he saw her carefully counting the money from her shabby purse.

"It is the curse of everything!" he thought savagely, remembering some of his own shattered illusions. Then he returned to his newspaper, while the girl ate her lunch daintily by his side. After that she drew down her veil and leaned back in her corner, and Burnell thought she slept.

Hour after hour the train thundered through the night; occasionally they stopped at a brilliantly lighted station, and the car was gradually emptied of its passengers. After they had left Providence behind and were whirling on toward Boston Burnell left his seat and took a vacant one just behind it, where he alternately dozed and meditated. The girl in black slept soundly.

At 10:30 Burnell slipped his watch back in his pocket just as the girl in front awoke with a little start, looked about her in bewilderment and then at the empty seat at her side. She turned in the seat and lifted her veil, and her face brightened visibly as she met the artist's interested glance.

"Ten-thirty," he said pleasantly. "Why, what time shall we arrive in Providence?" she asked, with a carefully suppressed yawn.

"Providence! Why, madam, we will be in Boston in exactly thirty minutes."

A look of terror leaped to her eyes. "Oh, no, no; it cannot be," she cried. "I must have made a mistake. I wanted to go to Providence, not Boston! What shall I do?"

"That is easily remedied," said Burnell kindly, laying a strong hand on her trembling little fingers. "For you can take a train to Providence as soon as we arrive or wait until morning. Have you any friends in Boston?"

"Too many!" she shook her head doubtfully. "And, besides, I haven't any money. I spent the last for sandwiches. You see, Felix was to meet me in Providence and"—she flushed crimson and drew back in the seat as if she had divulged some secret.

Burnell's hand sought his pocket and withdrew a ten dollar note. It was half of all he had in the world until the portrait should be finished. "Take this. You can repay it when you join your friends. Here is my card." He thrust them into her hands.

"Oh, you are so kind. I shall never forget it," she murmured in a relieved tone. "I suppose I am horrible to accept assistance from a stranger, but if you only knew!"

"It is sufficient for me that you happen to be in need of it," returned Burnell, with his rare smile as he reached for his overcoat. "If you will permit me I will find out about the Providence train for you and see that you are safely aboard."

"Thank you, but I am sure that I can make the connection all right now," she pulled down the disguising veil and preceded him down the aisle of the car, for they were drawing into the Union station. The young painter saw his fellow traveler safely aboard the Providence train, and when the lights of the end car had disappeared in the darkness he walked thoughtfully back to the subway for a car to his hotel.

The next morning he called upon Leander Ridgely, the brother of the lady whose portrait he was to paint.

He found the great shipping magnate pacing restlessly about his beautifully appointed office.

"I'm sorry, Mr. Burnell," said Mr. Ridgely, as he shook hands with the painter and bade him be seated, "but my sister, Miss Malinda Ridgely, who was to sit for her portrait, is quite indisposed today and cannot see you. I trust she may be able to talk to you tomorrow."

"I trust her illness is not serious," remarked Burnell, rising to go, but the other waved him back into his seat.

"Don't go. I would be happy if you will dine with us tonight, though you will find us anything but cheerful company under the circumstances." He threw himself into a chair. "As you will see more or less of my family, I may as well take you into my confidence. At present we are in great trouble."

Burnell looked interested as he lighted the cigar Mr. Ridgely offered him.

"I have a daughter, an only child, a beautiful girl," said Mr. Ridgely, his voice trembling with emotion. "She has been reared with the greatest care, and my sister has been a second mother to Frances. Four weeks ago you can imagine how shocked we were when my daughter—she is only eighteen—confessed that she wanted to marry her music master, a young German, clever enough in his way, but of whose antecedents I know nothing. I forbade the match, of course, until the man could give some account of himself, but he must have exerted some influence over my daughter, for a few days after her confession of love for the musician Frances left home, taking only a small sum of money with her. She left a note saying that she would go away and earn her own living until Felix could afford to marry her."

"You can imagine our grief and consternation. Of course I put detectives on her track immediately, and she has been under surveillance ever since. It seems the fellow went to Providence to play in some orchestra there, and Frances has seen him only once since she went to New York. She has been working in a department store until yesterday afternoon; then I received word from my agent that she had left the employment of the firm and had told her landlady she was going to Providence to be married. Somehow Alden, my agent, lost sight of her, and she has slipped off to meet this fellow."

"If I only could catch her. I am sure she would listen to reason, for she loves us dearly, but her Ridgely pride has been roused, and I have been letting her fight it out alone, hoping she would tire of it and come back to us. But I let it go too long. This German chap undoubtedly is after her money as well as herself."

"I think I can help you out, Mr. Ridgely," exclaimed Burnell. "I believe your daughter came down on the train with me last night." And he related his adventure to the impatient father.

"It is Frances!" cried Mr. Ridgely, reaching for his hat. "I thank you a thousand times for your kindness to my child, Mr. Burnell. Now, if Alden will only come along we can get that 10:03 and reach Providence in time to prevent their marriage."

In five minutes the detective arrived, and as they hastened down to the station Mr. Ridgely told the story of Burnell's meeting with the girl in black and his knowledge of her having gone to Providence.

Burnell afterward learned from Mr. Ridgely's own lips what had happened. It seems that his daughter had grown somewhat disillusioned concerning her German lover, but her pride forbade that she give in, though her tender heart was breaking for a reconciliation with those whom she had loved and from whom she was now parted for the first time in her life.

Her correspondence with the young German was desultory and only served to emphasize the difference in their upbringing. At the end of three weeks Frances Ridgely admitted to herself that she was completely cured of this fatal fascination for her music master, but just then he wrote to her and urged that they be married at once. He had a steady position and could support them. His endearing epithets recalled once more the bliss of their first love-making, and the girl was momentarily stirred by his appeal and consented to go to Providence and marry him.

Mr. Ridgely and his agent arrived just in time to halt Felix Hermann on the steps of the girl's boarding place. She was standing in the doorway, gowned in that same shabby black dress in which Burnell had seen her. When she saw her father she fainted in his arms, and afterward they learned it was from pure joy at her release from her engagement.

Felix Hermann seemed to be relieved of a great responsibility when Frances returned to her father, and not long afterward he married a rich widow who was passionately fond of music.

Robert Burnell painted Miss Ridgely's portrait, but he did not meet Frances, who immediately went abroad with her father for change of scene after her escape. But he never gave up his hope of one day knowing her and transferring to canvas her beautiful face.

When she finally returned he renewed his acquaintance with her, and after her first embarrassment in his presence wore off he was overjoyed to receive a commission to paint her portrait.

So successful were the sittings that in the end the painter gave Mr. Ridgely the exquisite painting in exchange for the original, and his fellow passenger for life proved to be the same girl he had met on the train and assisted to elope with another man.

REFUSED TO LAUGH.

A Joke on Himself That Mark Twain Failed to Enjoy.

When Mark Twain was a resident of Hartford, Conn., he once called at the office of Dr. Swan, a local specialist of considerable repute, to consult him regarding a trivial ailment.

The physician was inclined to be rather arbitrary in his charges, was very independent and disliked exceedingly to be consulted in regard to minor ailments. In this instance he named a fee for his services that the economically minded Clemens thought excessive.

After a little argument Mr. Clemens declared that he would not pay any such price as the physician asked, and rose to leave. Just as he turned his back on Dr. Swan a voice said distinctly:

"Go along home, you old fool, you!" Instantly Mark Twain wheeled around, angry through and through. "What's that, sir?" he roared at the doctor. "What's that you say?"

With a smile that was cloying in its sweetness Dr. Swan pointed to a cage in the corner where his parrot was swinging and chuckling with birdish glee, and explained:

"That is the gentleman who spoke to you, sir." Somehow the explanation did not seem to reduce Mr. Clemens' anger very much, and he never entirely believed in Dr. Swan's innocence.—New York American.

THE FLY'S BALANCERS.

Without These Organs the Insect Would Tumble to the Ground.

The insects of the Diptera order, to which the common housefly belongs, have, as a rule, one pair of wings and rudimentary remnants of another pair in the form of a club shaped organ on either side of the thorax behind the wings. These organs are called "balancers" and, as experiments have shown, are indispensable in the maintenance of equilibrium.

A fly from which they have been removed cannot direct its flight, and it tries to fly from the edge of a table will immediately take a downward course, dropping to the floor on its head about three feet away and falling over on its back. Similarly, if it tries to fly from the floor after succeeding in getting on its feet again it will rise in the air two or three inches and then again tumble, striking its head and turning over on its back as before, but only about four inches from its starting point. Horizontal and ascending flight becomes absolutely impossible.

The similarity between these artificially produced insect mishaps and many an aeroplane accident is striking, and a study of why the removal of the fly's balancers causes it to upset may go a long way toward solving the problem in aeroplane construction.—Westminster Gazette.

Beware of Cousins!

Cousins are not as simple as they seem. The very fact of being a cousin, or having a cousin, is complicated. The inescapable fact of consanguinity is both ending and beginning. Cousins will be cousins, even if you did not choose them. They can borrow money from you, visit you without being asked, tell people they belong to your family, contest your will, even fall in love with you—and a cousin once removed is twice as apt to. Never completely trust a cousin. Never depend on his not doing any of these things. Never take him for granted. The "cousinly kiss" may or may not mean what it means. And cousins always do kiss. It's part of being cousins.

(Not that cousins need necessarily prove perilous. Once in a blue moon they invite you to Europe or leave you money, but that almost always takes an aunt or an uncle.)—Atlantic.

Cod Liver Oil From Sharks.

Shark spearing is a profitable industry in Malaysia, though attended by an element of danger and no little excitement. The chief value of the shark is its liver, which yields an oil that is refined in Europe and sold as cod liver oil. In October the ocean sharks come into the lagoon, between the barrier reef and the atolls, to pair. At this time they can be speared in large numbers by people skilled in catching them. There are several species of these sharks, and they ordinarily run from seven to fifteen feet in length. The liver of a shark of this size gives about five gallons of oil. The sharks are found in pairs, and the harpooners try to kill the male first, for they are then able to spear the female also, as it does not desert its mate.

Not a Total Wreck.

"What have you done with your play?"

"It didn't go as a farce, so I had some music composed and tried it as an opera, but it fell flat. Then I boiled it down into a vaudeville sketch, but nobody would touch it."

"Too bad. A total loss, eh?"

"Not total. There's one good joke in it; I can sell that for 50 cents."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Man's Big Mistake.

According to a German biologist, man made a mistake when centuries ago he changed himself from a quadruped to a biped, the contention being that many present day ills are due to carrying the spine in an upright position when it was intended to be carried horizontally.

Accounted For.

"The baby's awful bad," said Mabel. "Yes; they come bad on purpose. If they had hair they'd pull it all out, and then all that hair would be wasted."—Philadelphia Record.

TURKISH TITLES.

They Are Added to Persons' Names Instead of Being Preixed.

Turkish names and titles are sometimes confusing to the ordinary reader, and this explanation from the Turkish embassy at Washington may be of interest. In the first place, our American prefixes "Mr." or "General" become suffixes in Turkish. The mayor of a Turkish city adds to his name Bede Râisi. Therefore it would not be Mayor John Smith, but Smith Bede Râisi.

A caliph is a prince of the royal line and "Mohammed's representative," ranking next to the sultan himself in importance. The next title of importance is sheik ul Islam, or head of the Mohammedan faith. Imam is the title by which a priest is originally addressed.

Pasha is the highest title within the gift of the sultan. It is conferred chiefly on men who achieve distinction in arts and letters or in commerce and is more or less common among the great merchants of Turkey or those who under the old regime had a hand in the collection of taxes. The word "bey" attached to the name of a person indicates that the bearer is distinguished for service of the country. The term "effendi" indicates that the man so addressed is higher in birth, breeding or education than the man speaking and a variable title, depending on the rank of those carrying on a conversation.

The grand vizier, or suborhan, is the premier of the cabinet and is the highest of government civil officials. The governor of a province is known as vail. This term is added to the name instead of being prefixed.—Indianapolis News.

SINGING MOTHERS.

Charm of the Music of Their Voices to Their Little Ones.

They came to me in a dream—those singing mothers. A long, slow procession of shadowy forms, beautiful and mysterious and as wonderful, singing a strange haunting melody full of mystery. First came troops of girl mothers, clasping their little babes with a tenderness that was half fear and with wide, inquiring eyes filled with holy light and the consciousness of the deepest realization of life. Then came strong mothers of youth, leading happy-faced children and confident with a sense of power, buoyant with hope and radiant with promise. Last of all came silver mothers of men, leaning on their stalwart sons and, though bowed with years, yet gloriously young in spirit, hallowed by memories and glowing with the victory of achievement. And I, a mother, watching these pass by and listening to their haunting music, felt as never before the divine significance of motherhood and all the hidden meanings in the word "singing."

All this is music in a marvelous mood, but there is no music on earth more appealing or more far-reaching than the voice of a mother singing to her little ones. No audience ever listened with keener rapture to any prima donna than that little group gathered in the twilight hour at a mother's knee. It is her dearest joy at that time to put into music all the sacredness of motherhood and the happiness of childhood, to teach and to charm and to tune the hearts of her children.—Anne P. L. Field in Craftsman.

Wide Apart.

It is told us that two old schoolmates met recently. It had been fifteen years since their last meeting, but the recognition was mutual. One was sleek, well fed, well shaven, well dressed. The other was rather thin, rather seedy.

"Well, well," exclaimed the prosperous one; "what are you doing now?"

"I am an actor."

"Indeed? Well, I'm a banker. And you are on the stage? Dear me! It's been ten years since I was in a theater."

"You've got nothing on me. It's been longer than that since I was in a bank."

"Then they parted, each thinking a bit less of the other than he had thought before the meeting."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Solons in an Uproar.

Some years ago the Spanish cabinet decided to take legal proceedings against certain members of Parliament who were suspected of misappropriating money. The opposition resolved it all costs to prevent this, and for forty hours on end they kept up a most amazing uproar. They cheered and shouted, and sang hymns in chorus. The effect of the latter performance was extraordinary. One deputy would suddenly intone a verse, all his friends imitated the response, and so they went on for nearly two days and nights until a truce was proclaimed.—Pearson's Weekly.

Followed Instructions.

Mudge—This watch has been stop for two or three days. Jeweler—L me see it. There is nothing the matter with it except that it has not wound. Mudge—I thought maybe was it. I remember you told me wind it up just before I went to bed and I haven't been to bed for it nights.

A Gift on the Field of Battle

A Story of the Balkan War

By F. A. MITCHEL

One of those bloody battles between the allied Balkan forces and the Turks, near Adrianople, had been fought, and the latter had been defeated, but not without terrible cost to their enemies. From the field arose the mingled cries of Turks and Balkans, the former appealing to Allah to send them succor, the latter to the Christian God.

Two wounded Montenegrin soldiers lay side by side. One of them, whose leg had been shattered by a rifle ball, sat up and, pulling a little flask from his pocket, was about to take the single drink it contained when he saw the other, who seemed to be wounded unto death, looking at it longingly. A struggle arose within the man who possessed it. He would soon likely be carried off the field to recover from his wound, while the other gave evidence of being in a dying condition.

Both men craved the single dram that remained in the flask. To either it was more than untold wealth. But the possessor of the treasure could not withstand the look on the face of the other. Slowly, reluctantly, longingly, he reached out his hand and held it to his companion's lips, who drank it down greedily.

The latter closed his eyes for a few moments, then, seeming to gather strength, there came a regret that he should have been so weak as to accept a gift of what a fellow soldier needed for himself.

"Pardon," he said faintly, "the temptation was too strong for me; I couldn't resist it."

"You needed it far more than I. I will recover without it. It may be the means of saving your life."

"I would that I might live to reward you for your sacrifice, but I cannot; I am dying."

"Cheer up. Exercise your will power. Remember that there are those at home who love you and are looking for your return. This will pull you through."

"There is but one such person in the world—my wife—and she would prefer that I should never return."

"Do you mean it?"

"I do. She loved another. Fate deprived her of him and gave her to me. Our parents arranged a marriage between us. My heart was in it, but not hers. I have hated this man, though I have never seen him. I only know that he exists. But now, since I am about to die, all that has gone from me. I am even willing that my wife should be happy with him."

As he spoke the last words he passed into unconsciousness, while the attention of the other, hearing sounds of an approaching rescue party, was turned in another direction.

Darkness fell upon the battlefield, but only caused the cries of those lying there to sound more melancholy, as the whippoorwill sings sadder when the twilight has passed.

Lights appeared here and there, moving about from place to place as rescue parties relieved the wounded or carried them away to the hospitals. The man with the broken leg, supporting himself by an arm, looked eagerly at the lights, praying that some of them might come his way. A party drew near him and he called to them, but either there were too many such calls for them to heed his or he had not the strength to make them hear. At any rate they passed on, leaving him bleeding in the cold. He sank in a stupor, doubtless from loss of blood, from which he was aroused by a bright light which dazzled his eyes. Behind it was the dark figure of a soldier.

"This one is alive," said the man. "Bring a stretcher."

There was just enough animation in the sufferer to remember the companion to whom he had given his last drink of liquor, and he wondered if he still lived and would be carried off the field or would later be shoved with the other dead into a trench. But with bodily weakness both our finer and coarser feelings are benumbed, and he did not even ask the question. He was carried to a hospital—or, rather, a depot for the wounded—where surgeons were at work amid hundreds of poor wretches who were awaiting their turn to be examined. Finally a surgeon approached him, looked at his leg and at once began to amputate it.

Louis Nadler when he left the hospital did so with the help of a pair of crutches. He had made his contribution to the grim god of war in a leg and was reserved to die a natural death, for his fighting days were over. He sought his home in a little mountain village of Montenegro, where, with other of war's wrecks, he was received thankfully that he had returned at all by those who were near and dear to him. He would sit by the fireplace telling his friends of the battles in which he had fought and the privations he had endured.

One day a young widow who had lost her husband in the war came from a neighboring village to see Nadler. As she entered the room his eye lighted, and he exclaimed:

"Marya!"

"Louis!"

She approached the maimed man, who started to rise from his chair, but she hurried to him and gently prevented him from getting up. Sinking or her knees beside him, she suffered him to draw her closer to him.

"Alas," he said, "you are now free, but I—I am a worthless cripple. You will doubtless marry again, for you are young and comely, and again I shall suffer the pain of seeing you pass to the possession of another."

"I will never indict that upon you again."

"And I will not permit you to sacrifice a lifetime of comfort with husband and children for me. To be near you and not possess you would be a wretched existence for me. No. As soon as my wound permits I shall go away, perhaps to America, where they tell me that even such as I may earn enough to prevent his being a burden on any one."

"Louis, my life henceforth is yours. I shall take care of you and if necessary work for you. But that will not be necessary. My husband has left me a competency, enough to live the simple life to which we have been accustomed from our childhood. I have done my duty toward him so long as he lived, and now that he is dead what was his is mine, and I am sure he would not grudge me the comfort of sharing it with you."

Nadler made no reply. He was thinking of the words spoken by the soldier on the field of battle. "But now, since I am about to die, all that has gone from me. I am even willing that my wife should be happy with him." He recalled, too, the look on the man's face when he saw the flask containing that which would quench the horrible thirst and give him a little strength to bear his sufferings. And he rejoiced that he had conquered his own craving and bestowed the boon on his comrade.

Marya came often to see the maimed soldier, and while she rejoiced that she might minister to him he found in the ministrations of one he loved and who loved him a solace for his misfortune. His wound healed slowly, and since they were separated in their homes, her attendance upon him was inconvenient and difficult. In order that she might do more for him it was deemed better that they should be married and live under one roof.

Some shook their heads that a widow of but a few months should marry, but older persons approved of the plan, and the pair were made one.

And now to return to the soldier lying on the battlefield, who had accepted his comrade's last drink. The same rescue party who had succeeded his wounded comrade, thinking him dead, passed on. Another party, accompanied by a medical officer, came, and the surgeon, placing his ear over the soldier's heart, found that it still beat. He ordered a restorative and the man removed to a hospital.

There the soldier was revived, and when he had come to a condition to be questioned, an officer who was taking the names of the wounded asked his name.

The soldier hesitated. A faraway look was in his eyes, but the officer had no time to heed it.

"Your name?" he repeated impatiently.

"August Hehn."

The officer passed on, not knowing that the patient had not given the name that belonged to him.

Hehn, as he appeared on the hospital list, lay for weeks hovering between life and death. At last, pale and emaciated, he was discharged, not only from the hospital but from the army, and tottered toward his home. On the road he fell in with another discharged soldier limping along with his foot and head bound up, and the two journeyed together.

"I am going home," said the man to Hehn, "to my dear wife. I have done my duty by my country and have earned a reunion with her I love."

"I, too, am going home, to find—I expect—my wife with a former lover. I have doubtless been reported among the dead, since I gave a false name at the hospital."

"And what will you do if you find the case as you expect?"

"God knows!" replied Hehn.

When their paths separated the soldier said to Hehn: "Goodbye. I hope that you will find that your wife has loved you and remained true to you."

"Goodbye," was the reply. "I am prepared for the worst."

"Will you kill him?"

"I don't know."

Hehn, staggered on, stopping at times by the way to gather a little strength or perhaps to muse on the thought to know what he feared. He could not but envy his comrade who had come on to the woman of whose affection he had no doubt. And so one evening as dusk was falling he approached the village wherein was his home. He waited on the outskirts until the inhabitants were all within doors, then went on and, coming to his own house, looked in through a window.

A cheerful fire blazed on the hearth, but there was no one in the room. Presently a woman entered. A cold chill came over the watcher's heart, for there was no sign of mourning in her apparel. She put some logs on the fire, then drew an easy chair up before it. Leaving her apartment, she presently returned, her hand on the arm of a man walking by means of crutches.

The soldier without uttered a stifled cry.

The maimed man was he who had given him his last drink—the drink he was mad for, the drink that saved his life.

Recently a ship arrived at an American port on whose passenger list was the name of August Hehn. In Montenegro lives his wife, who supposes him dead. Neither she nor the man she believes to be her legal husband knows that they owe their happiness to the sacrifice of a little brandy on the field of battle.

Vanishing Seamen.

It used to be seamen. Now it is steammen. The change suits to a "t." The old time sailor has nearly vanished. Steam has put him out of the running. If a new Sir Joseph Porter were to come from the imagination of some new librettist he would no longer be told of gifted sailors "who could handle, reef and steer or ship a seavagant." There will be no present day Allingham to chant the glories of "the wet sheet and the flowing sea and the wind that follows fast to bend the willowy mast," for there are no longer sheets and masts enough to inspire his muse. For the matter of that, the entire song has gone out of sea life. When men "tripped anchors" and did it by manning a capstan and bending their backs rhythmically to the job, as the mate sang chauties to them, music counted as an exhilarant, but now steam winches lift the anchors and what would be the sense of singing to a mass of iron and steel?—Cleveland Leader.

Trees and Lightning.

The relation of trees to lightning, as shown by a bulletin of the United States forest service, does not wholly accord with popular beliefs. It is found that trees are the objects most often struck because they are the most numerous of all prominent objects, they offer a short course to the ground, and their spreading branches in the air and roots in the soil present an ideal conductor to the ground. Any kind of tree may be chosen by the lightning, the greatest number in any locality being found among the dominant species. The likelihood of any tree being struck is increased if it is taller than surrounding trees, is isolated, is on high land, is deeply rooted and if its condition—as when wet—makes it the best electrical conductor of the vicinity at the time of the flash. Lightning may set a forest fire by igniting the tree or—what is much more likely to be the case—the humus about the base.

First Recorded Alimony.

An Egyptian mummy now on exhibition in London was wrapped in papyrus which scholars have found to be covered with inscriptions. Among others is one which indicates that at least one lady of the pharaonic period failed to agree with her life partner. The document is a petition to the proper authorities for justice against a spendthrift and abusive husband. "When I married Heracleides," writes the petitioner, "I brought 200 drachmas as a dowry. Besides this, my husband, when he lost his property, found a home in the house of my parents. In spite of this, Heracleides, after he had run through my dowry, cursed me, beat me, deprived me of the necessities of life, wickedly deserted me and left me in misery. I pray you to force him to appear before you and to cause him to return to me the dowry I gave him increased by half."—New York American.

Turks First Banned Tobacco.

Tobacco was first carried into Turkey by English sailors, and its use was quickly prohibited. As in Russia, a tradition was discovered prohibiting its use by the faithful. Mohammed, it was said, had prophesied that in future ages some of his followers would smoke a herb called tobacco, but these would be unbelievers. Sultan Amurath IV. strictly prohibited its use. Search was made for smokers. Tobacco pipes were driven through their cheeks, and rolls of tobacco hung as collars around their necks. Thus arrayed they were mounted on asses, facing the wall, and driven through the streets as a warning to lusters after tobacco to be hanged.—New York Sun.

Euphemisms For Death.

"Decease" is now a regular form of word for death. But it began as a gentle euphemism, "decease" (departure) seeming much less harsh to the Romans than "mors." All languages abound in euphemisms of the kind, which go back to a superstitious reluctance to mention death plainly that gradually passed into a kindly desire to soften the idea. "Passed away," "departed," "gone," "expired" (breathed out), "no more," "demise" and even "the late" are expressions of this nature. Most striking of all is the Roman euphemism for "he is dead," "vixit" (he has lived).

A Sop to Her Conscience.

Hub (after a night out)—I feel like the two spot. I wish you'd telephone to the office that I'm in bed with the grip. Wife: That would be a lie. Hub:—How particular you women are! Fetch over that grip and lay it on the bed near my feet. There! Now will you telephone?—Boston Transcript.

Solitary Confinement.

The punishment which replaced the death penalty in Italy—namely, life imprisonment with solitary confinement—is considered to be much worse than death itself. Murderers sentenced to life imprisonment invoke death to end their sufferings. Isolation, complete in the very sense of the word—enforced idleness, lack of exercise and sufficient food and continual surveillance in a cell so small as to almost render any movement impossible—such is the fate of a murderer in Italy. Solitary confinement lasts for five long years, sometimes for ten, but convicts can hardly bear it for more than six months. Invariably they are insane long before the term expires, and often they commit suicide. The fear of solitary confinement acts as a preventive to murder as much as perhaps much more than that of capital punishment. It is quite true that the cases of murder have not diminished to any great extent in Italy since the abolition of the death penalty; but, on the other hand, they have not increased.—Chicago News.

German Justice.

A curious illustration of the principle of responsibility abroad is afforded by a civil damage suit growing out of the breaking of a plate glass window in a German town. A witness had testified as follows:

"As I was passing down the street in front of the window I saw a big stone come whirling through the air. I did not know whence it came. I saw it coming through the air, and I had just time enough to dodge to save myself from being hit by it."

The witness was sharply questioned upon the point whether the stone that broke the window would have struck him had he not dodged it. He was then dismissed. Eventually the decision of the magistrate was this:

"Inasmuch as if the witness had not unfortunately ducked his head the glass would not have been struck by the stone, he is hereby adjudged responsible for the breaking of the window and is ordered to pay to the owner the value of the same."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Bees Stick to One Flower.

It is usually supposed, especially by the poets, that bees sip sweets indiscriminately from many a flower. He wooed the Poppy and weds the Peach, Inveigles Daffydowndilly; And then, a deserter, abandons each For the petals of the Lily.

The seasons appear rather mixed in the verse, which in other respects, however, reflects the popular belief about bees. It is far from being the true one.

All bees, including the honey bee, show a strong tendency in collecting both nectar and pollen to be constant to one species of flower. This is manifestly for the advantage of both insects and flowers. In the case of a number of bees flying for only a small part of the season this habit has become so specialized that they visit only one of a few allied species of flowers which offer an abundance of pollen and nectar.—London Post.

Moving Pictures in Japan.

The Japanese take the moving picture with the seriousness befitting the national character. They enjoy it thoroughly, but they like it best when it makes them sad. The favorite theme is the allegorical play that represents the warrior fighting for righteousness. Next in popularity comes the pathetic picture. The strictly educational film is also popular, and there is always applause for good scenery. But the love story is never represented in the Japanese moving picture. It would be an outrage to modesty and a violation of decency and therefore intolerable. Pictures derogatory to the dignity of officials and of policemen are forbidden, as well as those likely to instill revolutionary ideas in the minds of the young.

A Dangerous Precedent.

The best case which I have seen of law versus justice and common sense is one which Montaigne relates as having happened in his own day. Some men were condemned to death for murder. The judges were then informed by the officers of an inferior court that certain persons in their custody had confessed themselves guilty of the murder in question and had told so circumstantial a tale that the fact was placed beyond all doubt. Nevertheless it was deemed so bad a precedent to revoke a sentence and show that the law could err that the innocent men were delivered over to execution.—London Graphic.

By Comparison.

"Sny, mamma, my teacher'd make a bully highwayman!" exclaimed a boy as he rushed in from school.

"Why, Freddy, what in the world do you mean?" inquired his astonished mother.

"Why, she's always telling the children to 'hold up their hands.'"—Judge's Library.

Took the Count.

"Robby, you have been fighting with that Stapleton boy again. Did you count ten before you struck him, as I have always told you to do?"

"No, but I was told that somebody counted ten after he landed on me."—Chicago Tribune.

A Woman's Age.

THE PERILS OF OUR NATIONAL LIFE.Sermon Preached by Rev. Henry E.
Hodge of First Baptist Church.

At the First Baptist Church last Sunday morning, the pastor, Rev. Henry E. Hodge, took for his subject "The Perils of Our National Life." The sermon met with the approval of those present, it showing in a forceful manner the trend of present conditions, and the Star has been asked to give it a wider circulation through its columns.

2 Timothy 3: 1. "This know also that in the last days perilous times shall come."

I have a personal conviction that we are now in the last days to which the great Apostle refers in the text. I have a feeling that the "one far-off divine event to which all creation moves" is not far away. And my conviction is based on three facts: First, Nearly all the prophecies of Jesus with reference to events preceding His Second Coming have been fulfilled. Second, The singular prophecy of J. Hudson Taylor in China in 1896, When he was expounding a Psalm to a company of missionaries he suddenly stopped, looked up from his notes and said with all solemnity: "Brethren, I have a conviction which I believe is of the Lord, that in the next ten years there will occur one of the bloodiest wars in the world's history. In this war Russia will be the leader on the one side. The sentiment of the Christian nations will generally be against Russia. Contemporaneous with this conflict there shall burst out a revival such as was never known in the Christian Church, and which shall spread throughout the world, turning many to righteousness. And, my brethren, it is moreover my conviction that immediately following this mighty outpouring of the Holy Spirit, the Lord Himself will come." I have been deeply impressed with this prophecy, because it came from such a mighty man of God who has had such wonderful answers to prayer. Two parts of that prophecy have been fulfilled; and now will the third part be fulfilled? Third, The remarkable world movements of the present day are indicative of the fact that we are in the last days. There never was a day when world-wide reforms had such victories as today, or world-wide missions had such triumphs. We are soon to celebrate one hundred years of peace between Anglo Saxons. And in the great foreign immigration movement I see signs that God is getting in a hurry to close up matters with this little world of ours for He is sending great crowds to our shores in order that they may get the Gospel and take it back to their lands. For these reasons I feel that we are in the last days.

Now Paul tells us in the text that "in the last days perilous times shall come." It is fitting on this day so near to our National Holiday that we should turn our thought to the perils of our national life. Into whatever realm of national life we look we find perilous times.

In the realm of politics we find perils. This is attested by the Alien-Land Law in California, which has caused our Government so much anxiety of late, and which has occasioned our Secretary of State to put forth his utmost diplomatic ability in answering the pointed questions of Japan. This peril in politics is further seen in the revelations of the Senate Lobby Inquiry going on in Washington.

In the realm of industries we find grave perils. Whether on tomorrow thousands of people will have to walk, because of the Elevated strike no one knows. In Ipswich the I. W. W. are stirring up trouble. The Lawrence strike is still fresh in our minds. Out in San Diego some months ago Prof. John Graham Brooks saw the I. W. W. methods, and he said that he looked through a little window right into another French Revolution. The I. W. W. are the militants in the American labor world, and America will have a hard fight to put them into subjection. In the realm of finance we find perils. We are told that a "silent panic" is going on. Money is hard to get. But the Government is putting forth measures to relieve the stringency.

In the realm of the home we find perils. One fact tells a long story, that one family in every twelve in our country is broken up by divorce. What about the children of these broken families when they have families? Will they be any more true to the holy marriage vow?

In the realm of social disease and heredity we find grave perils. Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis of Brooklyn has recently preached a sermon on this subject, and from that sermon I give a few specimen sentences, as follows: "A wave of immorality has swept over the country. Medical journals are filled with danger signals. Every time the population doubles, the insane portion quadruples, and it is only a question of

THE FOURTH.

The 4th of July passed off this year as the quietest on record. Little noise, no accidents and a hot, bright day combined to make it so. To anyone visiting the centre during the day the town had the appearance of being almost deserted, the usual Sunday gathering on the common and about the door-ways being a mob in comparison to the silent streets and one or two persons waiting for cars.

The sports in the morning attracted the children to Manchester held, and the following won the prizes.

50 yd. dash for boys under 14 years—won by John Plummer, Clarence Mackesy second, Winthron Faulkner third.

50 yd. dash for girls—won by Mabel Gray, Sarah Cady second, Lillian Gray third.

100 yd. dash for boys over 14—won by James Penialigan, Wray Rohman second, Leslie Johnston third.

Relay race 60 yds.—won by James Penialigan, Louis Goddu and Leslie Johnston.

Three legged race for boys under 14—won by George Beaudreau and John Plummer, Allan McElhiney and John Boyle second.

Potato race for girls—won by Dorothy Edwards, Elinor McLaugh second, Mabel Gray third.

Running bases, boys over 14—won by James Penialigan, Francis Getty second, J. Horn third.

Running bases, boys under 14—won by John Plummer, Ray Newhall second, Allan McElhiney third.

Back and forth relay race for girls—won by Elinor McLaugh, Mabel Gray, Lillian Gray and Sarah Cady.

Sack race—won by Clarence Mackesy, Frank Edwards second, Clarence Young third.

Running broad jump—won by Leslie Johnston, distance 19 ft. 9.34 in. Louis Goddu second, 16 ft. 6.34 in. James Penialigan third, 18 ft. 1.4 in.

The judges were Horatio C. Rohman, James N. Penialigan and Hugh McDonald. George Cummings was official starter.

The ball game in the afternoon proved to be somewhat disappointing, and for the first time in a number of years the local team lost.

The fireworks attracted a large crowd as always, many persons remaining at their home during the heat of the day attending the display. During the afternoon and in the evening a band played selections, giving a program of light selections during the ball game and operatic music preceding the fireworks. The display of fireworks was as usual very good and greatly enjoyed by those who witnessed it, everyone wishing it was twice as large.

LIGHTNING STRUCK BARN.

The heavy, though short thunder storm which passed over the town on Sunday shortly after noon struck the barn on the estate of Mr. Francis J. O'Hara on Mystic avenue. The bolt ripped off shingles, damaged the cupola and passed from the roof to the cellar of the barn, leaving blackened wood to show its trail. One horse was in the barn at the time, but very fortunately it was not injured.

The storm approached very rapidly accompanied by much thunder, and many persons were caught in the down-pour. The storm was very violent while it lasted, the wind blowing a hurricane and the rain falling in sheets, but it proved of short duration, about three-quarters of an hour witnessing the sun out once more. The excessive heat continued for a time after the rain, but the temperature rapidly dropped during the afternoon, and the evening was very comfortable.

Many streets and walks were washed out and the trees suffered considerably by having branches broken.

VEGETABLE WAGON SMASHED

Cullen's vegetable wagon was smashed at the foot of Lebanon street yesterday morning, when the heavy wagon got away from the horse going down the hill. Mr. Leslie D. Pushee was going up Washington street in his touring car, starting on his vacation. He saw the heavily loaded wagon coming down the hill and stopped his car, going to the opposite side of the road. The wagon went straight across the street until the horse came in contact with the standing auto, then the animal turned at right angles. The shafts broke and the front wheels gave way, the horse clearing himself and running up the bank at the opposite side of the street. The auto was not injured and Mr. Pushee continued on his way. The wagon was badly damaged and the boys riding on it were thrown out when the horse managed to turn. They were not hurt.

CONNOLLY—O'DONNELL.

Miss Mary Connolly was united in marriage on Tuesday evening to Mr. Michael O'Donnell of Boston at St. Michael's parochial residence, by Rev. Father Corbett.

The couple were attended by Miss Mary Connolly of Woburn, a cousin of the bride and Mr. Martin Connolly, her brother, was best man. Following the ceremony a reception was tendered to about 50 friends and relatives of the couple at their future home at 6 Richardson street. An orchestra was in attendance. The groom is a stationery fireman in a large sugar refinery in Boston.

BASE BALL.

The town team will play the strong St. Eulalia team of South Boston on Manchester Field tomorrow afternoon at 3.30.

SELECTMEN'S MEETING.

Business Transacted at Monday Evening's Session.

July 7, 1913.
The Board met at 7.30 p. m., all present.

In the matter of improving conditions at the tanneries Mr. Jewett reported and recommended that the matter be further attention. The report was accepted.

In the matter of installing hand rails on the Town Hall steps the Committee on Town Hall reported that they had made plans for the same but were deferring action until they could learn whether any balance would be available from their appropriation.

Mr. John F. Donaghey, 5 Sheridan circle, was nominated as ballot clerk; the nomination to hold over one week under the rules.

The Chief of Police reported that Daniel Dineen had passed the civil service examination for the police force and that his name was now on the eligible list.

In the matter of accident on the Boston and Maine R. R. whereby a train was derailed from the Woburn Loop, June 19th, Robert H. Newcomb of the New York, New Haven and Hartford R. R. Co., wrote that the incident was merely one of those emergencies which occasionally arise in the operation of a grade railroad and one in which the prompt and intelligent action of the tower man saved a serious development and that it was not probable that a similar situation would arise again in a decade, and the clerk was instructed to reply that inasmuch as the Town's grade crossing was located below the point in question, any accident there would seriously interfere with public travel regardless of any damages which the Railroad might incur, also that the town should be advised as to what steps have been taken by the railroad to prevent the occurrence of similar accidents in the future and would appreciate more definite reply to the request of this board.

A circular letter was received from the State Forester calling attention to the change in date of appointment of Superintendent and Forest Wardens from "March or April" to "January," and referred to the Committee on Elections.

The Clerk was instructed to write to the Tree Warden asking him to trim trees about the lights on Bacon, Oxford, Church and Webster streets.

Permission was asked to cross the Town Hall lot with refuse material from the shores of the pond during the process of clearing up neighboring premises and the desired permission was granted.

A letter was received and filed from A. E. Myers, Superintendent of the Bay State Street Railway Co., under date of July 2nd, stating that instructions had been given their Engineer to prepare a plan of the proposed turnout in Forest street as requested by this board July 1st.

Attention was also called to the unsatisfactory manner in which the work on Forest street had been left by the Highway Company and this matter was referred to the Committee on Ways and Bridges.

In the matter of petition received June 9th, for a sidewalk on Main street from the Ice Bridge to the Woburn Line, the Committee on Ways and Bridges recommended that a gravel sidewalk be constructed northwesterly from the Ice Bridge. The construction to be made later in the year provided funds were available for the purpose; the estimate of the Town Engineer presented June 3rd being $125. to $150. based on a walk 9 feet wide. The report was accepted.

In the matter of the request presented June 30th, the Town Engineer reported that he had gone over the matter of connection of drains with the property at Sumner's Corner and recommended that the desired permission to connect with the town drains at that point be granted.

The Town Engineer also recommended that the grade plans for the proposed streets be placed on file for future reference so that in case changes of grade were made they might be compared with the plans to be filed when the work was done. Plans of the layout of these streets should also be filed with this board so that they may be at hand for use in laying out sewers, water mains, etc. The matter was referred to the Committee on Ways and Bridges for report to this board July 14th.

In the matter of protest received June 30th, against relocating the street light in Webster street as voted June 23rd, the Committee on Street Lights reported that they had again viewed the location in company with the town Engineer and Mr. Howard of the Edison Electric Illuminating Company, and had ordered the Edison Company to move the light as previously voted subject to ratification by this board. The report was accepted and action approved.

In the matter of the steps from the house at the corner of Glen road and Church streets which projected into the sidewalk about a foot according to the report of the Town Engineer presented June 30th, Mr. Jewett reported that the trustee for the property had agreed with the committee to have the town move the steps back and regrade the edge of the lot; the expense to be charged to the abutting estate. The report was accepted.

The Committee on Ways and Bridges reported that they had requested the Arlington Gas Light Co. to give immediate notice concerning any proposed opening of Main street between the Bedford line and Madison avenue, also Lawson road and Lakeview road, and their action was approved.

A petition was received from the Edison Electric Illuminating Company of Boston for permission to construct and maintain underground conduits and manholes with the necessary wires and cables therein under the surface of Church street at Lewis street, a distance of about 65 feet, and assigned for hearing July 21st. The matter was referred to the Committee on Ways and Bridges and the Town Engineer to arrange some plan whereby all street openings required for underground service to the Lewis property might be made at one time.

Notice was received from the Recorder of the Land Court pursuant to section 31 of Chapter 128 Revised Laws of the pendency in that Court of a petition for the registration of land on Highland avenue, in which petition the petitioner asks to have the line of the way determined. The matter was referred to the Town Engineer for report as a basis for action by the Town Council.

Through Mr. Davidson, a resident of Hancock street asked permission to drain from his land to the drain on Hancock street. Referred to the Town Engineer.

The Clerk was instructed to call the attention of the School Board to the necessity existing for a catch basin at the Wadleigh School to connect with the town drain on Mr. Vernon street, and to ask immediate attention to the matter as this board intends to lay granolithic on the southerly side of that street from Washington street to Ash street.

Adjourned at 10.45 p. m.

Frank R. Miller,
Clerk of the Board.

A LAND SALE REQUIRING 14 YEARS.

Fourteen years ago, Mr. H. E. Butler made an offer to Mr. G. E. Smith for a certain piece of land on Hancock street. The offer was refused by the latter at that time, but since then the dickering has gone on at intervals, but neither seemed inclined to give in to the other. On the Fourth Mr. Smith came to Winchester and called upon Mr. Butler, and in the course of conversation the land question came up again. Mr. Smith found that the latter was still of unchanged mind, and as it was the last chance to dispose of the land to him he gave in and sold it for exactly the same price per foot as Mr. Butler offered fourteen years ago. It is seldom that such a prolonged transaction is heard of.

The taxes paid and the loss of interest during all these years would figure up to quite a sum, and besides the land has increased much in value, situated as it is on an excellent residential street Mr. Butler will not the land down to potatoes for the present so as to put it in condition.

MISS CATHERINE
E. SHERIDAN.

Miss Catherine E. Sheridan died at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Sheridan, No. 11 Cambridge street, Wednesday after an illness of four or five months. She was 29 years of age.

Besides her parents she leaves three brothers, Matthew, Philip and John, and two sisters Louise and Annie. The young woman had recently taken the veil of the sisters of St. Joseph at Canton.

The funeral services will be held this Friday morning at 9 o'clock, with solemn requiem high mass at St. Mary's Church. The interment will be at Calvary cemetery, Montvale.

Miss Gretchen Avery of Glen road has had as her guest her cousin, Miss Helen Gifford of Fall River for the past few days. Miss Avery left Winchester on Tuesday for the Adirondacks, where she will be the guest of Miss Alice Cutting at her father's camp.

EXPRESS STRUCK AUTO

Freeland L. Huston Saved Life by Jumping at Centre Crossing.

With a shriek of its whistle and a crash heard all over the square, the locomotive of a Boston bound express struck an automobile on the centre crossing just before eight o'clock Monday evening and reduced it to junk. The sole occupant of the touring car was Freeland L. Huston of 6 Hancock street. He saved his life by jumping.

The accident was witnessed by many persons, the centre being well filled with people at the time, and the stories of the affair all vary in many details.

It would seem that Mr. Huston, who had been to the railroad station for a trunk, came up Common street and turned to cross the tracks, not noticing that the gates were down. The front of his car passed under the gates, which struck the windshield, bending it back against him. When he felt the impact of the gates he stopped his car, about half of it being on the track in front of the approaching express.

Patrolman Daniel P. Kelley, who was in the square, ran towards the scene calling for Huston to jump. Huston scrambled out of the auto, falling on his hands and knees and rolling to one side just as the locomotive struck the car. It is said that but for officer Kelley's prompt call Huston would have been struck also, as he appeared bewildered by being caught between his windshield and the gate.

The locomotive threw the auto, which was an Oakland touring car, to one side just below the gate post, part of it being carried half way to the station. The train was the second section of the express due about quarter of seven, it being over an hour late. The engineer saw the auto and applied his emergency brakes, bringing the train to a stop in about three car lengths. It is said that the speed of the train was greatly reduced when it struck the auto.

Mr. Huston was a little bruised, but otherwise not hurt. The auto was smashed into junk and the gates and post on the south-west side smashed.

It is said that the lamps on the auto were not lighted and also that the arc light which illuminates this end of the crossing was out, which two facts prevented the driver from noticing that the gates were lowered. The lights on the gates are reported to have been lighted. Stories on these points differ.

Mr. Huston's mother was killed at the Winchester station a few years ago.

AGED WOMAN RESCUED AT CROSSING.

But for the prompt action of John Arrell, foreman of the section gang on the railroad, Mrs. Catherine Hoban would have been struck by the locomotive of the 8.30 train from Woburn last Saturday morning. The aged woman, 92 years old, was crossing the tracks at the centre. She stooped under the gates, which were down, and evidently did not know the train was rapidly approaching. The engineer whistled and applied his emergency brakes, but could not stop his train in time to prevent striking her.

Gateman Timothy Callahan started to run to pull her off the track, but John Arrell, who was on the opposite side of the crossing, was the quickest. He caught her in his arms as he ran in front of the rapidly approaching train and swung her to one side just as the locomotive, with brakes set, slid by.

Bystanders were loud in their praise of Arrell's quick action and bravery. The aged woman was bewildered and did not know which way to turn. But for his prompt action she would have undoubtedly lost her life.

CHILD KILLED BY AUTO LAST NIGHT.

Florence Rosslev, aged 4, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas I. Rosslev, of 184 Cambridge street was run over and killed at 8.15 last night by an automobile driven by George M. Leghorn of 296 Newbury street, Boston.

The Rosslev child was killed in front of her home. She was playing with her older sister, Elizabeth, in the yard and ran into the street directly in front of the machine. Her sister tried to catch her but was unsuccessful. The automobile passed over the child's head crushed her skull.

Mr. Leghorn picked up the child and helped carry her into the house. Dr. Richard W. Sheehy was called, but the little one was dead when he arrived.

Mr. Leghorn went to the police station, accompanied by Patrolman William H. Rogers, and surrendered to Chief McIntosh. He was charged with manslaughter. George S. Littlefield, Associate Justice of the 4th Middlesex District Court was called and set bail at $2000, which was furnished by John H. Bates of Woburn.

Leghorn will be arraigned in the 4th Middlesex District Court at Woburn, this morning.

FOREIGN PASTOR HERE.

Rev. A. W. Clark, D.D., who speaks at the union services in the Baptist Church Sunday morning is the missionary representative of the First Congregational Church in this town, a relation which he has held for many years.

Dr. Clark's work has been in Prussia, Austria, for forty-one years. His accomplishment has been unique along evangelical lines and in encouraging Bible study. He reaches a class of people that are entirely out of touch with the church. The story he has to tell is both fascinating and instructive. Dr. Clark, who is a native of Vermont, is a veteran of the Civil War and fought on the field of Gettysburg. He came home primarily to attend the Gettysburg reunion. His work in Prussia demands his personal attention so that he must return in a few days. He is able to give Winchester only this one day, that is next Sunday.

TENDERED A FAREWELL PARTY.

Miss Bessie Bresnahan of Oak street was tendered a farewell party Monday evening by a number of her friends, and presented with a handsome gold watch pin.

A very pleasant evening was enjoyed vocal and instrumental selections being rendered, and games played after which a collation was served.

Miss Bresnahan leaves Winchester to make her home in Somerville.

BASE BALL.

YOUR AFFAIRS AND MINE.

"The responsibility of the churches in watching the coming of the young men from the country, and taking them under their fostering care cannot be overestimated," declared a Winchester dominie to The Spectator. "Hundreds of young men, well trained at home, ready for active service on the world stage, come to our cities every year. They are strangers to city life, having no conception of its dangers; entirely unfitted to meet its temptations; easily led into its paths of virtue or vice. I venture to say that if they met at the threshold of their city experience with a warm welcome by the churches, and made to feel that their coming was expected and their services really wanted, they will shun the glitter of evil and lead helpful lives in the community. But if they are left to find their own way into city society, the chances are that the runners of the different agencies of destruction will secure them."

It always does the heart of The Spectator good, to see the aged honored. Old people should be treated with respect. Their comfort should be carefully studied, and their intimacies carefully soothed. The aged should be honored because they have generally a claim on our gratitude. Perhaps some feeble, decrepit old father, whom the thoughtless son may be inclined to ridicule and despise, has, in days that are past, nurtured his infancy, or rescued his heedless steps from danger, or administered a medicine that was the means of saving his life, or in some way or other been instrumental in giving him a good education or introducing him to some advantage in society which he now enjoys. Outward infirmities do not necessarily entangle the mind, and much valuable instruction may often be derived from persons laboring under the weakness and sufferings of age. "Days should speak, and multitude of years should teach wisdom." The Spectator believes young people might find it greatly to their advantage to listen to the experience of the aged, and to treasure up and improve their observations—to ask and to attend to their counsels, rather than to follow the dictates of their own ignorance and self-conceit. How is it between you and your parents? Perhaps they are gone—they no longer need your kindness. But if they still live and your heart tells you that you have not showed them all the tenderness and respect which you might have done, begin this day to endeavor to soothe their few remaining, painful days. The pleasures of earth are going from them. You and your children are in health, cheerfully looking on to prosperity and many happy days of joy; but your aged parents eyes are closing to all things under the sun. Life and its joys are become tasteless. Pay them back liberally the debt of gratitude you owe. "And as ye would that your children should do unto you, do ye even so unto your parents."

That the business men of Winchester appreciate the value of newspaper publicity the advertising columns of The STAR show. The progressive Winchester merchant who has something to sell considers it his first duty to let the people of Winchester, know just what he has to offer. The value of advertising has been demonstrated so often as to admit of no doubt. Printer's ink wisely used is the safest and surest ally of the merchant, who has any article of value which he wishes to dispose of. As a rule the man in business who cannot afford to advertise will soon be out of business. The newspaper is the cheapest and most effective solicitor for the person who uses its columns. No man who has anything of value to sell or who wants to buy anything, not easily found can afford to ignore it. The same rule applies to communities. Winchester could well afford to spend several hundred dollars annually in advertising to the people of New England the splendid advantages of our location, the opportunities for successful manufacturing, and the hospitable welcome Winchester is ready to extend to those who may be inclined to seek new homes in a town of abounding opportunities. It is by just such methods that other communities have grown into flourishing cities, with far fewer advantages than are found here in Winchester. Why cannot a trial be made? A few circulars sent here and there do not meet the case. Use the newspapers and "Winchester's Boom" will be seen by many thousands.

A FAILURE.

The sports on Manchester Field on the morning of the Fourth were flat. Time and again during the past few years this has been proved. But few persons attend including children, and the prizes go to the same ones year after year. Older people do not attend and only those children who are interested brave the heat and glaring sunshine to be present. These sports are not worth while.

Some years ago Mr. John H. Carter and the editor of the STAR, through the aid of popular subscriptions, gave children's entertainments in the Town Hall. There was only one drawback and that was the seating capacity of the hall. The hall was packed with children and their parents. All enjoyed the entertainment; the children looked forward to it with high anticipations and they were not disappointed, neither were their parents. The show was good, there were no perquisites, and every cent went to the amusement of the children.

Why not try one of the entertainments in the Town Hall next Fourth. If one entertainment will not take in all the children and their parents have two, one in the morning and the other in the afternoon. Have the Declaration of Independence read followed by singing of the "Star Spangled Banner," and after that a first class vaudeville entertainment. Supt. of Schools Herron will provide the reader for the Declaration of Independence.

Such entertainment would prove much more popular than the sports on Manchester Field, and besides children of all ages could attend in comfort. As a scholar in the Boston Schools, with how much pleasure we look back to these entertainments, no one can tell, and the children of today are no different than those of forty years ago. Try it, Messrs. Selectmen next year.

WINCHESTER A GOOD THIRD.

The Winchester Boat Club members entered their new war canoe, received from Stevens of Bath, Me., a few days ago, in its first race on the morning of the 4th, when they made up a crew and entered the N. E. A. R. Association championship's regatta at the Charles River Basin.

Winchester finished a good third, the race being won by Waltham, with Cocheco about two lengths behind and Winchester following a like distance. The Crescent Club of Waltham finished fourth. The race was a contest between Waltham and Cocheco for the entire distance, Waltham winning by a spurt in the last quarter.

The Winchester crew was made up as follows: F. Leroy Pratt, stroke, Frank H. Gerlach, William M. Little, Carl B. Elliott, Leon Tuck, George Freeman, John Sheridan of Winchester Boat Club, and Edward Trott and Arthur Mather of Medford.

A small crack in the large plate glass window of the corner shoe store spread from the bottom to top last Thursday night on the Mt. Vernon street side. Fearing that the glass might fall out and injure someone, Chief McIntosh had the window boarded up. The break was caused by the glass settling in the frame.

Miss Nina Somers of Orient street is at North Truro, Mass.

OAKLAND

Model 42 Oakland

MODEL 42 five-passenger touring car is bound to create a deep impression before the season is far advanced. It embodies sound engineering principles and possesses enough meritorious innovations to distinguish it from the common type of touring car. The body has a number of daring lines which stamp it as an individual design, and the aluminum steps, shroud and V-shaped radiator give the car a dashing appearance. Oaklands are made in four and six cylinder types—$1000 to $3000—four, five and seven passenger touring car, limousines, coupes and roadsters.

WINCHESTER TEAMS TOOK PRIZES IN WOBURN PARADE.

The Winchester Laundry Company captured two prizes in the parade at Woburn on the 4th, being awarded first prize, the white ribbon, for the best single turn-out and second prize for the trader's turn-out. The Winchester firm had twelve of its wagons and two auto delivery trucks in the parade.

It Cures While You Walk.

Use Allen's Foot-Ease, the antiseptic powder to be shaken into the shoes. It instantly takes the sting out of corns, itching feet, ingrowing nails and bunions. It's the greatest comfort discovery of the age. Allen's Foot-Ease makes tight or new shoes feel easy. Ladies can wear shoes one size smaller after using. It is a certain relief for sweating, callous and swollen, tender, aching feet. Try it to-day. Sold everywhere, 25c. Trial package FREE. Address, Allen S. Olmsted, Le Roy, N. Y.

The shortage of the late bookkeeper of the East Cambridge house of correction and jail has, upon a thorough auditing, been found to reach the sum of $37,074.38. It is hardly conceivable that such a tax system could exist all these years that would allow such a defalcation without detection. That it could and did exist calls for a most rigid inquiry to ascertain who is to blame for such a situation of affairs, and the adoption of measures to prevent its repetition. If such looseness prevails in that one department of county affairs may it not prevail in others? Suspensions of slack and unbusinesslike methods in county affairs have long prevailed, and now that tangible evidence of wrong has been unearthed nothing should prevent a most searching probe. This the state, through its commission on economy and efficiency, has undertaken.—Cambridge Chronicle.

A PLEASANT OUTING.

Newspaper Men Visit Portland Harbor and Its Islands.

The annual outing of the Massachusetts Press Association and Suburban Press Association was held this season at Peak's Island, in Portland harbor. Me. The members and their ladies gathered at the Boston wharf on Friday, June 27th and boarded the steamer Gov. Dingley of the Eastern Steamship Company, a beautiful boat with every comfort for the passengers, and enjoyed the day sail to Portland. The day was a perfect one and the sail was a delightful social time for the members who renewed old acquaintance. The General Passenger Agent, Mr. H. H. Cudworth, went along with the party showing particular attention to all. After a pretty sail among the islands of about twenty minutes Peak's island was reached when Mr. Ralph E. Rowe the genial proprietor of the Peak's Island House greeted the guests and assigned the rooms for the five days' stay. The island is much larger than we supposed, having a shore front of about six miles. It is beautiful and visitors from all over the United States spend their summers there. Many cottagers spend the year there, some 700 being registered as residents. Saturday the members were guests of the Portland Street Railway Co. and had a special car in which to see the city. The principal interesting points of the city were visited, notably the new million dollar city hall, a magnificent white marble and granite building with an auditorium seating 1800 people and containing the largest and finest pipe organ in the world which was a gift to the city by Cyrus H. K. Curtis the owner of the Ladies' Home Journal, in memory of Mr. Herman Kotschman a dear friend. Portland is the birthplace of Mr. Curtis. This organ contains about 5000 pipes, is 60 feet wide, 15 feet deep and 40 feet high and has nearly 100 miles of electric wire in its electric action. It cost the city $23,000 to simply install the instrument. Free organ concerts are given each Sunday afternoon, the organist receiving a salary of $5000 per year. It was our pleasure to hear the sweet tones of this magnificent instrument. We also enjoyed the scenery of Riverton Park on the river front, about six miles out of the city.

After lunch the party boarded the launch Alpine and sailed among the many islands of Casco Bay. The return to the island was made in time for dinner, after which all enjoyed a dance, which Manager Rowe had arranged in the large hall of the hotel which was well adapted to the purpose. It was surprising to see how nimble and graceful some of the older members danced the old fashioned dances, showing that they had not forgot the old days. Also some new steps were noticed. Sunday many went to the main land to church. Afterwards a trip by a Bay line steamer was made to Orr's Island where Harriet Beecher Stowe received her inspiration to write "The Pearl of Orr's Island," and the Pearl house is the mecca for thousands of tourists each year. The trip is a sail of 30 miles among the beautiful islands of the bay with their tree-covered slopes, the fir balsams coming down to the water's edge and hundreds of summer camps peeking out here and there from among the foliage. The boat makes a stop at most of the larger islands and after a three hour's sail reached the landing at Orr's Island.

It was a jolly crowd who sat down to a shore dinner at a hotel at the boat landing and did justice to the steaming clams, etc. Mr. Chester Robbins, of Oldtown, Me., for many years a member of the Association, made this trip particularly interesting, by pointing out and explaining many interesting facts of the trip. One was Eagle Island, the summer home of Capt. Peary of Arctic fame. It is one of the most picturesque islands of the bay, and it is said Capt. Peary allows his Eskimo dogs to roam at will, and they often swim over to other islands, but always return home at night.

Monday morning Mr. Robbins arranged a trip for the party to Old Orchard Beach, a sixteen mile trolley ride from Portland. This was a beautiful ride, and on arriving at Old Orchard town, the party was agreeably surprised in being met by Messrs. Frank A. Elliott, publisher and Isaac F. Ferris, managing editor of the "Sun Echo." With them was Mr. W. M. Davis one of the prominent residents and in about twenty minutes' time after they had heard the Press people were coming they had enlisted a lot of kindly automobile owners and hotel proprietors, to give the party the hospitalities of Old Orchard. The stay was to be short, but these were live, hurry up people, so in the autos the editorial folks were whirled through the attractive seaside settlement getting a good idea of the place, where thousands of summer visitors pass the season in the cottages and fine, large hotels. A view was had of the great pier extending far into the sea, whence the semi-circular beach could be seen reaching away for miles on either side. A finale to this flying visit, the piazzas of the breezy Brunswick Hotel were an assembling place, before which the blue waters of the bay were sweeping up the beach under a cooling, moderate east wind. Landlord John Hutchinson of the Brunswick, is also one of the "minute men" in an emergency, and quickly had tables provided in his neat and pretty dining room, with a refreshing lunch of cakes, ice cream and coffee, to which the editorial party was made welcome. It was a very graceful act, and as gratefully appreciated. Suitable acknowledgment of the courtesies unexpectedly rendered was made for the party by Capt. C. C. Doten of Plymouth, historian of the Massachusetts Press Association. This trip will always be a pleasant memory of the Peak's Island outing.

In the evening the banquet occurred when each guest found at their plate a favor entitled "The Massachusetts Press, R. E. Rowe, editor, Peaks Island, Maine, June 30, 1913, eight pages, last edition." Besides the menu and advertisements there were pages of "live reading matter" in spic, tunny quins and skits, bringing in members of the party by name or some happening of the trip. The Press people, when they are off together are like a great family intimately associated, and know how to "rub" and be rubbed without getting sore, so there is lots of fun and no "points" are missed.

A few short speeches were made and Mrs. Leavitt, wife of the president, was presented with a handsome picture of "White Head," a prominent cliff in the harbor. Mr. Leavitt also received a picture which he recognized as one of the members. Capt. Doten read a clever original poem made from the words "Portland Fancy" and dedicated to the executive committee. Tuesday morning at eight o'clock the party boarded the Gov. Dingley for home and at three in the afternoon after a cool, and delightful outing reached the sweltering heat of Boston with pleasant memories of all concerned to make the outing a success. Mr. Theodore P. Wilson and Mrs. Wilson were of the party.

TIMES EDITOR

STRUCK BY AUTO.

Immediately after the fireworks at Library Park, last Friday evening, Editor Haggerty of the Times went to his home in his auto and after a few minutes rest he took a piece of fireworks, and went across the street to set it off. Mr. Haggerty stepped from the curbing to go back to his home, when a large auto operated by F. W. McAdams of Winchester, struck him in the back, throwing him to the ground.

The operator brought his car to a quick standstill, and friends removed Mr. Haggerty to his home. Dr. Caulfield was summoned and an examination made showing that he suffered bruises on his arms, body and legs, but otherwise there were no ill effects from his experience.

Mr. McAdams was at Mr. Haggerty's home for half an hour after the accident.

Mr. Haggerty says in explanation of the accident that his attention was focused on an auto coming down from the direction of Woodbrook cemetery. The McAdams auto came from Woburn.—Woburn Times.

B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE.

For the week of July 14th only, the famous "Meistersinger All-Star Musicals" will be revived at B. F. Keith's Theatre, presenting an entirely new and different production. New faces will be seen on the ends, a new interlocutor and an entirely new chorus of thirty voices, besides an orchestra of twenty, will surround the combined Harvard, Schubert and Weber Male Quartettes, without question the greatest organization of its kind in the world.

A beautiful and massive stage setting has been built for this occasion, with a brand new outfit of gorgeous costumes. The program of songs will be entirely new. Surrounding this great feature will be Charles Leonard Fletcher in "Studies From Real Life," Kennedy and Rooney in "A Happy Medium," Robinson Newbold and Marie Louise Gribben, musical comedy favorites; Claude Golden, the card manipulator Ryan Brothers daring aerialists; and the Edison Kinetophone with new pictures.

FIRE IN DOUBLE

HOUSE WAS SET.

The fire department was called out on Sunday night at 12.55 for an alarm from box 43. The fire is thought to have been set, it being in the double house on Clark street owned by Mrs. Catherine Murray. The house is unoccupied. The fire had started in the kitchen and worked its way up through the wall to the roof, besides burning through the side. Quick work with the auto chemical prevented it further spread, and although a line of hose was laid, it was not used. The fire was discovered by Arnold Venolt, who lives in an adjoining house, and who gave the alarm.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

There appears to be no lack of candidates for the office of Governor. The Progressives are fixed on Mr. Bird, while the Democrats and Republicans are having difficulty in deciding who will be the best getter.

The usual July advance in retail coal prices was announced last week, the increase being 25 cents a ton in all grades. The advance is, it is stated, in keeping with an advance in the cost at the mines, supplies purchased after July 1 costing the dealers 30c a ton more than those purchased in April.

Three narrow escapes from death at the centre crossing in as many days are noted in our columns this week. They are noted because they were of enough importance to attract the attention of many people. Those which pass without comment still continue daily, one might say hourly. The escapes from death are many. Young and old, prominent and obscure, foolhardy and careless, all are exposed to this danger. The average man can get enough excitement to last him a year, by standing in view of this crossing a half a day. It appears but a question of how long, when one of the many electric cars will be struck. Those which cross the tracks without their trolleys slipping from the wires are in the minority. When the special cars of a recent picnic party of one of our churches crossed the tracks every trolley left the wires. Sooner or later there will occur at this place an accident which will cost many lives, and then what! The remedy is to eliminate this crossing before this time comes. We believe the people of Winchester have it in their power.

On the night before the 4th a woman operating an automobile attempted to draw up to the sidewalk at Piccolo's store. She ran too far and struck a motor cycle owned by Mr. Piccolo, carrying it to the end of the block. The motor cycle was badly damaged.

EDUCATION IN GERMANY AND IN THE UNITED STATES.

"The average man of the people in America is much more interested in the affairs of the public school than the average man in Germany," declares Dr. George Kerschensteiner, a well-known German educator, in "A Comparison of Public Education in Germany and the United States," just issued by the Bureau of Education. "In the daily press, reports and discussions on educational topics occupy a space which to my observation is fully ten times that which German newspapers devote to the same subject."

Dr. Kerschensteiner compares point by point the school systems in the two countries. He shows how Germany secures educational efficiency by centralization of authority within the individual States. He admits that possibly centralization has gone even further than is desirable in Germany, but is equally positive that there is no enough centralization within the individual states of this country. As a result of the lack of State compulsion, he says, "we see to-day in the United States the sharpest contrasts between school systems that are incredibly poor and others of the highest possible type, that would do credit to the finest civilized nations of the globe." He finds that American citizens of a community have more direct control over their schools than in Germany, and commends this condition. He compares the teachers in the two countries—their training, their salaries, their tenure of office. He discusses religion in the schools of the two countries, coeducation, and other points of similarity and difference.

Direct election of school board members by the citizens, as found in the United States, impressed Dr. Kerschensteiner very favorably. He notes that in Germany the citizens have little or nothing to say about their school system.

"In Germany the local school boards are nowhere chosen by popular vote," he declares. He thinks the American plan might be a very good thing for his own country, particularly as a means of arousing genuine public interest in education.

The American high school comes in for some interesting comment by Dr. Kerschensteiner, both complimentary and otherwise. He praises the high school's democratic spirit, its aim to educate all the people; but he misses the thoroughness that characterizes the work of the German gymnasium.

In both nations the schools are now in a period of great development, according to the Munich educator. "The great advantage that Germany possesses," he declares, "in addition to the relentless thoroughness of the whole educational work, is the well-regulated organization of a State-provided school system, which requires in each community a school as good as that in every other community. But this advantage has been purchased at the expense of many qualities for which we must envy the American schools."

WINCHESTER BOY WON PONY.

Benjamin Drisko, the son of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Drisko of Lloyd street, was the successful winner of the pony and pony carriage in the recent Boston Journal contest which closed the latter part of last week. The young man received his team the day before the 4th, and enjoyed the holiday ride in his handsome turn-out, to the envy of his friends.

Benjamin has sent the following letter to the STAR:

"It is good fun to have a pony, and the one I have is a dandy. If it had not been for the kindness of Winchester people I would not have had one, so I want to thank every one who helped me."

"I wish I could have driven around to see every one who helped me, but I didn't have time, because we left for Maine July 8, pony and all."

Gratefully yours,
Benjamin Drisko.

DRIVERS WON ON THE 4TH.

In a six inning game at sunrise on the 4th, the Winchester Laundry Drivers won from the Inside team by the score of 19 to 1. The game was not played to a finish owing to the drivers being entered in the parade at Woburn, but a further continuance would only have resulted in a greater slaughter. As a result the Inside men will have the pleasure of buying the Drivers a dinner. Fitzgerald and Dunning made home runs, and Lutes a star hit.

The line up of the teams was as follows:

Drivers	Inside
Hammond c	c Dunning
Fitzgerald p	p Downer
Dunning 1b	1b Perry
Bradbury 2b	2b Gains
Davenport 3b	3b Cronin
Nutter ss	ss Pratt

COUNTY COURT NEWS.

Thomas O'Loughlin and Catherine O'Loughlin have been sued for $700 in an action of tort by Herbert W. Field of North Andover. The papers have been filed by attorneys Littlefield & Tilden, 204 Washington st. Boston. It is alleged that the defendants have converted to their own use a furnace, value $100; furnace pipes valued at $25; gas and electric fixtures valued at $48; register boxes valued at $15 and hot water piping and faucets valued at $50.

John S. Blank and Benjamin F. Blank, co-partners and doing business as Blank Brothers have been sued for $10,000 in action of tort by Daniel Carney of Winchester. Carney alleges that on June 2, 1911, while employed by the defendant he received a broken arm and other severe injuries owing to a defect in certain machinery.

Margaret A. Crowdis of Medford and George B. Hayward of Winchester have been appointed as special administrators of the estate of Frank E. Chandler of Medford who died June 30, by Judge Charles J. McIntire of the Probate Court. They have each given a bond of $10,000. The estate is valued at $50,000; $40,000 in real estate and $10,000 in personal property.

Daniel C. Linscott is named as executor of the will of Mrs. Anna E. Brame of Cambridge who died July 1, 1913, and whose will has been filed in the Probate Court. The will is dated July 18, 1910. The estate is valued at $12,800; $10,000 in real estate and $2,800 in personal property.

Lewis Parkhurst of Winchester has been appointed as administrator of the estate of Henry M. Shepard who died April 25, 1913, by Judge Charles J. McIntire of the Probate Court. He has given a bond of $7000. The estate is valued at $5800; $500 in real estate and $5300 in personal property.

The will of William Schneider who died July 1, 1913, has been filed in the Probate Court. The will is dated May 25, 1913 and names his wife Mrs. Vitale Schneider of Winchester as executrix. The estate is valued at $5000 all in personal property. The bequests are all private. The heirs-at-law are Fred Schneider a son; Frank Schneider a son and Margaret Schneider a daughter, all of Winchester.

Alice H. Campbell of Cambridge has been sued for $300 in an action of contract by attorney Philip R. Ammidon of Cambridge. He alleges that on February 3, 1913 he secured a judgment of $179.18 and costs of $30.95 against H. Douglas Campbell of Winchester which has not been paid. The suit is brought to recover on a bond.

Herbert W. Field of Lawrence has been sued for $5000 in an action of tort by Thomas O'Loughlin of Winchester. The papers have been filed by attorney Fred Joy. O'Loughlin alleges that on April 9, 1913 the defendant made a complaint of larceny against him. On April 26 the complaint was dismissed owing to a technicality and another one was issued. On May 17 the case was heard in the Fourth District Court of Eastern Middlesex and O'Loughlin was found not guilty. O'Loughlin alleges false and malicious prosecution.

FUNERAL OF MICHAEL

J. MCCARTHY.

The funeral of the late Michael J. McCarthy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jeremiah McCarthy of Winchester place, took place from his home, Thursday morning with a High Mass of Requiem at St. Mary's church. Rev. Francis E. Rogers officiated at the Mass.

The pallbearers were Robert R. Thomas, Patrick I. Royal of Lowell, Michael J. Dennen and William B.

Sweeney. Mr. McCarthy served with Co. G, Woburn in the Spanish War, and has been sick for several years. Besides his parents he is survived by his sisters, Lillian and Gabrielle and one brother John H.

COUNTY POLITICS.

From present indications there will be things doing in the political line in the county this fall. Four county offices are to be contested for. The most interesting scrap will be centered in the fight for the office of District Attorney. John I. Higgins of Somerville will seek a third term. While no Republican has yet announced himself to battle with Higgins for the office, representative Nathan A. Tufts of Waltham is being groomed to run. Attorney William J. Corcoran of Cambridge is in the race for the Democratic nomination. Attorney William R. Scharton who fought for "Dakota Dan" in the last trial of the celebrated Russell will case is another Democratic aspirant. City Solicitor James P. Aylward of Cambridge has also been mentioned as a Democratic possibility. Should the "Bull Moosers" enter the field the fracas will be a merry one. Thomas Leighton Jr. of Cambridge who became Register of Deeds after the death of Edwin O. Childs of Newton should have no difficulty in securing the Republican nomination. The Progressives and Democrats will probably have candidates for the office. William E. Rogers of Wakefield, Register of Probate is another county official who comes up for re-election. The fourth office, county commissioner, will also be fought for. The present occupant Robert Marden, of Lowell, who succeeded the late Charles H. Richardson of Lowell, is undecided as to whether or not he cares to fight for the place which he reluctantly accepted. However there will be a dozen or more Republican aspirants in the race. Deputy Sheriff William H. Walsh of South Framingham will go after and probably land the Democratic nomination. The "Bull Moosers" will also chuck their hat into the ring and the scrap will be a merry one.

It is said that considerable comment has been aroused among members of the Massachusetts delegation in Congress over the fact that out of 22 postmasters in Massachusetts nominated by the President only nine have thus far been confirmed by the Senate. Most of the holding up has been done by Senator Weeks as the result of protests of one sort or another filed with him. He said today that in many cases he finds difficulty in getting details from the men who filed the protest. Among those not confirmed up to date is James H. Roach of Winchester.

Do you feel, Mr. Reader, that your abilities are coining all they are worth?
Why not do a little prospecting with a "Situation Wanted" ad?
The possibilities are worth the small expense.

My New Factory

at NEWTON CORNER will be opened about July 1st

New Boston Office

in the LAWRENCE BLDG., cor. West and Tremont Sts., will be opened on July 1st. This new office will be in the heart of the shopping district and I respectfully solicit the patronage of you and your friends in greater Boston. I shall carry a line of Choice Oriental Rugs with prices 25 p.c. lower than other Boston dealers.

Your Oriental Rugs

Washed - Repaired - Stored

at my new and day-light factory by NATIVE ARMENIAN EXPERTS under my immediate supervision. Every rug examined personally.

Having been manager for the repair department of A. U. Dilly & Co., Inc., and now, owing to the dissolution of this firm, I shall continue this department and employ the same expert Armenians. These workers are recognized as the most expert in Boston.

WASHING PROCESS

Consider this fact! At my factory I shall dry all Oriental Rugs, which are always washed by hand with pure soap and water, in the direct SUN LIGHT. This is the original oriental method but not commonly adopted in these days because of high rents and too much smoke in the city. Instead of being hived up in Boston, I shall, in my new factory, be able to dry all rugs in the SUN LIGHT.

REPAIRING

Do you realize that Oriental Rugs are made of HAND TIED KNOTS each being tied individually. The average rugs contain from 100 to 450 HAND TIED KNOTS in every square inch. Did you realize this fact?

Do not beat your rugs. The Colgate Vacuum System of regular weekly or monthly cleaning is the only safe dry process.

If you have already found some small holes in your rugs, their wear undoubtedly caused from beating or careless handling and should be repaired immediately.

STORING

Your Oriental Rugs insured, packed and stored MOTH-PROOF for the summer or permanently.

SUMMER WORK to be done at exceptionally low prices. Why not have my EXPERT ARMENIAN examine your rugs and furnish our estimate.

EQUAL SUFFRAGE DEPARTMENT.

Conducted by Winchester League.

The Woman's Journal presents to its readers a symbolic dove bearing the olive branch, wherever a decisive victory for Woman Suffrage is gained.

The issue of June 21, brings two of these symbols. One for Norway and the other for Illinois. The Norwegian Storting has unanimously agreed to extend full parliamentary suffrage to all women, without regard to their income tax.

The Governor of Illinois signed the bill enfranchising women, June 26. This bill passed the Senate by a vote of 29 to 15 and the House 83 to 58. It gives women the right to vote on all matters that are not forbidden by the State Constitution which would require a Constitutional Amendment. By it, women can vote for Presidential Election, court and county officers, members of board of assessors, all officers of cities, villages and towns, upon all questions or propositions submitted to a vote of the electors of such municipalities or other political divisions of the state, also in all annual and special town meetings in the various townships, and for various other officers. Full suffrage cannot long be delayed. Alice Stone Blackwell says: "All over the country the friends of equal suffrage are holding jubilee meetings because Illinois has given votes to women."

It is the first state east of the Mississippi river to enfranchise women; and the victory there has put an end once for all to the superstition that the Mississippi was a sort of deadline which equal suffrage could not cross. Illinois has 29 votes in the electoral college for President of the United States—more than any other state except New York and Pennsylvania—with the 55 electoral votes of the other enfranchised states, we now have 84—(in which women participate).

The political significance of this is very great yet it is only a beginning. It equal suffrage carries in North and South Dakota and Montana, where it is passed by the Legislature and is now before the voters, that will add 17 more electoral votes in 1914. There is no knowing how many states between now and 1916 may follow the example of Illinois and give their women a vote for Presidential electors by act of Legislature without waiting for the slower and more cumbersome process of a constitutional amendment.

Abraham Lincoln was the first prominent man of America to come out in favor of votes for women in 1836. It is fitting that his state 77 years later, should be the first state east of the Mississippi to give women a vote for President and the first state in the Union to do so under the powers conferred upon all the state Legislatures by Sec. 1 of Act 2 of the United States Constitution. Other states are sure to want to know about it, now that Illinois has pointed out the way.

Chicago has a group of exceptionally able women whose achievements in social service have won nation wide respect. The exclusion of such women from the full rights and duties of citizenship has been strikingly incongruous. Frances E. Willard in 1879 secured a petition of 180,000 signatures for equal suffrage in Illinois. She did heroic work in the early years while the question was still unpopular—women all over the world will rejoice that Frances Willard's state has given the ballot to women.

Mary E. Allen,
Chairman Press Com.

ARE THERE TOO MANY COLLEGES?

That there are too many colleges in the United States with inadequate equipment and support, attempting to give full courses for the bachelor's degree; that much duplication of work is going on; and that there could be a profitable merging of existing institutions to the resultant benefit of the institutions and the community; these are inferences that may be fairly drawn from the report of Dr. K. C. Babcock, in the yearbook of the Commissioner of Education, just issued.

The problem is particularly acute at this time in the case of State-supported institutions. Many of the States have their work of higher education centralized in the State university or agricultural college; but in 9 states there are 3 or more State-supported and State-controlled institutions. It is in these States, particularly, that conditions are often found under which "the distribution and subdivision of what should be a united function of the State as a whole has led inevitably to waste, duplication, undesirable competition for appropriations, and campaigning for students in order to get more appropriations."

The report concedes that in some States circumstances demand that the institutions be distributed in accordance with special needs. Thus there is an obvious advantage in the location of the Michigan College of Mines and the Missouri School of Mines in the mining districts of those States. Furthermore, Dr. Babcock frankly states that the waste due to duplication of faculty, equipment and buildings is frequently overestimated. "There is no loss of economy or of efficiency," he says, "in carrying on in different places the work of the first year, or the first two years, of a liberal arts course or of a course preliminary to technological work, provided the faculty and equipment of these two years are fully utilized."

"It is when specialized and technological work is begun in the second or third year of the usual course, when the services of high-salaried men and enormously expensive equipment are required, that the waste and inefficiency of plant inevitably appear."

Considerable effort has recently been put forth to prevent needless duplication, both in the case of public and private institutions, but so far little actual consolidation on the part of State institutions has taken place.

THE END SEAT.

Said a thoughtful man, as he boarded a car—

"'Twas one of the open kind—
How horribly selfish some people are!
Others' comfort they ne'er seem to mind."

"Now here is a seat all vacant and clear
And this one will I take;
I will sit at the further end—not here—
And so no trouble will make."

Anon his destined goal he gains,
And rises to depart.
And now begins this nice man's pains;
The car made a sudden start.

He stumbled over the big suitcase;
With apologies, he bowed.
His elbow struck the baby's face,
Whereas she bawled aloud.

He stooped to soothe the crying child,
And then his hat fell off,
(At that the sweet young lady smiled,
And has a violent cough.)

He'd soon be free—and glad of that—
As nobody near could doubt;
His coat sleeve caught the "picture hat,"
And pulled a hatpin out.

To himself now said the thoughtful man,
As he wiped his moistened brow:
"From this time forth whenever I can, I'll hold the end seat I vow!"

DOTTEN—HILL.

Mr. Harry W. Dotten, son of Mr. and Mrs. William T. Dotten of Reservoir street, and Miss Louise M. Hill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Hill of Malden, formerly of his town, were united in marriage at Malden on Sunday afternoon.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Richard E. Sise of the Malden Universalist church at the church parsonage. There were no attendants and the ceremony was private.

Following a wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Dotten will make their home in Laconia, N. H., where Mr. Dotten is located, being in the employ of the Laconia Water Company.

NEWMAN WILL DEFEND CANOE TROPHY.

Winchester Boat Club Man Wins in Trial Races.

James E. Newman of the Winchester Boat Club, Vice Commodore of the American Canoe Association and a sailing canoeist of considerable note will be the defender of the international canoe challenge trophy for the New York Canoe Club in the races that are to start this Friday at the Marine and Field Club at Bath Beach, New York.

This decision was reached Saturday night by the international cup committee of the defending club.

Newman did excellent work in all of the trial races. He finished second in the first contest on Thursday, won on Friday and again was the victor in the race sailed Saturday. The third trial brought the eight original aspirants for the honor of defending the cup once more to the line. The start was in the morning and the little fellows had a fresh breeze. Newman led at every round and had no great difficulty in winning from Leo Friede, Manhattan Canoe Club.

Mr. Newman, as well as Ralph B. Britton, the Canadian challenger, has broken camp at Tottenville, Staten Island, and gone to the home of the New York Canoe Club on Gravesend Bay. Here the two sailors will have remained throughout the week for the international contest.

Neither is familiar with the course off the Marine and Field Club. Gravesend Bay is famous for its tide eddies and currents and both of the canoeists have had something to learn about the waters. Each realizes that the currents will have a great deal to do with victory.

Leo Friede, Manhattan Canoe Club, was selected as alternate.

BASE BALL.

Last Friday and Saturday was two of the warmest days that we have had this summer. It was too hot to be out, and for base ball it was a scorcher. It would have been excusable if no games had been played on these days. Nevertheless, the Winchester team lined up for play. Friday's game was with the Prospect Union of Cambridge. Stockwell pitched for Winchester. The heat of the night before took hold of this otherwise good pitcher. On this occasion he did not amount to anything. He started off in pretty good shape but he went to pieces early in the game and in the last inning he was "all in." The visitors did as they pleased with him and this disheartened the members of the local team with the result that they failed to score. Manager LeDuc should have another try-out with this team. The score was 6 to 0.

The summary:
Innings 1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9
Prospect Union 0 2 3 0 0 1 0 0 6
Runs made by Culhane, Shaughnessy, Thomas, Daly 2, Casey. Two-base hits, Murray, Shaughnessy. Stolen bases, Casey 2, Walsh. Base on balls, by Haley 2, by Stockwell 3. Struck out by Haley 9, by Stockwell 6. Sacrifice hit, Haley. Hit by pitched ball, by Stockwell, Culhane, Whalen. Time, 1h 30m. Umpire, Coady.

Saturday's game was different with Scannell as pitcher. He had a heavy opponent in Banks of the Somerville-Medford team, but he proved to be his equal. It was one of the best games seen on Manchester Field this season. The teams were almost perfectly matched and it was simply a guess from start to finish as to who would get the most runs. The game was snappy and fast from start to finish, despite the intense heat. The principal feature of the game was the selfishness of Murray. He would persist in making all the brilliant plays all over the field, and not satisfied with this he knocked a home run, that brought in three runs. Manager LeDuc will have to get after Murray. He was all over the field catching difficult flies. The visitors played excellent ball, and the game was anybody's choice until it closed with the score of 4 to 3 in favor of Winchester. We hope to see a second game with this team.

Suffered Awful Pains From Stomach Trouble

Sick Three Months—Could Eat Nothing—Only Relief Was Dr.
Kennedy's Favorite Remedy.

Read what Mrs. May T. Bartlett, of Salem, Mass., says in a recent letter: "I shall never be without Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy again. When I wrote for a sample bottle I was suffering badly with my stomach and from constipation. I could eat hardly anything and I would have awful pains. I was down sick for three months that summer and could take nothing but gruel and beef tea. I am now on my second bottle of Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy. My stomach is better, my bowels move freely. I used to have severe headaches but do not now. Not only has it helped me, but four of my friends who have been troubled with constipation are using it and have been benefited."

Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy has had 40 years of wonderful success in Kidney, Liver and Blood troubles. A physician's prescription, formerly used in his large private practice, and now prepared for general use. Write to-day for free sample and booklet of valuable information. THINGS ALL OUGHT TO KNOW

As Christian Bible Students—The Satisfactory Proof of "Why God Permits Evil."

One of the questions which comes to nearly every thinking mind today is, "Why does God permit evil?" As we look about us in the world we observe that it is filled with sorrow and trouble, sickness and pain and every trial we could enumerate, and we cannot help wondering WHY GOD ALLOWS IT. We realize that He is almighty and that He could prevent it if He wished. We read in His Word that He is more willing to do for His children than are earthly parents for theirs, and we know how much that means; yet of tentimes it seems that those who try to do and live right have the most trouble. This question is made very clear in a book entitled, "The Divine Plan of the Ages." Every statement is backed by Scripture, and shows that while God does not sanction evil HE HAS HAD A PURPOSE IN ALLOWING SIN AND DEATH TO REIGN THESE SIX THOUSAND YEARS. This and many other subjects of deep interest to all of God's people are discussed fully and in language easy of comprehension.

THE PERILS OF OUR NATIONAL LIFE.

A little time when the crazy people will break out of the asylums and put us in. The simple fact is, a tide of degeneracy is rolling in upon us, and the time has come to recognize the fact that unless drastic measures are taken, the whole standard of civilization will have to change in order to avert race extinction. Think of this event in your city: A father going to the family physician with his son's wedding cards to ask if it was really safe for his son to marry, and the physician's reply that it would be murder. But finally the young women have become awakened. Out in St. Louis, girls dressed in white came into the legislative hall carrying a monster petition on a wheel barrow, and forced the subject (of social disease) on the attention of their rulers.

In the realm of law making there is peril. When the General Court of our Commonwealth had closed for the season I picked up one of the conservative dailies of Boston and found a sharp editorial upon the alleged inefficiency of the work done during the year by our law makers.

In the realm of law-enforcement there is also grave peril. I need only to refer you to the murder in New York of a graft gangster one night many months ago, when the whole stage was cleared for action by the police, and no helping hand was offered after the fatal shot was fired, but instead a crowd of people stood around the dying man joking. Such is the description a magazine gave of that scene.

In the realm of law-breaking there is peril. I have recently listened for three hours in the Twentieth Century Club, Boston, to an Ex-Police Commissioner of New York telling how the law is broken in that great Metropolis. A lawless spirit is abroad in the land. I am inclined to believe that one cause of this lawless spirit is a one-sided view of God which we have been having for over a half century, namely, thinking of God only as a God of love, to the exclusion of the idea of His holiness. The idea of love alone in God will lead people to condone sin, or that God will look lightly upon sin; whereas the idea of holiness in God will lead people to fear sin and to hate sin, because of the wrath of God which is sure to come. We cannot look for much change in this spirit of lawlessness until a new generation comes forth with a new vision of God's holiness.

In the realm of religion too there are perils. The tendency to neglect God out of our lives is one of the gravest perils of our day. One of the sanest utterances upon this matter was an editorial in the Wall Street Journal of New York some two or three years ago. It read as follows: "What America needs more than railway extension, and Western irrigation, and a low tariff, and a bigger wheat crop, and a merchant marine, and a new navy, is a revival of piety, the kind mother and father used to have, piety that counted it good business to stop for daily family prayers before breakfast, right in the middle of the harvest; that quit work a half hour earlier Thursday night so as to get the chores done and go to prayer meeting. That's what we need now to clean this country of the filth of graft, and of greed, petty and big; of worship of fine houses, and big lands, and high office, and grand social functions. What is this thing we are worshipping but a vain repetition of what decayed nations fell down and worshipped just before they light went out? Great wealth never made a nation substantial or honorable. There is nothing on earth that looks good that is so dangerous for a man or nation to handle as quick, easy, big money. If you do resist its deadly influence the chances are that it will get your son. It takes greater and finer heroism to dare to be poor in America than to charge an earthquake in Manchuria." And to think, these words come from Wall Street, New York. They form a mighty appeal for more old-fashioned piety to meet our perils.

In the realm of economic injustice there is peril. It is said that 90 per cent. of the wealth is in the hands of 3 per cent. of the people. With such conditions, extremes are bound to occur, great wealth and great poverty side by side. A little dog in Philadelphia wears a collar of diamonds and pearls worth $30,000. Doubtless within six blocks of the owner of that dog lives there are children starving for bread. Things are dead wrong when such conditions exist side by side. Somebody has blundered. Our economic injustice cries to Heaven for relief. Let us be more Christian and even up things a little more.

In the realm of alcoholism there is very grave peril. Do you know that the American drink bill for one year amounts to $2,100,000,000? Twenty-one hundred millions of dollars? If this amount were put into dollar bills they would form a rug twenty feet wide and reaching all the way from Boston to San Francisco. And what are the returns of this vast amount of money for drink? "By their fruits ye shall know them." Listen. Every year in America alcoholism produces the following fruits: 8,000 suicides; 5,000 murders; 10,000 idiots for asylums; 50,000 girls robbed of their virtue; 90,000 people prepared for the poorhouses; 100,000 people made criminals and put into jails; 100,000 drunkards laid away in drunkards' graves, which would reach all the way from Boston to Portland, Maine; 100,000 boys and girls put into line for destruction to take the places of those who step off each year; and 125,000 who have to be helped by others.

The American drink bill is twice the tobacco bill. I three times the bill for running our Government, four times our automobile bill, seven times our education bill, eight times our religion bill, and ten times the revenue bill for drink. In Massachusetts 82 per cent. of the criminals were drunk at the time of crime. In New York City the drink bill would pay the salaries of all our public school teachers throughout America twice over.

In the realm of the cigarette we have a great peril. Out in California the superintendents of schools are greatly distressed by it. In the far west it seems to be a greater peril than here. Do you know that eighty million cigarettes are smoked daily in America at an expense of $750,000? Cigarette smoking is far more dangerous and injurious than cigar or pipe. Dr. H. Kress who for many years has made a study of the cigarette boy tells us that fufural, the principal "sidekick" in cigarettes, is fifty times as poisonous as ordinary alcohol, and in a single cigarette there is as much fufural as in a couple of fluid ounces of whiskey. Mr. Harriman, the great railroad king, once said that he would just as soon think of getting his employees out of the insane asylum as to employ cigarette users. And in the majority of cases the parents do not know of their children's smoking.

A last peril I wish to mention is Mormonism. This peril is as little known as it is insidious. The enormity of this peril is not at all appreciated. Mormons are a political peril, for they aim to get control of the government. They are also a moral peril, for the Mormons make no efforts to conceal the fact that they practice polygamy. Those who practice polygamy are to be gods in the next world, but those who do not will be servants of those gods. Such is their express teaching. Mormonism is Satan's masterpiece in America.

But am I a pessimist? Not at all. I am an optimist. I believe that we shall meet these grave perils and conquer them. And there is one in whom we may conquer, even Jesus Christ our Lord.

All eyes have been upon Gettysburg this past week. Two aged veterans, one of the blue, and the other of the gray, met for the first time since fifty years ago. Together they went to the store and bought a hatchet. Together they walked out over the great battlefield to a certain spot where they had fought each other fifty years ago. There they dug a hole and buried the hatchet, and stood silently with bared and bowed heads over the spot, while tears trickled down their furrowed cheeks. So may the time speedily come, and I believe it will come sometime, when all this strife and bitterness which we now see shall be done away, and when all antagonisms shall cease, and peace and harmony prevail on the perilous battlefield of our national life.

(Sermon preached in the First Baptist Church, Sunday morning, July 6, 1913, by the pastor, at the first union service.)

FACTS FROM THE TOWN REPORTS ON RIDGE STREET.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

With so many facts coming from the residents of this street in regard to its condition and what they, as taxpayers, expect to receive, might easily be said of every other district of this town. In 1907 or 1908 there was a fair amount of money expended on Ridge street, so it hardly seemed possible that in a few years it could have been in very bad shape. In 1911 the town spent $1338. This amount if it was properly handled should have completed the job to High street, taking all things into consideration. In looking over the town report for the work done in 1912 I find no record of this $500 which you stated was appropriated for Ridge street. You also state that the town had the road shaped and ready to macadamize. It seems funny, if this is a fact, why some mention was not made of it in the town report. The list of streets given by the superintendent of streets fails to show work done in 1912 on Ridge street. So if you are right, then somebody is trying to hide up the work which you speak of in 1912.

The taxpayers in this section may be more able to give to the town of Winchester than people residing in other districts, and all I can say is, that you are very fortunate to be so well fixed. In looking over the town reports, it shows somebody received some compensation for water, charged up some way, and no doubt used on this street. The town also paid the residents in this district for breaking out the roads in winter. You will find that the taxpayers as a whole, have contributed from every section of this town, in one way or another. Quite a few of the walks have been paid for by individuals, while others were laid by contractors, who had every reason to believe that they might be paid some day in return. In the first place, I think it was poor judgment to start building a small street, without first going before the voters, and see where the money was coming from. Second, to see this machinery standing alongside the great highway, now called the main thoroughfare from Arlington Heights to the City of Woburn, for the last three years must have given the people who traveled over it the impression that the town had gone broke, by seeing the residents of this section teaming a load of stone, now and then to build a street. I wonder if they were required to put up this bond, that they require of the people in the low lands. It looks pretty small business methods, to build streets in this manner, and I doubt very much if the citizens of this town expect to have their streets built by charity. I believe if the taxpayers of that district would present their bills for the work they have done on Ridge street, that the voters will see that they receive their pay. For further information, the jokers introduced in the town meetings in the last few years will save the taxpayers over $3000 this year alone. We will be paying for work done this year and not for friendship, as we have in the past. Emergencies will always arise, but surely you do not call building new stone roads emergency work. I am sure I understand every foot of land in the hill, and I think I understand the amount of travel over that street every day. The taxpayers on Bridge street may well expect to receive a stone road, after the opinion of our highway committee, backed up so ably by Ridge street in last week's STAR.

This is simply a question between right and wrong, and looks to me as if it would be far better to stick to the appropriation committee recommendations, then you will have some ground to stand on for future cases of this kind.

Ridge, like Cross and Pond streets, are county roads. The county paid part of the expense on Cross and Pond streets. It might be possible if Ridge street was handled a little different, that the county would pay some of this expense, and I believe they would have contributed if they thought in their judgment this street needed repairs so badly.

Exodus 2:11-25.—July 13.

"Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth."—Matthew 5:5.

THE education of Moses is briefly summed up in the Biblical statement that he "was learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians." Legend tells us something of his schooling in the philosophies of that time, and declares that he was a successful Egyptian general; but it is for us to follow the Bible account. The time was nearing when God intended to bring the Israelites out of Egypt into the Land of Promise—an illustration of the still more wonderful deliverance by the Greater than Moses, which now is nearing.

God's providences may be noted in respect to the experiences of Moses, who is credited by the Lord with having been "the meekest man in all the earth." God wanted a meek man for the important position which He intended Moses to fill. Moses' lessons and experiences helped to make him meek. Who cannot see that, if he had been proud and arrogant, he would have been unfit for the duties and responsibilities devolving upon him as leader of his people? Perhaps no man had a more difficult task than that represented in Moses' forty years with Israel in the wilderness. We may be sure that he was prepared for the ordeal only by the experiences of the preceding eighty years of his life.

The adopted son of the Egyptian princess, Moses must have been a court favorite, and in danger of cultivating pride and arrogance. As an offset, he had continually before him the fact that his features were Jewish, and that thus every one had knowledge of his identity with the despised and oppressed people. The tendency would naturally be toward one of two courses: Either he would seek to ignore the Hebrews and to become more and more identified with the Egyptians, or else he would exercise faith in the special promises of which his people were heirs as children of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob.

St. Paul notes that Moses was a victor in this test. He chose to suffer affliction with the people of God rather than to enjoy the honors which might have been his as an adopted member of the royal family. (Hebrews 11:24-26.) To Moses the Promise which God made to Abraham, and repeated to Isaac and Jacob, and which still awaits fulfillment, was more to be desired than all the riches and honors of earth.

Moses Discouraged, Heartbroken. Trusting in the Lord's Promise, Moses believed that the time had come for the deliverance of the Israelites from bondage. He knew well of his miraculous preservation, and had the assurance of God's Promise that this signified that God had a special work for him to do. He was anxious to begin that work. He knew not of his own unreadiness—that he would require forty years more of special schooling.

An occasion to show his zeal for his brethren came when he saw an Egyptian abusing one of them. Moses threw himself into the scuffle. The Egyptian was killed. Moses perceived that none of the Egyptians knew of the matter, so he quietly buried the victim in the sand. He doubted not that his brethren would realize that he was their friend and defender, and would look to him with confidence as their leader, when God's providence would open the door for them to leave Egypt.

But all his dreams faded when, next day, he perceived that there was no such loyalty among his brethren, and that they were ready to deliver him to the Egyptian authorities. Thoroughly discouraged and fearing for his life, Moses fled to the wilderness of Midian. It looked as though all his education and development had gone to waste.

Moses Jethro's Shepherd. As the fugitive sat upon the casting of a well, shepherds brought their flocks for water. Amongst the shepherds were Jethro's daughters, and opposing them some ungentle shepherds, who hindered them. Moses took their part, and drew water for their flocks. Incidentally he walked with them to ward their home.

Jethro was appreciative of the stranger, who did not disclose his identity. Moses was thoroughly crestfallen, meek, teachable.

Moses married one of Jethro's daughters and continued to be a shepherd for forty years. He did not at the time understand the Lord's providences in his affairs; but he was all those years learning a most important lesson of meekness, of full submission to the Divine will. When the lesson had been learned, God's time had come to put His thus doubly educated servant into a most important place, for which he never could have been qualified without just such experiences.

God's dealings with Moses illustrate the general principles of His dealing with all those whom He would use in special service.

"Moses Helped Them." Jethro was appreciative of the stranger, who did not disclose his identity. Moses was thoroughly crestfallen, meek, teachable.

A farewell banquet and all-night celebration was given Mr. E. Langworthy Burwell by the members of the Winchester Highlands Athletic Club, at the Club house on the night before and morning of the Fourth. He was presented a handsome signet ring the gift of the members, by the president, Mr. Burleigh H. Cooper of Somerville. At a special meeting held during the banquet, he was unanimously elected an honorary member for life. Music, fireworks, a torchlight parade preceded by various musical instruments, and a track-meet at day-break furnished entertainment every minute of the night. A hurdy gurdy played throughout the night, and each member was furnished with a penny tin horn. A large bonfire was built in the small hours of the morning, and about four o'clock the old custom of ringing the bell at the Chapel on Cross street was revived. The boys had a safe and sane Fourth in every respect, having the time of their lives, yet destroying no property, injuring no one, and disturbing a very few.

VOL. XXXIII. NO. 3.

WINCHESTER, MASS., FRIDAY, JULY 18, 1913.

PRICE FIVE CENTS

SELECTMEN'S MEETING.

Permit Asked by Progressives to Fly
Flags or Banners.

July 14, 1913.

The Board met at 7:30 p. m., all present.

The clerk reported that he had filed one copy of the list of jurors as prepared June 30th with the Town Clerk, one with the Clerk of the Supreme Judicial Court, one with the clerk of the Superior Court of Middlesex County, and one printed in the Winchester STAR of July 11th.

The nomination of John F. Donaghey, 5 Sheridan circle, was taken up and he was elected Ballot Clerk to serve until March 31, 1914.

The Town Treasurer reported that he had received an offer from the Winchester Savings Bank for the $5000, remaining of Surface Drainage 4 per cent. bonds to take them at par with the November 1, 1913 coupon attached, and it was voted to authorize the Treasurer to accept the offer.

The application of Mrs. Charity A. White for a license to conduct an employment office at No. 5 Church street was approved by the Chief of Police and granted subject to the payment of the usual fee.

Under the provisions of Chapter 502, Acts of 1912, William Henry Vaso of 13 Arthur street approved by A. K. Clark, Acting Commissioner of Weights & Measures was nominated to be a measurer of leather, the nomination to hold over for one week under the rules.

The application of Henry F. McKeon, 161 Winthrop street, Medford, for a license as hawker and peddler was approved by the Chief of Police and granted subject to the payment of the fee of $10.

Applications were received and referred to the Chief of Police for investigation and report from the following parties to be hawkers and peddlers:

Herbert A. Dyson, 644 Main street, Winchester

Thomas F. Cullen, 5 Cullen street, Woburn

Granville D. Richardson, 597 Washington street, Winchester

James Gargas, 5 Mt. Vernon street, Winchester

William H. Geary, 182 Winthrop street, Medford

William F. Brown, 221 Cambridge street, Woburn

William H. Duffy, 12 Buckman street, Woburn

George A. Pappoulet, 582 Main street, Winchester

The clerk was instructed to notify the Chief of Police that under the provisions of Section 15 of Chapter 65 Revised Laws as amended by Chapter 345 Acts of 1906, it provides that "a person engaged in the pursuit of agriculture who peddles fruits and vegetables shall not be deemed a hawker or peddler under the provisions of this Act." Farmers who peddle their own products are apparently exempted from the necessity of procuring a license. Doubtless a number of the applicants are in this class, and before issuing any of the licenses the board would be glad to have the Chief's report as to which, if any of them in his opinion are within the exemption.

The clerk was instructed under the application of the Committee on Accounts to cause to be printed 200 forms of license for hawkers and peddlers.

A letter was received and referred to the Town Counsel from Chas. H. Davis, Chairman Finance Committee Progressive Party of Massachusetts, asking whether any permits would be needed to fly flags or banners over the streets or highways in the town, the consent of abutting owners having been obtained and it so, asking for a permit giving them the privilege of flying flags or banners for the six weeks from September 23, 1913, to November 4, 1913 inclusive.

The clerk was instructed to send a bill to the Middlesex County Commissioners for 25 per cent. of the following items of work involved in the widening and alternation of the Highway on Cambridge street at the Arlington line, namely:

Contract of T. Quigley, Jr.	$1450.00
Paid T. Quigley, Jr. for extra steps	61.35
Highway Dept. labor on the Elder embankment	31.50
Resetting bounds	7.31

$1550.16

A letter was received through the Town Engineer's office from F. A. Merrill, Division Engineer Boston & Maine Railroad, advising that the railroad would consent of the town's emoting surface drainage from Arthur street into the railroad ditch on condition that the town widen and deepen the ditch to such extent as the railroad might consider necessary, and properly protect the inlet and the railroad track opposite from washing, also asking the town to execute an agreement relieving the railroad from damage caused by the drainage and agreeing to remove the same if it is found at any time hereafter to be detrimental to the railroad. The matter was referred to the Committee on Ways and Bridges.

The clerk was instructed to write Mr. Daniel McDonald, contractor for the tar concrete sidewalk work for 1913, that the town would be ready for this work by the middle of August, and to ask him to execute and forward the contract and bond.

A protest was received concerning the construction of the granolithic sidewalk on the outward curve of Crescent road and referred to the Committee on Ways and Bridges.

Mr. Howard Snelling, 7 Lakeview road, appeared before the board and objected to the new grade of that street in front of his premises claiming that it would be difficult to get in and out with his automobiles. He was assured by Mr. Jewett that it was the intention of the Town Engineer to so arrange the grade as to make this process satisfactory. The Town Engineer also appeared and made a statement in regard to his treatment of Lakeview road and was instructed to make his report in writing. It was understood from his remarks that the grade as laid out was good construction and that there was some benefit accruing to the abutters. It was also voted that the Town Engineer be authorized to make such reasonable changes in the grading of Lakeview road as may be approved by the Committee on Ways and Bridges to whom the matter was referred.

A letter was received and referred to the Committee on Ways and Bridges from the Edison Electric Illuminating Company stating that the Postal Telegraph Company objected to the attachment of lighting wires on their poles and that it was not feasible to move the corner pole at Glen road as it would weaken their construction, and asking whether the order of this board for a light on Cambridge street at the southerly corner of Glen road dated June 16, should be cancelled. The matter was referred to the Committee on Ways and Bridges.

At 8 o'clock as advertised, a hearing was declared open on the petition of the Edison Electric Illuminating Company dated June 29, 1913, for permission to erect and maintain four poles on Church street near Oxford and Wildwood streets and Wedgemere avenue. Objection was made to certain locations as shown on the plan in respect to certain existing trees. It was voted to lay the matter on the table until July 21, the Town Engineer in the meantime to submit a modified plan after consultation with the Edison Company.

An application was received from the James J. Fitzgerald Contracting Company for permission to lay a granolithic driveway across the loam space for entrance to garage at 13 Everett avenue, approved by the Town Engineer and granted subject to the usual conditions.

A letter was received requesting the board to repair a portion of the tar concrete sidewalk in front of premises at No. 4 Hillside avenue, and referred to the Committee on Ways and Bridges.

A petition was received from the James J. Fitzgerald Contracting Company for permission to place a granolithic step stone in front of the house 9 Everett avenue, approved by the Town Engineer and granted subject to the usual conditions; also for permission to construct a stepping stone in front of 17 Everett avenue, approved by the Town Engineer and granted subject to the usual conditions; also for permission to construct a granolithic driveway across the sidewalk to garage of W. P. F. Ayer, Stratford road, approved by the Town Engineer and granted subject to the usual conditions.

A petition was received from Emma M. Gray for granolithic sidewalk along the Sheffield road frontage of her property at the corner of Everett avenue with estimate from the Town Engineer and the clerk was instructed to reply that the sidewalk would be laid.

A complaint was received concerning dust on Main street and referred to the Committee on Ways and Bridges.

The clerk was instructed to write the Superintendent of the Bay State Street Railway at North Woburn in regard to the delayed repair of the overhead trolley wire on Main street near Black Horse terrace also the overhead construction of the trolley crossing the Boston & Maine Railroad tracks at the center.

Attention was called to the six arc lights at the center that are turned on by the officer on duty at that point, and the clerk was instructed to ask the Electric Light Company whether it would not be possible to arrange these lights on one circuit so that they might all be lighted by one switch.

Warrants were drawn for $206.52 and $207.12.

Adjourned at 10:20 p. m.

Clerk of the Board.

The following young men, members of the Highlands Athletic Club are at camp at Kittery Point, Maine: Arthur Dearborn, Jud Benet, Langworthy Burwell, Bud Robinson, Kenneth Park, Harry Bennet, Warren Fogg. They left Saturday and will be in camp two weeks.

FALLING TO PIECES.

Soon Nothing Will be Left of the Fire Engine House.

From reports of the condition of the centre fire engine house it is apparent that unless something is done soon in the way of very extensive repairs the structure will be in such a state that it will have to be vacated. In such a case it is questionable where the town could go to house its fire apparatus.

The latest repairs made this week by Chief DeCourcy consisted in placing a quantity of tarred paper in the house to protect the hose from the rain which enters.

Among the troubles which the firemen have to contend with besides the water coming in on them every time it rains, is dry rot in the ropes in the tower used to haul up the hose for washing and drying, due to leakage; lack of new batteries for the alarm; the insecure foundation of the house, which it is said is liable to give out at any time, and many others.

It is said that the heater is running with one of its sections out of commission, a fact which may cause it to give out at any time this winter, thus making the house unfit for use, even if it holds together.

A request for $3000, just for necessary repairs and replacements, was met at town meeting with an appropriation of $300, and this sum will not meet even the smallest part of what is absolutely necessary if the house is to be continued in use.

A suggestion has been made that the town buy the Laraway property and the Hatch property and erect a new house upon it, thus giving a fine frontage on Mt. Vernon street.

P. S. Citizens who visit the house are warned to be careful in walking about that they do not fall through the floor and cause the town extra expense.

NEW ORGANIZATION.

At a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Boston & Maine Railroad Company held on Tuesday afternoon, Richard Olney, Alvah W. Sulloway, Lucius Tuttle, Samuel Hemingway, Frederic C. Dumaine, James M. Prendergast, Edward P. Ricker, Walter C. Baylies, Robert M. Burnett, Charles S. Mellen, William Skinner, Charles F. Linsley and Sidney W. Winslow were present. Mr. Morris McDonald was elected a Director to succeed the late J. Pierpont Morgan, and was then chosen President. The organization of the Boston & Maine Railroad, effective not later than August 1, 1913, was fixed by the Board of Directors as follows:

Mr. Lucius Tuttle, Chairman of the Board.

Mr. Morris McDonald, President.

Mr. William J. Hobbs, Vice-President in charge of Finance and Accounts.

Mr. B. Campbell, Vice-President in charge of Traffic.

Mr. Edgar J. Rich, General Solicitor.

Mr. B. M. Pollock, General Manager in charge of Transportation.

HEATING SYSTEM.

Now is the proper time to consider a warm house next winter with no gas to kill the flowers. We are the only firm in Winchester that can furnish you practical heating men of all kinds. Hot air furnaces, steam and hot water. Fifty-two (52) weeks in a year at a moment's notice.

We advise attention now to that important feature in your home. Anybody can make a bluff at cleaning your furnace but it takes a practical furnace man to produce results. We have the practical men and would rather serve you now than in the busy season, it being much easier now to get the repairs.

The J. A. Laraway Company.

BASE BALL.

Saturday, July 19th, Winchester will play the Lincoln Club of Somerville. This team is the best one that has played in Winchester so far this season. They have not been beaten this year as yet and have been easy winners in all their games so far, having no trouble in beating the strong Tedesco Club, July 4th. For a battery they have two N. E. League players: Kolseth for pitcher and Canigat for catcher—both of them fast and "heavy" men. We expect to have the best team on the field we have had this year with a first class pitcher able to go the full distance, and with anything like decent support ought to win this game. Come down and look him over and we do not think you will be disappointed. We are out to win and look for the support of all the "fans."

NEW YORKER GIVEN PLACE
OVER WINCHESTER BOY.Newman Barred From Defending Canoe Sailing Trophy.

After the announcement made last week by the committee in charge of the sailing canoe race for the international trophy that James A. Newman of this town had been selected to defend the trophy from Ralph B. Britton the Canadian challenger, a special meeting was held and it was decided to allow Leo Friede, the New Yorker, to do the racing. The committee evidently believed that the can should be defended by no one except a New Yorker as was the case several years ago in the international yacht races when Thomas W. Lawson build the Independence.

According to reports Newman made an excellent showing in the trial races. It was announced that he had been selected to meet the Canadian. At the eleventh hour the committee is reported to have held a special meeting and revoked its first decision and transferred the honor to Friede.

The races were held the first of the week at New York, and Friede had little difficulty in defeating the Canadian challenger.

GUIDE BOARD NEEDED.

The absence of an adequate directing sign-board at the corner of Main and Mt. Vernon streets is felt by strangers passing through the town. Police Officer McCauley being daily showered with requests for directions, especially on holidays and Sundays. A few years ago there used to be a sign-post there but this was removed in the desire to have all poles removed from that corner. High up on the Brown building there is a sign it is small and not likely to catch the eye. But even if it was conspicuous it gives but little information that the visitors would care for. It simply reads, "Mt. Vernon street, to Middlesex Falls."

In other towns at an important junction point, the same as Winchester square, there are, as a rule, adequate directing sign boards, and there should be one here in the square. It is badly needed and will relieve anxiety when the officer is not present. It should not only give the directions to adjoining cities and towns but distances.

AUTOISTS FINED.

Chief McIntosh continued his crusade against automobilists in the local court Monday morning and secured three convictions. William H. Bacheller of Medford was fined $10 for over-speeding; on the charge of not sounding his horn at intersecting streets he was discharged; Iver Johnson of Cambridge was fined $10, for not giving the proper signal at the intersection of two streets; Peter Achin of Lowell in a continued case was fined $10 for permitting unnecessary noises; the charge against him for over-speeding was placed on file.

INJURED BY CAVE-IN.

Michael Vining of Woburn, employed at the Berge & Cobb factory, was injured on Wednesday afternoon by the cave-in of a trench at the shop which was being dug for sewer pipes. The man was buried up to his chest in the mass of gravel and rock. He was rescued by companions and hurried to the Winchester Hospital, Dr. Harold F. Simon being summoned to attend him.

His injuries consisted of a broken leg and numerous bruises and contusions. He is reported resting comfortably and a speedy recovery is looked for.

GERHARTYS MOVE INTO NEW HOUSE.

Mr. and Mrs. "Jack" Gerharty of Newport fame, who recently purchased a farm in Woburn just over the Winchester line, moved into their new home this week. They are domiciled in what is known as the "Anson Tufts House" on Cambridge street. The house has been remodeled and renovated and the couple will take up farming.

JOHN A. McLEAN HURT.

Fell From Building on Brookside Avenue Friday.

John A. McLean of Clematis street was seriously injured by falling from the second story of a house under construction on Brookside avenue last Friday afternoon. He stepped off the staging.

He was immediately taken to the Winchester Hospital and Dr. Dennett summoned, who pronounced his condition serious. He fell on his head, landing on a pile of gravel. His injuries consisted of a crushed chest, three broken ribs, severe cut on his head and injury to his spine. Whether his injuries will result in permanent invalidism or not is not yet known. It is reported that his condition is very promising for a complete recovery.

Mr. McLean has been employed by the Boston & Maine Railroad as a carpenter. He is interested in the Second Congregational church on Cross street and one of its hardest and most enthusiastic workers. He is also a special officer on the town police force. His accident is seriously regretted by his numerous friends.

NEW STORE OPENS
NEXT WEEK.

Buttrick's Poultry Store will open the last of next week in the block on Main street adjoining the store of F. E. Barnes. The new store will carry a high grade line of butter, cheese, eggs, poultry, tea, coffee and canned goods, beside cream and milk. The store will make a specialty of its butter and poultry, securing these commodities fresh daily from Arlington. This will be one of a chain of seven stores operated by Mr. Buttrick, and Mr. Fred A. Evans, for many years with the Richardson Market, will be the Winchester manager.

FIRE ON MAIN STREET.

The first fire since the 4th occurred a few minutes after one o'clock Wednesday afternoon, when painters who were burning off the paint on the house at 784 Main street, formerly occupied by Thomas O'Loughlin, set fire to the roof. The torch was being used under the eaves and flame crept into the attic, coming out through the roof. The alarm was turned in from box 43 and the fire extinguished by a hand chemical with little damage. The house is being altered over to accommodate two families.

NEWSY PARAGRAPHS.

It is understood that a new house is to be erected on Glen road shortly by a Boston gentleman.

The Misses Lawrence of Rangley are spending a few days in Magnolia.

Men were out on Wednesday morning from the Boston & Maine office viewing the broken gate at the south side of the crossing which was wrecked by the accident two weeks ago when an express struck an automobile at the crossing. Since the accident the crossing has been protected by a flag man. The gate will probably be repaired in the near future.

Mr. and Mrs. William I. Kendall and daughter Marion of Stevens street left this week for Intervale, N. H., where they will remain until the last of August. They are registered at Maple Villa.

Mrs. Arthur B. Cortell of Rangley is spending the week in New York.

Miss Eugenia Elliott is spending the remainder of this month and the month of August at Pawtucket, R. I.

Woburn's tax rate is $20.50, a decrease of 70 cents from last year.

The children from the playground on Manchester Field were taken Wednesday morning for a trip to the menagerie in the Middlesex Fells by Mr. Indelkoffer and Miss Comerford, who have charge of the playground. Lunch was carried by the boys and girls and a basket picnic enjoyed.

Mrs. James P. Hargrove, wife of Sergt. James P. Hargrove of the Police Department conducted a trolley party to Revere Beach yesterday.

Mrs. John C. Soutter and daughters, Betty and Dorothy, are at their summer home in Madison, N. H., for the summer.

The annual Linden Trolley Party under the direction of Mrs. Isabel McKenzie journeyed to Revere Beach Thursday morning taking with it many happy mothers and children who look forward to their active leader each year for this happy day.

Mrs. Willis O. Blaisdell is spending a few days at Gloucester.

The Hurley Shoe Company of Rockland gave an outing and dinner at Paragon Park on Monday night to their salesmen. Mr. Charles F. Maxwell of Bacon street was one of the lucky ones.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Hall and Mr. Howard Proctor have returned from an automobile trip to Canada.

COMING EVENTS.

July 19, Saturday. Base ball on Manchester Field at 3.30 p. m. Winchester vs. Lincolns of Somerville.

Aug. 12, Tuesday. Trolley ride to Revere Beach by Young Men's Social Club.

FELL FORTY FEET.

Lawrence McElhiney Badly Injured at Rumford School.

Lawrence McElhiney, 18 years of age, son of Winslow D. McElhiney of 16 Baldwin street, fell from the roof of the Rumford school building Wednesday and was badly injured. The young man was working for Mr. George H. Hamilton the carpenter, who is putting a new roof on the school. He stepped off the staging forty feet from the ground and fell to the concrete walk below.

As far as can be ascertained, he landed on his hands, one being outspread and the other being doubled back. Both wrists were badly injured, the bones in one being driven through the skin and the other being fractured and the fingers broken. Some of the ligaments were torn from the bone and he received injuries to his back. When he fell he struck on his hands and turned over.

He was taken to the Winchester Hospital and attended by Dr. Brown, and latest reports are that he is resting comfortably. The young man is well known about town, having been for several years in the employ of the Hersey Hardware Company. He is a member of the militia, belonging to the 6th Regt. at Stoneham. His father had but recently returned from the hospital also.

JAMES F. DAVIS.

Mr. James Francis Davis, aged 60 years, died unexpectedly of heart trouble at his home No. 704 Main street, yesterday morning. He had been in poor health for some time and had been confined to his home for the past three weeks, but his sudden death came as a shock to his family.

Mr. Davis was a native of Ireland. He had lived in this town for the past 25 years and was a cabinet and casket maker by trade. For many years he was foreman at the casket works of W. L. Lockhart & Co., of Cambridge, retiring from active work upon its consolidation eight years ago.

He leaves a widow, Ellen T. (Mimhan), one son, I. Frank Davis, and two daughters, Mrs. Albert M. Little of Woburn and Miss Grace T. Davis of this town.

Solemn high mass will be celebrated at St. Mary's Catholic church tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock. The burial will be at St. Joseph's cemetery, Lynn.

MISS GUTTERSON

MARRIED TO-DAY.

The wedding of Miss Maud Caroline Gutterson, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. George H. Gutterson of Rangley, and Mr. Thomas Laurence Green of New Bedford will take place this afternoon at the summer home of the bride's parents at Marshfield Centre. The ceremony will be performed by the father of the bride.

Mr. F. Henshaw Dewey Jr., of Worcester, is to be the best man, and the bride's sister, Miss Edith L. A. Gutterson, is to be the maid of honor. The bridesmaids will be the Misses, Dorothea M. Gutterson, Hildegard Gutterson and Sylvia Gutterson, sisters of the bride, and Rhoda Green of New Milford, Conn.

The ushers are Messrs. Wilder Gutterson, brother of the bride, Gardner, Swan of Jamaica Plain, Karl S. Cate of Boston and John A. Paine of Newton.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl K. Bacon are stopping at Hummerock Beach.

REAL ESTATE NEWS.

Agreements have been signed, through the office of Edward T. Harrington Co., for the sale of lot No. 21 on Myopia Hill, containing over three acres of land, to Mr. Carl K. Bacon of Main street, Winchester. This lot is bounded by Myopia and McCall roads and is directly opposite Hon. Samuel W. McCall's estate, and was at one time the original site of the Myopia Hunt Club-house. The grantors were Samuel W. McCall and George A. Fernald both of this town.

Mr. E. O. Ladd of New York has leased his house, No. 18 Glen road to Mr. Harold Lawton of Cambridge, Mass., who is a son of Judge George F. Lawton.

Mr. Oliver A. Wyman of this town has leased the half-double house No. 57 Church street to Mr. A. L. Bowman of Somerville, Mass. The foregoing rentals were made through the office of the Edward T. Harrington Co.

YOUR AFFAIRS AND MINE.

The Spectator has frequently had something to say about town planning and every good citizen is anxious that Winchester grow in comfort and beauty as well as in size. Winchester should determine what it wants to look like and then direct its energies to the realization of that conception. No town can become beautiful by haphazard or accident; it must be the result of following out faithfully a carefully conceived plan. Towns a great deal smaller than our own have probably got in advertising values enough to compensate them for the energy and money their planning has cost them. But of course the greater profits have been of another kind. Life has been enriched for the residents of those towns. For them living means something more than three meals a day and a bed. Their towns have been made more convenient, more comfortable and more ministrative to the finer senses. They have developed a keen sense of pride, and at every turn they find something to gratify that sense of pride. Winchester, too, can profit by planning its growth. Indeed in one sense, town planning offers greater inducements to a community of the size of Winchester than it does to a large city. For Winchester it would be far less costly, and could be done much more completely, for the simple reason, of course, that there is not so much ugliness to destroy as a preliminary step. There is a vast deal of ugliness in a large city. There are blocks twice and even thrice as long as they ought to be, with a consequent dangerous crowding of streets. There is a lack of open spaces in the midst of the city with the result that thousands have no means of wholesome recreation, no access to free and unincumbered air; while for their children the streets are the only playgrounds, beset as they are with physical and moral perils. Life in this environment under these conditions, is not a highly attractive boon. There is nothing in it to exalt the minds of men, to uplift the spirit; but there is much in it to generate discontent, pessimism, despair—to make living a routine, sullen existence. He is woefully lacking in understanding who imagines that these conditions are without a very real and sensible influence on the physical, intellectual and moral life of a community. Under these handicaps the latent power there is in society to uplift itself can accomplish very little, if anything. The men who rule today must consider the needs of Winchester 25 years hence. They must make provision to meet just needs. The Spectator can conceive of only one reason why a town, however small, should not mark the lines of its future growth; that is, that it does not expect to grow.

The Spectator believes that the good women of Winchester and elsewhere should interest themselves in the matter of poll tax payments. They should make it their business to see that the male members of their households pay this just tax. Every patriotic wife and every patriotic mother, as well as every other patriotic woman, should exert their forcible influences in the matter of making legitimate voters out of their husbands, fathers and brothers. That is helping to build citizenship.

"In Winchester life is worth living." Let us make it so. Nature has favored Winchester as it has few other towns.

Unless you can say a good word for your neighbor and for Winchester, do not say anything. The real optimist sees the good and it does not follow that he may not also see the bad, or the half bad. But it is the pessimist who exploits the unhappy side of things. It is mighty enervating to be cheerful.

Conspicuously displayed in one Winchester home is this excellent bit of philosophy:

"A bad habit is the most cruel of all the masters."

The Spectator.

EDWIN A. WILCOX.

Edwin A. Wilcox, connected with the dry goods trade in Boston for almost 50 years, died Monday at the Convalescent Home on Chestnut street, where he had been for the past two years, after a long illness. He was 73 years old.

Mr. Wilcox was born in Zanesville, Ohio, moving with his parents in early life to Westminster, West. Vt. At the beginning of the civil war he enlisted in a Vermont regiment. He was discharged in 1862 for disability and came to Boston the following year.

He entered the employ of Stone, Wood & Co., by whom he was employed for five years. He then went with Jackson, Mandell & Daniell as a commercial traveler. He later engaged in the commission business and became the selling agent of the Merrimack Woolen Mills and the Griswoldville Manufacturing Company. His office for many years was at 67 Chauncey street.

Mr. Wilcox lived on Glen street, Somerville, with his mother and sister for many years until his disability required his removal to the Winchester institution.

Prayers were held at No. 17 Chestnut street on Tuesday afternoon. The funeral and interment took place at Westminster West, Vt., yesterday.

ELECTRICS LOST TROLLEYS.

Sunday evening one of the electric cars lost its trolley crossing the steam tracks in the centre, the trolley pole becoming tangled in the guy wires, breaking one of them and pulling the pole off the car. On Monday forenoon a Woburn electric lost its trolley and another guy wire was broken. A half hour later a Boston bound car had its pole tangled up in the wires and it was pulled off the car. Had anyone been behind the cars which lost their poles they might have been badly injured when the heavy poles fell to the ground and dragged after the car. Passengers on the cars were badly scared when the poles struck the roof of the cars and jangled to the track and along the street. Monday afternoon a Woburn car lost its trolley and was stalled for a minute directly on the railroad crossing.

The concert on Manchester Field last Saturday afternoon by the Fifth Regiment Band was excellent and proved to be a rare treat to the large number of people on the field. Heretofore, with but few exceptions these concerts have not appealed to the people because of the poor work on the part of the players, many of them evidently taking up music as a side issue. But at this concert the men were all trained musicians, so that the concert proved to be one of rare enjoyment. Next Saturday afternoon the Eighth Regiment Band, a crack organization will give the concert.

Under a new law, passed this year, towns may elect a bird warden for the protection, care and encouragement of birds which live upon insects injurious to trees and crops. The town of Dover is the first town to take advantage of the law, and a bird warden has been appointed. The utility of birds, as well as their aesthetic value is becoming recognized all over the country and people owning large places are endeavoring to attract birds by building nests, providing food and protecting the birds from slaughter. There are many birds in this vicinity and they should be amply protected.

That railroad travel is safer than travel by automobile and that as an engine of destruction the locomotive is hardly to be compared with the motor car is indicated plainly by figures carefully gathered. The number of people reported killed in New York state within the past year exceeds the deaths by accident on all the railroads of the United States. But while the railroad is held strictly to account for those whom it maims or kills, the alarming increase of automobile fatalities shows only too clearly the immunity which the reckless automobile driver of today enjoys.

OAKLAND

Model 42 Oakland

MODEL 42 five-passenger touring car is bound to create a deep impression before the season is far advanced. It embodies sound engineering principles and possesses enough meritorious innovations to distinguish it from the common type of touring car. The body has a number of daring lines which stamp it as an individual design, and the aluminum steps, shroud and V-shaped radiator give the car a dashing appearance. Oakland's are made in four and six cylinder types—$1000 to $3000—four, five and seven passenger touring cars, limousines, coupes and roadsters.

From Corn to Toasties

—a capital evolution

The ripened kernels of pearly white Indian Corn with their succulent goodness, are cooked, then rolled into thin, wafery bits, and toasted to a golden brown.

Add a little cream and sugar—perhaps some fresh berries—and the combination smacks wondrous good.

Post Toasties are untouched by human hand from start to finish of the making, and come to you crisp and sweet—ready to eat from the package. Wholesome, nourishing—a Royal dish for hot days—and all days.

Scotmen and Funerals.
Englishmen, says Ian McLaren in "Books and Bookmen," bear themselves well at marriages, where Scotsmen are at a disadvantage because the cautious Scotch eye is focused upon an uncertain future. But the Scotman shines at a funeral as one of the luxuries of life.

"Peter," says one mourner to his neighbor at the tail of a walking funeral, "div ye see Jamie Thompson walking in the front side by side with the chief mourner and him no a drop of blood to the corpse?"

"Vine I see him, a forward, upsettin', ambeetious body. He would be inside the hearse if he could"—the most awful and therefore most enviable position for a sober minded Scot.

A BIG PACKING PLANT.

What One Concern is Doing to Feed the People.

The following letter was received by Supt. of Streets Spates from Mr. Charles F. French, who was for many years connected with the Street Department. Mr. French is now making his home at Rockford, Mich. In his letter dated Chicago, June 30, he says:

A visit to the plant of Swift & Co., Chicago, will give you a few facts about the business and the interesting sights of the plant. The total number of employees, over seven thousand people, are employed in the Chicago office and plant. The dressing capacity of the plant is twenty-five hundred cattle, seven thousand hogs and seven thousand sheep a day.

Over eight thousand cords of hickory wood are burned in smoke rooms, 113,000 tons of salt and 14,000 tons of sugar are used in curing. The buildings cover acres—floor space, 92, land 40 acres. The U. S. Government inspectors pass three times an animal dressed on the plant. Every inspector is a graduate veterinary surgeon who has passed a special civil service examination; the first inspection takes place when the animals are unloaded from the cars at the stockyard—they are examined twice in the throat glands. On the least suspicion they are taken back to the retaining live hog pens. The hogs are not dressed the same day they are brought from the yard, but are allowed to rest until the day after. The yard capacity is for 5,000 hogs. After a rest and a shower bath the hogs are driven, a dozen or more at a time, into a pen at the base of a hoisting wheel, then they pass eight hundred at a time on the journey to the dressing and cleaning room to the coolers. After passing through the hot water vat they are received by the skilled workmen, each of whom has his particular part to scrape and clean them, the U. S. Government tagger tags the hogs which have been retained for further inspection and the internal organs are removed and examined. Just before leaving this floor the third U. S. inspection is made before being passed to the drying room. In one hour the meat is dry enough to be placed in the coolers to be chilled. You would be impressed by the skill of the pork cutters—each has his particular cut to make with the heavy cleaver as it moves from block to block. The next room, ham and bacon, are inspected; they have been covered in a pickle of sugar, salt and water. The sheep and calf cooler, one hundred eight by one hundred six in size, has a capacity of three thousand sheep and one thousand five hundred calves. From the balcony you witness the whole operation of sheep dressing, from the beginning to the final inspection, at the rate of four hundred an hour, pass through the skilled hands of fifty workmen, which is interesting to watch. Beef dressing is one of the most interesting sights—250 in one hour. The cattle are driven in runways from the rest pens to the upper floor of the beef house; from the runways the animal enters small mechanically operated pens where they are painlessly despatched by a sledge hammer on the head, a movement of the pen automatically deposits them on dressing floor, by the aid of special machinery with the regularity of clock work, in thirty-five minutes from the time of starting they are ready for the dressing room. The U. S. Government inspectors are everywhere on this floor. Automatic machinery takes the place of hand labor all through the operation of beef dressing, lifting, lowering and moving the meat from place to place and never allowing it to touch the floor. Before it leaves this room, every side is washed and no further handling is required until the meat is sold. I would like to tell you about the oleomargarine and its ingredients and may do so later.

WINCHESTER DEFEATED.

In one of the most loosely played games thus far this season, the Winchester team met defeat at the hands of the St. Eulalia's of South Boston on Manchester Field last Saturday afternoon.

The home team found it necessary to change pitchers three times, and then the outcome was not satisfactory. When Winchester went to the bat in the last half of the ninth inning the score was ten to three in favor of the visitors. Then the fun began. St. Eulalia's pitcher weakened, with the result that he was batted freely when the home team piled up six runs the score being nine to ten at the close. It looked for a short time in this inning as if the visitors would be defeated, but by a determined effort they closed the game one to the good. The only brilliant play during the game was the securing of a foul fly by the catcher on a long run to the back bench. He got the ball, but went headlong over the seat. The game was characterized by many fumbles and loose plays.

A DANGEROUS PLACE.

There is at least one very dangerous place on Highland avenue that the Selectmen should give prompt attention to and that is the stretch of road from the residence of Mr. Chapman to a point north just above where it narrows at the culvert. There are no sidewalks and the street is hardly broad enough to permit the passage of two automobiles going in opposite directions. Highland avenue is the race course for auto speeders and the danger to pedestrians is very great at this point. No accident to a pedestrian has yet occurred, but about two years ago an auto ran into the culvert. Scores of people take the beautiful avenue for their Sunday afternoon walk and when caught in the pocket by an auto many persons become confused and alarmed. You can back up to the rail fence or crawl under it and thus avoid being hit. The avenue here is in a hollow, so that the view of a coming car, is limited. At other places on this street one can back into the bushes on the side, but at the culvert there is not this opportunity. This stretch of road should be widened to its full width and a sidewalk built on at least one side. Highland avenue is too important a thoroughfare and used by too many people to allow such a condition as exists at this culvert.

WHO PAYS?

A mechanic of today has a house with a bath room, a heater in the cellar and a coal range burning anthracite at $7 a ton; his father never dreamed of such luxury. The average man and family are better fed, better housed and better clothed than their forebears. They spend more and they make more, and the high returns which they exact for their labor contribute to the high cost of practically everything used and bought by others. They also pay, directly or indirectly, more taxes than their progenitors did; they must meet a demand at every turn. The world is literally swarming with food inspectors and other investigators and guardians, local, state and federal.

Who pays for the boards of health and their activities, who sustains the institutions caring for the tuberculosis, who bears the cost of railroad safety appliances and of high wages to the railroad men; who pays the bill for the grocer's telephone and for medical inspection in the public schools? The average citizen pays his share for all these modern improvements and countless others, tangible and intangible, and he wants more of them. When he gets the new ones he will pay for them, too. There is no escape. The place for cheap living is the South Sea Islands, where modern efficiency has not intruded.

Perhaps the new president of the Boston & Maine Railroad may now be able to give his time to the elimination of our grade crossing.

Mr. Charles S. Bird has announced that he is a candidate for Governor on the Progressive ticket. This may mean the election of another Democratic Governor.

They say that one reason why Brookline apartment houses are so popular, is because the janitors keep beer for the tenants. One of them has been arrested and fined.

Mr. Charles S. Bird, candidate of the Progressives for Governor, says that the State is smothered by commissioners. Which is true; and a singular thing is that they are a law unto themselves, do as they please, spend as they like, and the people have no say in the matter.

The vigorous action taken by the cemetery commissioners has practically put a stop to stealing flowers in Wildwood Cemetery. The pity of it is that they were ever called upon to take such action. However, these few thieves probably had no consideration for the living or the dead.

Beverly need not fret at a $17.90 tax rate, Merrimac has $25, Orange $23. —[Beverly Citizen.] There is not only occasion to fret over the rapid way tax rates are going up, but also for worry among many thinking people. These town and city debts have got to be paid; it won't do to leave them all to the coming generations.

Conditions have become so bad in the central fire station that something will have to be done as soon as possible. The building is fast becoming dangerous and useless, a large sum of money is expended in repairs and strengthening it, there is grave danger to the men who occupy it. Furthermore the plant has deteriorated almost to the point of uselessness. The grade crossing problem should not longer be allowed to interfere with the erection of a new fire station. It may be years yet before this question is settled.

Curtis Guild will probably be a candidate for Governor, and it is reported that the principal plank in his campaign of vote getting will be to fight President Mellen of the New Haven Railroad. He is too late however, as the people are sick and tired of reading of the abuse of Mr. Mellen and the New England railroads. They believe that he should now be given an opportunity to attend to his business and carry out unhampered the many intricate problems and improvements that confront the railroads. Curtis Guild had better keep out of the contest, if this is the only excuse he has for being a candidate.

It looks as if the voters of Middlesex county might have the privilege of choosing a candidate of their own for county commissioner this fall, as Charles S. Richardson of Lowell is said to be reluctant to serve another term. For many years the voters of the county have been practically obliged to vote for a "holdover," that is a man appointed by the commissioners and court officers to fill a vacancy.

AN INTERESTING TAX TABLE.

We print below the taxes for 1908, 1912 and 1913, excepting the local tax rate for this year, which assessor Carter assures us will show not much if any change either up or down. Of interest to many is the great increase in the tax levy this year over what it was in 1908, which amounts to $4,620. The following table is interesting as showing the increase in the various units that go to make up the tax rate that the property owners are called upon to pay.

	1912	1913	1908
Tax rate	$18.00		$17.40
State Tax	21,000.00	$28.00	18,005.00
Metropolitan sewer tax	11,776.36	13,871.08	9,285.97
Metropolitan park tax	8,992.61	9,728.40	9,286.33
County tax	11,558.03	14,125.59	11,410.09
State highway tax	98.00	98.00	97.66
Charles River Basin tax	1,072.30	1,341.59	None
Town tax	222,208.61	217,977.40	152,346.40
Overlays	1,189.74	4,000.00	4,000.00
Total amount raised by taxation	$277,815.65	$289,142.06	$204,521.39

As all know, possession is nine points of the law, so that the men selected and elected have been virtually creatures of the commissioners and not of the people. A powerful county ring, it has long been asserted, was depended upon to keep them in office until they died or resigned.

THE AUGUST STRAND MAGAZINE.

The August Strand is a special fiction number and contains a great many short and long stories written by leading novelists. Conan Doyle brings to a conclusion his thrilling story entitled "The Poison Belt," while Baroness Orczy continues her serial of Roman days, "Unto Caesar." Contributors of short stories include Bertram Atkey, J. J. Bell, James Barr, Martin Swayne and Horace Annesley Vachell. Among the interesting articles may be mentioned, "Amusing Children I Have Met," written and illustrated by that famous delineator of child life, Hilda Cowham; "Animal Studies from 'Life'," by Leonard Larkin, and "A Study in Hats," by Gertrude Bacon. "Nightmares in Stone" is an interesting description, excellently illustrated, of the gargoyles of Notre Dame. "The Greatest Mystery of the Sea" will tax the reader's ingenuity to solve. According to the writer it has not up to the present been satisfactorily elucidated. Many other stories and articles make the August Strand particularly interesting.

Fair Sample.
Mr. Follett and little Edward were sitting meekly in the corner where they had been placed by Mrs. Follett, well out of the way of her evening's work. Little Edward was reading the "History of the Town of Dorby" to his grandfather. He had reached a genealogical labyrinth.
"What does 'paternal grandmother' mean, grandpa?" he inquired, pausing for breath.
"You look up paternal in the dictionary, sonny," said Mr. Follett. And he shoved the book toward his grandson.
"It means 'fatherly,' like a father," read the boy. "I don't understand that, grandpa."
"Well, now, see here," said Mr. Follett hastily as his wife left the room for a moment. "It's like this, I reckon. The father's the head of the house so called and the same with a grandfather, but sometimes they're married to a kind of a masterful—well, I guess your grandma's what they'd call a paternal grandmother." Mr. Follett had just finished as he heard brisk footsteps along the hall. "You get right on with your reading, boy."—Youth's Companion.

A Buoy's Long Voyage.
On Sept. 13, 1911, there was picked up on the beach at Cullivoe, Paparou, in the north of Scotland, a life buoy, battered and stained, bearing the inscription, "Passed by J. Guthrie, San Francisco, Cal., June 1, 1905."
The vessel Stanley Dollar was wrecked off the west coast of Japan in August, 1905, and the buoy, whose history is bound up with that of the ship, must have been floating in the ocean currents for six years until it landed in Scotland. Whether it went around the Horn or through the northwest passage or down by Australasia and around the Cape of Good Hope into the Atlantic will, of course, always remain a matter of doubt and conjecture. This buoy is said to hold the world's record for drifting the longest distance. It was six years on the way from the Pacific ocean to the Atlantic and must have been washed into many a strange port before it was picked up on the Scotch island.—Harper's Weekly.

Cautious Judge.
"Judge, why did you adjourn court for five minutes just now?"
"I felt that I had to sneeze."
"Yes?"
"And I feared if I sneezed on the bench the lawyers would make that the basis of a demand for a new trial!"—Louisville Courier-Journal.

He Couldn't Plow.
A certain incident connected with the great Napoleon while he was in exile in Elba is commemorated in the island to this hour by an inscription affixed to the wall of a peasant's house. A man named Giacconi was plowing when the famous exile came along one day and expressed an interest in his work. Napoleon even took the plowshare out of the man's hand and attempted to guide it himself. But the oxen refused to obey him, overturned the plow and spoiled the furrow. The inscription runs thus: "Napoleon the Great, passing by this place in MDCCCIV, took in the neighboring field a plowshare from the hands of a peasant and himself tried to plow, but the oxen, rebellious to those hands which yet had guided Europe, headlong ran from the furrow."

Sleeplessness.
When people of nervous temperament retire for the night and cannot sleep it is usually because their brains are still active and refuse to part with the blood which should properly travel elsewhere. What the sleepless really need is a sloping bed, so that the congested head will relieve itself easily of the superfluous blood. For the upper part of the body, being heavier than the lower, inevitably sinks more deeply into the bedding, and even if one props the head on two pillows the neck is curved and strained and obstructs the backward flow of blood.

Notions as to "Lost Arts."

Current tradition credits the ancients with many "lost arts." It is still common to hear people say that means unknown to us must have been employed to erect the pyramids, that the Damascus blade is beyond the power of modern cutlers and that the art of hardening copper died with some little brown Aztec.

In point of fact, larger stones than any found in the pyramids have been quarried in Maine, carried across the sea and erected in buildings in England and France. If any one cared to pay the cost there are plenty of contractors who would build a replica of the largest pyramid and would not take so very long about it.

It is doubtful whether a "Damascus blade" will stand as much as a good modern hand saw or the spring of a cheap clock.

Copper can be hardened by modern methods to equal any specimen that has been left to us by the ancients. Many arts that are supposed to be lost are simply abandoned because there is no modern need of cultivating them, and others are not even abandoned, but employed every day and improved upon.—New York Tribune.

Old English Press Gangs.

In the past the news of a shortage of men in the navy and the hint of action by the admiralty would have put the merchantman on guard. Toward the end of the eighteenth century, for instance, there was a call for sailors for the navy, and "persuasion" was the rule. "The press in the Thames for the last three days has been very severe. Five or six hundred seamen have been laid hold of." Thus runs one of many entries in the papers of the period. It was not always peaceful "pressing," as this item in the Times of 1795 will prove: "There was a very hot press on the river Friday night last, when several hundred able seamen were procured. One of the gangs in boarding a Liverpool trader was resisted by the crew, when a desperate affray took place, in which many of the former were thrown overboard, and a lieutenant who boarded them was killed by a shot from the vessel."—London Chronicle.

The Horsehair Trick.

Almost every day illustrations are afforded of the marvelous ingenuity of the modern thief. Recently a couple of rogues nearly succeeded in extracting a valuable tie pin from the cravat of a man sitting between them in a music hall by means of an almost invisible horsehair stretching from the right hand of one thief to the left hand of his accomplice. The thieves by simultaneously raising their hands under the pretense of putting their pipes or cigarettes into their mouths tried, by pulling the horsehair taut, gradually to lift the victim's tie pin from its place. In this particular instance the trick was not successful, but it is often worked with advantage. If the pin falls to the ground unnoticed the thieves take the earliest opportunity of seizing it, or by a skillful manipulation of the horsehair the article may be made to slide down the arm in visible line right into the hand of one of the thieves.—London Tit-Bits.

AFFECTS PRICE OF COAL.

The Pennsylvania Legislature has put a tax of 2 1/2 per cent on all coal at the mine value, and this law went into effect July 1. That means that all coal coming from the mines will cost about 9 cents per ton more than dealers had bargained for. And of course the consumer will have to pay the bill.

When the Boston dealers raised the price 25 cents per ton the first of this month, the papers predicted another raise on Sept. 1; but now, because of this new tax, the papers predict the rise to take place on Aug. 1, and an additional one on Sept. 1.

The indignation of the people of New England in those places where steam car fares have been raised, and sooner or later the raise will come to every town and city, must not forget that the raise was necessitated for the most part because of the enormous increase in the wages of the train service men. Public sentiment favored those increases of pay for the public always likes to see better wages paid. The public is inclined to look upon these requests for more pay as a conflict between labor and capital. They forget that ultimately they themselves must pay the bills, for the receipts of a steam railroad are but from two sources, freight and passengers. When wages are asked to be increased it is not a question of labor and capital, but whether the people can afford to stand for the increase by larger fares. The steam and electric railroads are so conducted today that the public knows just what they are earning and what they are doing. When more pay is asked for it is a simple question to figure up how much extra money is needed and just how much extra must come out of the public. The cutting or passing of dividends is but a drop in the bucket toward helping out and when this is done people who have money to invest put it into other lines of industry and the service of the railroads is crippled by lack of money for new equipment. Public sentiment directed too strongly toward every increase of wages asked for is likely to act as a boomerang. Malden News.

THE AUGUST WOMAN'S HOME COMPANION.

A remarkable contribution to the August Woman's Home Companion is an article entitled "Ethics and Cooks" by Zona Gale, in which the author shows how scientific cooking is really in its infancy. Various foods have various values and various health benefits have various requirements, yet food is seldom cooked except in hospitals with a view to the special requirements of the body. Miss Gale thinks that a great revolution will take place along this line.

The Woman's Home Companion's campaign for "Better Babies" is continued in the August number with a report by Anna Steese Richardson of "Better Babies in the Cities" in which report Mrs. Richardson describes two baby shows of the new kind at Knoxville, Tennessee, and Des Moines, Iowa, where the children were judged and awarded prizes for their physical condition rather than for their beauty. This is one of the important characteristics in the new movement—a movement which is spreading with enormous rapidity.

The regular Cooking, Fashion, Household and Young People's departments together with special art features, complete an issue of unusual charm and substance.

Owing to the strike at Ipswich the tax rate for this year has jumped from $15 to $22.

THE MAHOGANY MILL.

James Lick Made Good His Boast When Scorned as a Sutor.

The story of "Lick's Folly," or the Mahogany Mill," has to do with the romance of the life of James Lick, the donor of the Lick observatory.

In early life young Lick fell in love with the daughter of a well to do miller for whom he worked. When he made known his love, which was reciprocated by the girl, the miller was angry and is said to have replied:

"Out, you beggar! Dare you think of my daughter, who will inherit my riches? Have you a mill like this? Have you a single penny in your purse?"

To this Lick replied that he had nothing as yet, but one day he would have a mill beside which this one would be a pigsty.

In 1854 the quiet, parsimonious James Lick surprised everybody by building a magnificent flour mill near San Jose. The mill was finished with in solid mahogany, highly polished, and was furnished with the best machinery possible. He made the grounds about the mill very attractive and began early to set out trees both for fruit and ornament.

Lick caused his elegant mill to be photographed without and within and sent the pictures to the miller who had scorned him in his youth.

Nineteen years after Mr. Lick built his mill, Jan. 16, 1873, he surprised the people of San Jose again by giving it to the Palme Memorial society of Boston, half the proceeds of sale to be used for a memorial hall and half to sustain a lecture course.—Exchange.

FIERCE ARAB DOGS.

Easy to Put the Big Brutes to Flight if One Knows the Trick.

The village dogs of Arabia are a real danger to strangers, whom they attack on sight without provocation. By strangers I mean any one except their own immediate owners, whether natives or not, writes Lady Ramsey in the Sunday School Times. They are, as a rule, great, powerful brutes, often very handsome, extremely fierce and capable of defending the flocks from wolves and other marauders. I have often been told that when attacked by these ferocious animals the proper thing to do is to sit down quickly on the ground, when they will at once desist.

But for my part I never had the courage to try this plan and had never seen it done during all my years of travel till last year. We had stopped to rest and eat our lunch in a village old, and I was looking out from an open balcony and saw an elderly Turk coming along between some houses opposite.

Suddenly two huge dogs, barking furiously, dashed at him from an open gateway. Instantly he dropped to the ground in a sitting position. For a moment I thought he had fallen and expected to see the dogs on top of him. To my astonishment they turned and fled, their tails between their legs.

Before they could return, if they would have done so, a couple of villagers appeared, helped the old fellow to his feet and accompanied him out of the range of my vision.

LONDON'S ANCIENT TOWER.

A Beefeater and a Yeoman Lock Its Gates Every Night.

Strange to say, very few people are aware of an ancient custom which is still kept up at the Tower of London. Just before midnight a beefeater and the chief yeoman porter secure the keys from the governor's house to "lock up." Having received the keys they proceed to the guard room.

"Escort for the keys?" calls out the porter, and a sergeant and six privates turn out.

The procession then marches off, and the sentries they pass issue the usual challenge of "Who goes there?" to which the answer is "Keys."

Arriving at the entrance to the Tower grounds, the lion's gate, the porter locks the gates and the party returns to the guardroom, the sentry challenging as before and receiving the same answer. However, on arrival at the guardroom again the sentry stationed there stamps his foot, at the same time giving the usual challenge.

"Keys," replies the porter.

"Whose keys?" the sentry asks.

"King George's keys."

"Advance King George's keys, and all's well."

The porter then says, "God bless King George," and all present respond with "Amen." The keys are then saluted and returned to the governor's house, where they remain until the next night's ceremony.—Pearson's Weekly.

COLOR BLINDNESS.

It Takes Some Peculiar Twists in the Matter of Heredity.

Professor Bateson in lecturing before the Royal Institution on "Heredity of Sex" related some curious facts which had been discovered as the result of examining several generations of a family in which color blindness appeared.

A color blind woman was very rarely found, and she was always the daughter of a color blind man. Her sons and daughters would be normal, but if her daughters had sons they would be found to be normal and color blind in equal numbers.

A curious anomaly with reference to color blindness appeared in twin girls. They were exactly alike in appearance, but one girl was color blind and the other not. No explanation of this exception has been found.

Professor Bateson said that there was a popular belief that sons in certain respects took after their mothers and daughters after their fathers. Within a reasonable range of speculation this was so. As to sons taking after their mothers, they saw this in the experience of their own families.—London Cor. New York Times.

Why Clocks Get Out of Order.

The reason why mantelpiece clocks so often get out of order is so obvious that it is strange that attention to it has not been drawn before. A London clockmaker said:

"It is because mantelpieces are rarely level. If a clock meant for a mantelpiece is not placed in an exactly horizontal position it is sure to go wrong. When the clock gains or loses because of its slanting position people regularly move the hands forward or backward, as the case may be, in order to adjust it. Eventually the clock's hands are moved about so much that the mechanism gets out of order and the clock refuses even to tick. Watches and travelling clocks are constructed differently from the old-fashioned clock, and they will go in any position. That is why they are relied upon more than the ornamental mantelpiece clock."—New York Times.

A Born Statesman.

"What's the idea, George?" inquired Mr. Washington. "Why do you chop down this cherry tree? Have you anything against cherry trees?"

"No, sir."

"Maybe you are in favor of deforestation?"

"No, sir."

"Doing this for a moving picture concern?"

"By no means."

"Then why chop down a tree?"

"I just thought of going on the stump," replied the future father of his country. And then Mr. Washington realized that George was a born statesman.—Kansas City Journal.

Rough on the Minister's Son.

Willie, aged five, was one day sent away from the dinner table for misbehavior. He went into the kitchen, and the maid said:

"Willie, I'd be ashamed to be sent away from the table, as big a boy as you are."

"Well, that's what a fellow gets for being born in a preacher's family," rejoined the little fellow.—Chicago News.

In His Defense.

"Daughter," called the father from his position at the top of the stairs at the well known hour of 11:35 p. m., "doesn't that young man know how to say good night?"

"Does he?" echoed the young lady in the darkened hall. "Well, I should say he does!"—Ladies Home Journal.

His Meek Suggestion.

Mrs. Grimly—Is there any way you can break yourself of that habit of talking in your sleep? Mr. Grimly tremulously, but hopefully—Do you think it would help any, my dear, if you'd let me talk more when I'm awake?—Puck.

It is only by labor that thought can be made healthy, and only by thought that labor can be made happy.—Ruskin.

TO ENLIGHTEN PUBLIC ON NEED OF SCHOOL REFORM.

Not the least important part of the International Congress on School Hygiene to be held at Buffalo August 25-30 will be given over to papers and discussions calling public attention to the urgent need of extending medical inspection throughout the individual communities of the United States.

This need of reform, according to educators, is based upon the findings made by recent medical inspection in schools which show:

That of all pupils 26 per cent suffer from eye strain.

That 6 to 12 per cent suffer from enlarged tonsils.

That 12 to 24 per cent suffer from nasal obstruction.

That 2 to 5 per cent suffer from defective hearing.

That 50 to 75 per cent suffer from decayed teeth.

That 10 to 30 per cent suffer from nervous disorders.

That 5 to 20 per cent suffer from some deformity.

That 1 to 15 per cent suffer from skin diseases.

That 1 to 67 per cent suffer from pediculosis of the scalp.

Laws providing for medical inspection are needed, says a report of the Sage Foundation because experience has demonstrated that efficient medical inspection better health conditions among school children, safeguards them from disease, and renders them healthier and more vigorous.

"Every such law should make provision for frequent inspections of children by duly qualified school physicians to detect and exclude cases of contagious disease," continues the report. "It should provide for examination of all the children by school doctors, to detect any physical defects which may prevent the children from receiving the full benefit of their school work, or which may require that the work be modified to avoid injury to the child. It should empower school physicians to conduct examinations of teachers and janitors, and make regular inspections of buildings, premises, and drinking water, to insure their sanitary conditions. School nurses should be provided for in each law, because they are the most valuable adjunct of medical inspection, and the most efficient possible link between the schools and the homes."

NOT DOING THEIR DUTY.

The startling statement is made by a competent statistician that 85 out of every 100 people over 65 are partially or wholly dependent upon their relatives or charity for support. If this is true the figures ten years from now will be still more startling. The old-fashioned virtue of thrift is being not only neglected but discouraged at every turn. The tendency of all legislation is toward making the well-to-do pay the bills and removing most of the responsibility from the great mass of people with the admonition to go ahead and spend. The two great institutions of New England that have stood for economy and thrift, the savings bank and the co-operative bank are hardly lifting a hand to urge people to be saving. Both of these institutions which are incorporated for the good of the people, and the preambles of whose institutions generally dilate at length on saving up for a rainy day are merely taking what money comes to them and loaning it. We cannot recall a single bank that is doing any campaigning to urge people to save. Some of the trust companies are doing a signal service along this line but the two institutions that ought to be awake along lines in such matters are dead to their responsibilities.—Melrose News.

EQUAL SUFFRAGE DEPARTMENT.

Conducted by Winchester League.

The Woman's Journal gives an interesting account of the question of garbage disposal that is now agitating Chicago, which certainly shows the necessity for good municipal housekeeping, in which, as in home-housekeeping women are liable to excel.

Two women, new voters, have just given a practical illustration of the different points of view of men and women on the same issue. It seems the Chicago Reduction Company has had a contract for disposing of the garbage of Chicago which has expired, or will soon, and are seeking a renewal.

The Common Council Committee and the Mayor went on an investigating trip. As often happens in such cases, they went at considerable expense, in automobiles and their visit was heralded. In their report, they "found the plant as clean as a kitchen, the floors washed and scraped and practically no odor."

Two women, actuated by the belief that the death rate of babies is increased every year by bad garbage systems, determined to make an independent investigation. They were Mary E. McDowell of the University Settlement, head of the Industrial Department of the Illinois Equal Suffrage Association, and Lydia Smith, both members of the Woman's City Club. They went in the street cars and their visit was unheralded.

They sat on a lumber pile adjacent to the garbage plant for several hours and watched the hauling of garbage and afterwards went into the plant itself. They found the conditions "terrible;" the methods employed not only "unscientific and wasteful but unsatisfactory and the stench intolerable. The wind carried the innumerable flies and the odor directly into the windows of a butterine factory only a short distance away," and they could not understand how people in the neighborhood could bear the smell. They found the "scows standing in the river, their containers rotted and broken and practically affording no covering though supposed to be air-tight." In the plant were "great heaps of all sorts of disease-spreaders refuse covered with flies and bugs and emitting a sickening odor." They saw things as they were without whitewashing, and were to make their report to the Common Council. As a result of the Council Committee's report the Mayor advised an extension of the contract and lauded the plant as "ideal." It is said the Finance Committee has been "jockeying" with the garbage question for two years. As the problem has reached the point where the health of the city may be imperiled, the Health Committee may take it in hand. The Woman's City Club is also taking a hand in its solution.

With "indirect" influence now superseded by "direct" influence—votes in its hands to back it—doubtless its power for bettering conditions will be felt.

CONNECTICUT AUTO LAWS AMENDED.

Powerful Warning Signal Required
but Its Use Restricted. Muffler Cut-out Barred.

Hartford, Conn. Several amendments to the state automobile laws have just been passed by the Legislature and signed by Governor Baldwin. These amendments were made with ends in view: to insure the maximum of safety in the operation of motor vehicles, and to eliminate unnecessary noise.

The most important sections deal with brakes, mufflers and warning signals. All cars of over 10 H. P. must be provided with at least two powerful brakes. The motors of all automobiles must be muffled at all times in such a manner that the noise to the exhaust will not "constitute a nuisance to the public."

The section relating to warning signals is of especial significance as it closely conforms to similar action taken last month by the state of California and to measures now in effect in over a score of large cities. It provides that every motor vehicle shall be equipped with a signal device "which shall produce an abrupt sound sufficiently loud to serve as an adequate warning of danger." While making compulsory the use of a powerful signal, the law stipulates that "no person shall make or cause to be made any unnecessary noise with such a signal or use the same except as a warning of danger."

The circumstances attending the passage of this measure are particularly interesting. A member of the Legislature, a non-motorist, introduced a bill making illegal the use of any warning signal except that operated by means of a rubber bulb. The committee to which this was referred made an investigation and found that the bulb horn was entirely inadequate and inefficient as a safety device. The proposed bill was therefore rejected and the present statute providing for the restricted use of a powerful signal substituted.

Legislation of this character in the interest of public safety and public comfort has done much toward removing the prejudice often felt by the pedestrian for the motorist.

PROFITABLE DAILY TITHING.

"Daily Heavenly Manna."

This little book is having the largest circulation of any of its kind and is conceded by Christians everywhere to be the most helpful.

If Christians allow the rush and crush of selfish ambition to deprive them of their daily portion of heavenly food, they must not be surprised if they grow spiritually leaner day by day, and if the peace of God gives place in their hearts to the discontent which is growing in the world, notwithstanding the multiplication of our comforts and privileges.

Daily Heavenly Manna contains a collection of Scripture texts with appropriate quotations for every day in the year. Surely the little tithe of time daily spent in partaking of its morsels of heavenly counsel cannot fail to profit all who partake. It is published to do good—not for profit.

Your Friends' Birth Dates.

An autograph and birthday record feature in this book is a great convenience. Opposite each day of the year are blank lines upon which you can secure the autographs of your friends and be reminded of their birthdays as they occur. This makes the book more valuable yearly. In ten years you would not sell it for ten dollars.

Besides it has a place for Birth Records, Marriage Records and Death Records. Also it has a table showing the day of the week of any date for one hundred and fifty years.

THE MAGIC HORN

Their Dreams Came True

By CLARISSA MACKIE

The road wound sinuously between tall hedges of blackberry and cat brier. Woodbine draped the young locusts along the fence, and in places the wild grape vines had hung tendrils across the intervening space until they formed a green arbor overhead. The sand yielded easily to the tread, and on either side of the road there was a hard beaten footpath. It was a road for slow moving country wagons or for pedestrians and had never known the arrogance of a motorcar.

Rose Lewis lingered under the grapevines where the sun filtered through and cast flickering shadows on her white hat and gown. Beneath the hat's brim her face looked forth as sweet as her namesakes, the wild roses of the hedge. Under her arm was a roll of music, for she had been giving a piano lesson to the smallest Jones girl, and the hour had been one of such exasperating discords that Rose had sought the lane road, hoping that the song of a thrush might obliterate the inharmonious sounds that still rang in her head.

The thrush was singing on a tall wind bent chestnut tree, and as he swayed to and fro, thrilled with the ecstasy of his own song, Rose paused to watch him. When he had ceased and had winged his way to the woods beyond the girl still stood there enchanted by the bird notes from bough and thicket until from the highway that ran through the valley below there came the melody of a horn. Rose had heard it once before. Late at night it had sounded directly under her window, and she had seen the flash of passing lights and the crunch of automobile tires in the road as the machine whizzed past, and the sound had left its impression upon her.

Now she started again as it echoed through the valley, coming nearer, nearer. She knew that if she hurried to the end of the lane road she would see it pass, but she didn't want to see it. Rose Lewis was a dreamer of dreams, and she preferred to delude herself with the fairy tales of her childhood. Now she laughed as she told herself that it was the magic horn of the fairy prince who was coming to rescue her from a thicket of dangerous thorns. She certainly would not go to the end of the road and see her dream shattered by a mud splashed automobile filled with velled and goggled forms.

The highway crossed the winding lane just below the tree where the thrush had sung. The horn sounded again, coming nearer, its musical chord trembling on the summer air. Then with a crackling rush something big and black invaded the winding road. Rose had barely time to flee into the thorny thicket when there was a loud explosion, and the big machine came to a standstill in front of her, making her a prisoner among the thorns.

From the red leather cushioned seat a solitary man sat and stared at her from behind big goggles until the truth of the situation burst upon him. Then he flung aside cap and goggles, tore off his linen duster and stepped down into the narrow path. His handsome face was wrinkled with concern as he addressed her.

"I'm afraid I nearly ran you down," he said courteously. "If you will allow me to assist you out of this mess of thorns—there, my knife will make it easier—why, your sleeve is torn, and I'm afraid the thorns have wounded you."

Rose was too startled by the suddenness of the accident to make a reply.

At last he cut an opening in the thicket and gently extricated her from the cruel briars that snatched her skirt and pressed against her rounded arms. Here and there on her sleeve was a red stain of blood.

"I hope you will let me administer some remedies. I have a little case in my pocket with everything to allay pain, and there, if you will roll up your sleeve a little—now, that ought to give you some relief. Briars are nasty things." As he talked he was dabbing at the wounds with bits of absorbent cotton dipped in some antiseptic fluid produced from the medicine case; then he applied an ointment and deftly wound a strip of gauze down the arm to the slender wrist. When he had finished he looked carefully at his completed work, very much as if he wished he could do it all over again.

"Thank you so much," said Rose shyly. "It could have waited until I reached home. One is often scratched by thorns in the country."

"But I drove you into the thicket, and I am responsible for your injuries," he protested, with a winning smile, as he snapped the little case together and returned it to his pocket. "I'm afraid I frightened you too."

"I was frightened for the moment. You see, one does not expect motorcars in the lane road."

"I should say not!" he ejaculated, as if suddenly aware of his predicament. "It's all the fault of my map. It was creased and broken, and I could not determine whether the road to Clifford was the first or second turnoff to the left, so I tossed up a coin and took the first, and here I am with a punctured tire and almost bub deep in sand." He gazed mournfully at the car, which quite filled the narrow roadway with its bulk.

"You will need assistance to get it out," suggested Rose. "Mr. Jansen, the blacksmith, does that sort of thing. I am sure."

"Thank you. It is very likely that he can help me put on another tire. I will look him up immediately if you will kindly direct me." He looked eagerly at Rose, hoping that the way to the blacksmith's shop would be her path also.

"You must go back to the highway, and you will find it at the corner of the Clifford road, about a quarter of a mile beyond here. Oh, may I trouble you for my music roll?" She pointed to the thicket, where the forgotten music roll was half hidden among the weeds.

The stranger assisted her into the path, piloted her beyond the bulk of the machine and then returned to the thicket for the music roll. As he extricated it he could not forbear seeing the name engraved on a little silver plate under the strap.

He gave it to Rose and watched her as she went along the path away from the highroad, in which direction he must go. He did not know that the shorter route to the Lewis home would be to follow the directions she had given him and return to the highway. Rose wanted to be alone for awhile. She wanted to still the beating of her heart and to feel the telltale flush fade from her hot cheeks before she went home. She turned around for an instant, and then something happened that added to her confusion and embarrassment.

When the stranger had thrown away the bits of absorbent cotton they had clung to the blackberry bushes like tufts of snow. Now, as Rose turned she saw two birds—a yellow warbler and his soberly attired little mate—hover over the bushes and then dart down and away with the bits of cotton in their beaks.

Rose fairly ran until she reached a quiet wood road that would take her home. It had been the most exciting day she had ever known. It seemed as if every incident had borne some significance because of her foolish dreams of magic horns and princes.

The man, Neal Hayden, was not unmoved by what had happened. Once when he had been a little lad somebody had sent him a valentine. It pictured a little girl's sweet face peeping from a bower of wild roses, and the picture clung to him all through his boyhood and youth until he had come to believe that when he found his ideal girl she would have the face of his valentine, and she was always wrenched with roses.

The suddenness of seeing the lovely face of Rose Lewis framed in the pink bloom of wild roses had agitated him for the moment, and then to learn from the music roll that her name was Rose set him to dreaming dreams of his own as he slowly sought the services of the blacksmith. He, too, had reddened as the yellow birds had stolen the bits of cotton from the bushes. Every incident had its significance for him also.

The next day there came a big box of pink roses addressed to Rose Lewis, and inside was Hayden's card with an address. He expressed his hope that Rose had suffered no ill effects from her encounter with the thorns. Rose told the story to her mother, and the roses occupied a place of honor on the piano, where Rose found herself softly playing the plaintive minor chord that sounded from the horn of Hayden's automobile.

Often after that Rose heard the sound of the horn as the machine whirled past her home, but several months went by, and as she never saw Neal Hayden again she forbade herself to dream of fairy princes and magic horns and tried to forget the incident which at the time had seemed so astonishing to her. But now, instead of dreaming of imaginary princes, Rose found herself with a real flesh and blood hero, who invaded her dreams and refused to be banished.

Then came a day when she went with her cousins to the big country fair. Here were gathered many fashionable folks from the country estates near by, and here were many men from the city. Neal Hayden was there, too, and when he saw Rose with the Drake Lewises, her cousins, he fairly flew across the intervening space and claimed instant friendship with Drake Lewis, who had been his classmate at college.

After that it was only a question of time before Neal Hayden dared confess his love for Drake Lewis' little country cousin. All through that autumn, when the lane road was turning to a path of crimson and gold, Hayden was seeking for words in which to tell his love. Then one day when the wind was shaking the leaves down in golden showers Rose walked in the lane road and saw Neal Hayden coming toward her.

She waited, looking lovelier than ever in her white knitted coat and white wool cap. Just before they met the same breeze that sent her golden hair in little wisps about her ears shook a dogwood tree, and from the branches there tumbled the cunningly woven nest of a yellow warbler. From it there fluttered bits of white cotton and shreds of the blue paper which Hayden had thrown away.

The empty nest fell to the ground between them, and their eyes met above it, and Neal suddenly was aware that he need not say anything. His eyes had asked the question, hers had answered it, and their dreams had come true.

LORING AVENUE.

What is the Reason for Neglect of this Street.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

I was a little surprised in reading the STAR a few weeks ago to see that the town had spent money on Ridge street, and was further surprised to find that they had no money appropriated for this work. I have lived on Loring avenue for a number of years. This street is a main thoroughfare from Swanton street on the south to Cross street running northerly, and is the shortest way to North Winchester for the people who live west of the B. and M. R. R. It is almost impossible for the people using this street in the winter months to get through to Swanton street. The present Board of Selectmen could not see their way clear even for emergencies like this, namely to give the people in this district any relief. No money available to fix Loring avenue and the only salvation was to get the warrant committee to recommend money for this street next year. It that applies to this district and is a rule laid down by you, why did you take the liberty to do otherwise on Ridge street? Cutter Village district pays as much taxes as any other part of this town. It should be recognized by the Board of Selectmen in a fair and impartial manner. We expect as taxpayers only a fair, square deal, but we do not expect some men after they are elected, to come up here and tell us one thing and then go and do exactly opposite some place else. Build these streets where they will give the public the best services, and not three miles from the centre of the town for the accommodation of the people who reside in Arlington Heights, to get to Woburn in a roundabout way. We should look nearer home and not be so far sighted in the future. It is a rule laid down by you and your board that the money has to be appropriated then by all means stick to it and you will find that the people as a whole, will not find fault, but making a rule today, and breaking it tomorrow is bad practice. It hardly seems creditable that any street in the Hill district, could have been in very bad condition, as plenty of good binding gravel, is always available as you can readily see by looking over the other streets in that district. We invite the public to inspect Loring avenue and then judge for yourself, if we are asking for anything but our just rights. I have wondered, like others where the street appropriation is going, year in and year out, for the last few years.

Yours truly,
Patrick McGourty,
Andrew Erickson,
Charles L. M. Johnson.

MAY EARN PROFIT, SOMETIME

At first the suggestion of more money for the light plant will arouse apprehension, but upon consideration this will subside. If the new machinery was needed on account of wearing out of the old, it might be a question if the generally recognized success of the plant is not more hallucination than actuality. Happily, the need results from extensions. The plant now is very near the height of its development for its field—Reading, North Reading, Wilmington and Lynn field—is pretty nearly all traversed with wires. The extensions so far have resulted in constantly increasing investment. Commensurate returns will follow and before a great while the plant should become a source of substantial revenue. If there are skeptics this may be a source of consolation: that corporations would jump at the chance to take the plant, at its total cost to date, and perhaps add a good sized profit—off the hands of the town—Reading Chronicle.

Same old story, returns will come some time, but they seldom materialize.

A Bit of Kitchener's Tact.

The Egyptian Bedouin is not compelled to pay taxes or to render the ordinary obligations of citizenship, which in Egypt includes military service. Soon after the outbreak of the war between Turkey and Italy a delegation of Bedouins approached General Kitchener and told him that they wanted to go across the border to the assistance of their hard pressed fellows in Tripoli. The English general admitted with unexpected readiness that their request was reasonable, but he reminded them that by granting it he would be creating a precedent which would make them liable for military service with the Egyptian army.

The delegation withdrew, and Kitchener was not troubled any more with requests for leave to cross the border.

Another "Hopeless Case"

He Astonished the Doctors—Recovers Without Operation—Used Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy.

Mr. James Lettice, of Canajoharie, N.Y., writes:
"Some years ago I was attacked with fearful pains in my back and side. I could not control my kidneys at all, and what came from them was mucous. I was in a terrible state and suffered intensely. A prominent physician of Albany, N.Y., decided that an operation was all that would save me. I decided that I would not have it, and commenced to take Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy. I felt better almost immediately. When I had taken about two bottles, the flow from the bladder was much clearer, the pain stopped, I was saved from the surgeon's knife and am now well."

The above letter was written in 1900. To prove that the benefit he obtained from Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy was permanent, read what he says in a recent letter (in 1912):

"I am enjoying the best of health. Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy cured me permanently. I have answered many letters asking about it. I shall keep on praising it."

Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy has had nearly 40 years of great success in Kidney, Liver and Blood disorders. Not a "patent" medicine, but a physician's prescription, prepared for universal use. Write to-day to Dr. David Kennedy Co., Rondout, N.Y., for a free trial bottle and booklet of valuable medical advice. Large bottles sold by 60,000 druggists.

Are You Happy?

If you are it is safe to say that you enjoy good health, as it is impossible to be happy unless you are well. Noted physicians will tell you that bad stomachs and torpid livers are the cause of 95 per cent of all diseases.

For the past 42 years SEVEN BARKS has proved to be the unequalled remedy for all STOMACH, LIVER and KIDNEY troubles, and the greatest tonic and blood purifier known. It makes your digestion what it should be and keeps your entire system in good condition. Price of SEVEN BARKS is but 50 cents a bottle at all druggists. Money refunded if not satisfied. MOSES CALLED TO SERVICE.

Exodus 3:1-14.—July 20.
"Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God."—Matthew 5:8.

MOSES was forty years old when he fled from Pharaoh, discouraged. He was eighty years old when God called him to be leader of Israel. The first forty years were an ordinary schooling; the last forty, a special schooling in meekness. He was now ready for service at exactly the time when God wished to use him. So thoroughly discouraged had he become that he who was so ready to lead the hosts of Israel without a special Divine commission that even when called of God he apologized, pleading his unfitness, etc. He did not realize that he had only then become fit.

Moses was tending Jethro's flocks, and perhaps considering how wise it was that forty years before he had been unsuccessful in arousing his brethren to flee from Egypt. He could now see, in the light of maturer years, what a herculean task he would have had as their leader. He could better understand the difficulties that would have attended his people in the wilderness journey and also in attempting to take possession of the land of Canaan. Quite possibly he philosophized that people unfitted to be delivered were wise in remaining in bondage.

The Burning Bush Consumed Not. Thus meditating, while his flocks pastured on the mountainside, Moses caught sight of something most unusual. A bush was afire, yet it was not consumed. Moses approached the bush to investigate. From it came a voice, declaring the phenomenon to be a manifestation of God's presence and power. Moses obeyed the command to take off his sandals, for it was holy ground, by reason of the presence of the Angel of the Lord. Moses then covered his face in reverence, while he listened to the Divine message.

The statement, "I am the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob," brought to this instructed man of God a clear understanding of what was signified by his experience. By it God reminded him of the Covenant which He had made with Abraham, and renewed with Isaac, and confirmed to Jacob for an everlasting covenant. Thus Moses learned that God's time had come for the deliverance of Israel and for their attainment of the Land of Promise—Canaan.

If Moses had ever wondered whether God really cared for the Israelites and why He had permitted them to be oppressed by the Egyptians, he now had God's own assurance that He did care, and that He had a purpose in withholding so long. The Lord's explanation closed with an invitation to Moses to be His servant and messenger to Pharaoh, calling upon him to liberate the captive Israelites.

"Certainly I Will Be With Thee."

Then Moses, who forty years before was full of confidence and courage, and ready to lead the Israelites, but who now was lacking in self-confidence, replied to the Lord, "Who am I, that I should go unto Pharaoh, and that I should bring forth the children of Israel out of Egypt?" This meant, I am a failure; with all the educational advantages that I had, I am fit for nothing better than to be a sheep-tender.

God's reply was: "Surely I will be with thee." I shall not expect you to do it yourself. I realize that it is a mighty work. By way of emphasis, the Lord declared that not only should Moses lead the people forth, but they should worship God in that very mountain.

Moses, remembering his previous failure, was cautious. He inquired what response he should make if the Israelites should inquire which God had sent him. The Divine response was that God's name is, "I AM THAT I AM"—the self-existent One. But Moses was so distrustful of himself that he urged that the Egyptians would not let the people go, and that the Israelites themselves would not believe that God had really appeared to Moses.

Answering these objections, the Lord gave Moses certain signs, convincing him that he was talking to the Omnipotent, and assured him that these signs would convince the Israelites, and also the Egyptians.

So meek was Moses that although he fully believed the Lord and trusted His power, he could not feel competent to do this great work. Humility, lack of self-confidence, meekness, had become so pronounced in him that he prayed that, even if he should be used, some one else might be the spokesman. God heard his request and granted that he should have his brother Aaron for a companion and mouth-piece before Pharaoh.

Humility is a quality most essential to all Christians who would be of use to the Lord. Let us say with the poet, "I'll go where You want me to go, dear Lord."

Over mountain, or plain, or sea; I'll say what You want me to say, dear Lord.

I'll be what You want me to be."

Over mountain, or plain, or sea; I'll say what You want me to say, dear Lord.

I'll be what You want me to be."

Over mountain, or plain, or sea; I'll say what You want me to say, dear Lord.

I'll be what You want me to be."

The million dollar "Hump" at Mechanicsville is the latest development in freight yard construction.

A freight train is backed up the slight incline to the "Hump." There the train is broken up.

The cars are then carried by gravity each to its classified track.

The older method required backing the entire train to place one car.

This is only one of many ways devised to give you the best freight service on the continent.

Two men, one peddling razors and the other a prospective customer, got into an argument in the square Tuesday afternoon. The wordy scrap developed to the point when one called the other something which he thought he wasn't and he grabbed the iron bar from the hands of the electric car switch tender and started to prove it. The two men, followed by the irate switch tender, raced through the center and down Thompson street, followed by the largest number of people seen in the square since the 4th. FIREWORKS FACTORY EXPLODED.

Ernesto Borrelli's Plant at Highlands Blown to Pieces.

With a roar that shook the town and aroused residents for miles around the fireworks plant of Ernesto Borrelli's, well known as the pyrotechnic expert who has furnished the fireworks for the Winchester celebrations for a number of years, was blown to pieces shortly after four o'clock Saturday afternoon.

While hundreds of excited people rushed from their homes to learn the cause of the earthquake the Winchester fire alarm began to sound which still further alarmed the residents, and soon the square and centre were filled with an excited throng. The scene of the accident was indicated by a huge cloud of smoke of dense black topped by yellow and white, which rose high in the sky at the north end of the town, and soon the roads to the place were black with people, teams and autos.

The fire department found little matter to work on upon its arrival. Of the small frame building which had stood inside a high stockade of planks, hardly a vestige remained, although the hole in the earth and a few scattered pieces of wood gave evidence of its former location. What burning embers there were scattered around were easily and quickly extinguished.

The first thought of the firemen was the rescue or aid to any unfortunates who might have been at the building at the time of the explosion, but information regarding this was hard to obtain, so many conflicting stories being told. Those who first reached the scene found three men, all badly burned and stunned, and these were rushed to the Winchester hospital as soon as conveyances could be procured. These men were—Frederico Gennani, 31, single, 6 Holland street, severely burned about the chest, back, face and arms. Luigi Francis, 38, single, 6 Holland street, burned about the head and arms and left leg injured. Giuseppe Musta, 29, married, living in East Boston, wound in left side and elbow and slightly burned.

None of these men could give any coherent account of the accident, and stories varied as to how many men were at the building, some declaring there were four and others three. Ernesto Borrelli could not be found, and whether he was there or not was in doubt. Residents and men who were working in the neighborhood saw the men running from the building before the explosion, and some saw three and others four.

A search was at once started to find the fourth man, who appeared to find Borrelli, as his wife had arrived at the scene in a hysterical condition declaring that he was there. Searchers found Borrelli's watch and coat under a part of the wreckage and another party found his glasses, and a systematic search was started, it being the general impression that he had been blown to atoms. Not until two hours after was he found, lying in a clump of bushes utterly exhausted and stunned. He was not injured beyond a few slight burns, and was taken to his home after clothes had been procured, for his were stripped from his body.

Gennani, the most severely injured, was hurried to the Winchester hospital in the depot carriage of Eugene Sullivan. Passing automobiles were halted, and Musta and Francis were conveyed to the hospital, where Drs. Richard Sheehy, Clarence E. Ordway and M. D. Sheehan of Stoneham were in readiness to receive the injured men. They were assisted by Drs. Ralph Putnam, Daniel C. Dennett and Herbert E. Maynard.

After a cursory examination of the men the physicians announced that Gennani was severely injured, and his name was placed upon the dangerous list. Musta, who has a wife in Italy, suffered from shock as well as from wounds in his side and elbow, but his condition was not regarded as serious.

Luigi Francis, although painfully burned about the head and arms, in addition to being injured about the left leg, quickly responded to the hospital treatment, and was pronounced out of danger shortly after his arrival. Rev. Fr. John W. H. Corbett of St. Mary's Catholic Church attended the men in the hospital.

The plant was known as the New England Fireworks Company, it being located in a hollow off Cross street at the rear of the Schneider place and close to Nelson's ledge. A quantity of fireworks had been made and much more was in the process of completion, Mr. Borrelli having a contract for a celebration at Woburn to be held next month, besides two displays for Italian celebrations here and in that city. The plant consisted of one building surrounded by a high stockade of planks.

The explosion consisted of one prolonged roar, made up of a series of explosions. This was followed by an explosion a minute later, and just as the fire whistle began to blow, by a third. Residents and men working on Cross street were the first to reach the scene. They found the three men and as soon as the first of the automobiles and teams began to arrive they were taken to the hospital. It is said that one automobilist was asked to take Gennani to the hospital and that he refused.

Houses all over town were rocked and dishes thrown about. Much glass was broken in houses on Misery mountain, the force of the blast apparently being greatest in that direction, although one window was blown out as far away as the centre, a large pane of glass at the Calumet Club being demolished.

According to reports as the result of the investigation by the police and state inspector Walter M. Wedge, the fireworks expert, who was sent here Sunday to investigate the affair, the men were boring out a tube used for a motor or to hold some part of a display. It is said that their methods were crude, and that this operation would ordinarily be done with some arrangement for protection. The action of metal upon metal either caused a spark or enough friction to ignite some loose powder. Some effort was made to extinguish the fire by the men, and it was in doing this that they were burned. They being unable to put the fire out, Borrelli called for them to run. They had gone some distance when the explosion occurred. Had they been nearer they would have been blown to pieces. Borrelli escaped in part by throwing himself on the ground just before the explosion, but he was stunned, as were the other three.

The base ball game on Manchester field was stopped for a time and the big crowd of spectators tramped up Main street to the scene. The inquiries at the telephone office, and the sudden use of the phone by hundreds of people almost swamped the office, and hurry calls were sent out for every operator available to handle the calls. Latest reports from the hospital are that all three men will recover.

It is reported that Borrelli will at once commence the erection of another building and continue the manufacture of fireworks. His loss is estimated at $2000.

NEW BUSINESS BLOCK TO BE ERECTED.

Work was commenced this week on tearing down the buildings at the corner of Vine and Church streets preparatory to the erection of a fine brick and granite business block.

The new block will be built by Mr. Frederick E. Hovey and Charles A. Lane. It will occupy the land between Morrill's grocery store and the town water department's shop. Accommodations will be provided for five large stores and in the second story there will be six roomy offices.

The land is occupied at present with a dwelling house, a two store building with a loft and a stable in the rear.

The present buildings have been purchased by Mr. Patrick E. Fitzgerald, who will tear them down and erect them elsewhere in town. It is understood that the two store building is to be placed on Washington street adjoining Sellar's market.

Work on the new block will commence on or about the first of August it is thought.

RALPH K. SWETT.

Mr. Ralph K. Swett, a resident of Hartford, Conn., met with a serious accident on Wednesday in that city, from the results of which he passed away late in the day.

He is survived by his wife, his father, Mr. Charles E. Swett; his sister, Miss Edith J. Swett and a brother, Mr. Arthur H. Swett, all of this town.

The funeral services will be at his late home, 53 Concord street, Hartford, this Friday afternoon at five o'clock.

Mr. Swett was born in Westford, Mass., April 26, 1860. He spent his early life in Winchester until he became connected in business in Hartford, where he married Miss Marguerite Gemmill, daughter of Major John Gemmill, a prominent merchant of that city.

BOUGHT THREE FAMILY HOUSE.

The Middlesex Investment Association, composed of about thirty business men and clerks of this town, has made its first investment, buying a three family house in Medford last month. The house is of modern construction and has recently been built, it being located in the neighborhood of the Salem street car barns.

CARD OF THANKS.

The relatives of the late Mrs. Mary E. Gallagher of 15 Canal street, Winchester, desire to express their appreciation to the many sympathetic friends who sent floral pieces and otherwise aided them in passing through this great ordeal.

It was a source of deep satisfaction to note the large number of loyal friends who were anxious to pay their last respects.

INTERNATIONAL CANOE RACE.

Committee was Absolutely Fair in Making Choice.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

I beg that you will correct the statement made in your issue of last week that the Committee in charge of the International races in New York did not treat Mr. Jas. A. Newman fairly and that they preferred to have the cup defended by a New Yorker. The men composing the committee are so well known for absolute fairness that such a charge is absurd. In two out of three trial races Mr. Newman won. The other race was won by Mr. Friede with Mr. Newman second. The committee unanimously chose Mr. Newman as the defender and Mr. Friede as the substitute. When the sails were officially measured, Mr. Newman's were found to exceed the limit by 4 1/2 feet. This was through no fault of Mr. Newman's as his sails had been re-cut by the best sailmakers in Boston before going to New York. As the trial races had been sailed under A. C. A. rules, the committee felt that they had no right to overlook this matter and therefore called two additional trials after Mr. Newman's sails had been again reduced to come within the rules. Unfortunately the day set for these trials was provided with a very light soft wind better suited to Mr. Friede's boat than Mr. Newman's and Mr. Friede won both races with a small margin, and the committee had no other course in justice but to declare Mr. Friede the Defender. The two members of the committee in charge of these last trials and who made the final decision were the Hon. Robt. I. Wilkin, judge of the Juvenile Court of N. Y., and Mr. Paul Butler of Lowell, the last Defender of the cup, and an honorary member of the Winchester Boat Club.

As there was every reason why they should wish Mr. Newman, whose sailing they had known for ten years - and who had won the A. C. A. Championship, to defend the cup, and as Mr. Friede was a new man in the field, and not personally known to them, the statement that they preferred Mr. Friede because he was a New Yorker is exasperating to any one who knows their fairness and justice.

Yours very truly,
Hermann Dudley Murphy.
The above is a true statement of the facts as I understand them.
Jas. A. Newman.

BASE BALL.

Winchester will meet the strong Braman-Dow Company base ball team on Saturday afternoon at 3.30 o'clock on Manchester field. Braman-Dow has a good, fast team, and won from Winchester on Memorial Day by the score of 3 to 2. The Winchester team has been strengthened by the addition of Ray Tift, the old Brown University pitcher, who will occupy the box again this week. He pitched a very creditable game for the local team last Saturday. Hunnewell, of the Williams College squad, and Adamson of Mechanics Art High School are candidates for the position at second. Mitchell, a former Somerville high third base man, who goes to Worcester Academy this fall, will take third base. The management is making every endeavor to give the town a good ball this year as during the past two, and a good snappy game is promised.

FALL OFF CAR KILLS WOMAN.

Miss Ellen Leonard, of Medford, died at the Woburn hospital Wednesday of injuries sustained the night before when she fell from a Woburn street railway car in Winchester in an attempt to recover her pocketbook, which slipped out of her hand.

The woman occupied an end seat of the open car, and in trying to recover the purse she fell head first to the street. Her skull was fractured. Miss Leonard was 21 years old.

She was taken first to the Winchester hospital but it was so crowded with patients that she had to be taken to Woburn.

BURDETT COLLEGE ADDS TWO NEW DEPARTMENTS.

The College's latest catalogue announces that a new department in Applied Business and Management will be opened at the beginning of the fall term September 2d. This department should meet with splendid success because it combines a training in the elementary commercial subject with the advanced topics in Finance, Commerce, and Industry. The progressive spirit of Burdett College is well illustrated by its policy of meeting the demand of the times. Burdett College finds situations for all of its graduates.

CARD OF THANKS.

We desire to thank all our friends and neighbors, especially including Mr. and Mrs. Russell and Mrs. Brogan and family, for their kindness and sympathy in our recent bereavement.
Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Rossley.

SELECTMEN'S MEETING.

The Board met at 7.30 p. m., all present.

The committee on Elections reported that no action was necessary at this time in the matter of change in date of appointment of Gypsy Moth Superintendent and Forest Wardens, and suggested that it be put on the calendar for December 29. The report was accepted.

William Henry Vayo, 15 Arthur street, who was nominated July 14, to be a measurer of leather under the provisions of Chapter 502, Acts of 1913, was elected such measurer.

The Chief of Police returned with his approval the following applications for licenses as hawkers of fruits and vegetables and licenses were granted.

Herbert A. Dyson, 644 Main St., Winchester.

Thomas E. Cullen, 5 Cullen St., Woburn.

Granville D. Richardson, 597 Washington St., Winchester.

James Gargas, 5 Mt. Vernon St., Winchester.

William J. Geary, 182 Winthrop St., Medford.

William F. Brown, 241 Cambridge St., Woburn.

William H. Duffy, 12 Buckman St., Woburn.

George A. Pappoulet, 582 Main St., Winchester.

An application for a license as hawker and pedler of fruit and vegetables was received from Frank E. Connelley of 3 Belmont St., Woburn, and referred to the Chief of Police.

Attention of the Board was called to the fact that at Sullivan Square there is no sign to indicate where the cars leave for Winchester. The matter was referred to Mr. Daly.

Mr. Ernesto Borrelli and Vincent Brogna of the New England Fireworks Company appeared before the Board and made explanation of the circumstances leading to the destruction of their building by explosion on the afternoon of July 19, and applied for a renewal of their license.

Their rights under which had ceased by reason of such accident and it was voted, that on the application of the New England Fireworks Company for permission to use certain buildings or structures to be erected on the Nelson land off Cross street for freezing, storage, manufacture and sale of gunpowder, dynamite and other explosives and the manufacture of fire-crackers or fireworks therein it is hereby ordered that a public hearing be held at the Selectmen's Room in the Town Hall building on Monday August 11, at 8 p. m., the expense thereof to be charged to the petitioners and that public notice of the same be given by publishing in the Winchester STAR of July 25 and August 1.

In regard to Forest street, Mr. Jewett reported that the Bay State Street Railway Company through Mr. Myers had authorized him to have the Highway Department fix up the street and the Railroad would pay all the expense except for a small portion near the top of the street where the slope is such that when the Road raised it's tracks they were made higher than the center of the roadway, and consequently there will be some work on the middle of the street the expense of which would naturally fall on the Town.

A statement was received from the Superintendent of streets showing the cost of building Pond street and it was voted that a copy of the statement be sent to the Middlesex County Commissioners with request for a check for 25 per cent. of the total.

A signed contract was received from Daniel McDonald for the tar concrete construction for the present season. The Board arranged to meet on Thursday afternoon to view the proposed locations for tar concrete sidewalks.

Mr. Jewett reported that he had notified Mr. McDonald to begin work August 11.

The Committee on ways and Bridges reported on the petition of the Board of Cemetery Commissioners presented May 5th asking that Willow street from Palmer street to the cemetery line be re-built and macadamized and that the sidewalk on the east side thereof be re-built, that they had inspected the premises and given instructions that the sidewalk be repaired as soon as possible; that the Superintendent of Streets estimated the cost of re-surfacing the street, and the Committee recommended that the street be re-surfaced after the surface drain had been laid in Palmer street for the reason that that drain extended a short distance up Willow street. The report was accepted and the Superintendent of Streets instructed to do the work after the surface drain in Palmer street had been laid.

ROBBED OF $26.

Express Driver Held Up at North Winchester.

Willis Latham, colored, driver for Kelley & Hawes Co., was held up by two men on Saturday night and robbed of $26. The men are said to be Italians. As Latham stopped his team at the corner of Maple road and Highland avenue to fix a part of his harness the men jumped on him from some bushes nearby. One grabbed him by the throat, and the other rifled his pockets. The money was what he had collected from C. O. D. packages.

Latham had seen the men during the afternoon, and several times they accosted him with requests for money to buy food. He refused them and was suspicious enough of their actions to report the matter at his return to the stable at six o'clock.

Between seven and eight o'clock he saw them at the head of Myrtle street. He returned to the stable and accompanied by his brother, about 12 years of age, went to the Highlands. When the men grabbed him his brother ran through the woods to the residence of Mrs. Elizabeth Hinds, where word was telephoned to the police.

Officers were at once dispatched to the scene, but no trace of the highwaymen could be found.

"THE BIRTH RIGHT"

Out-of-Door Fete for the Benefit of Charity.

A very pretty out-of-door fete for the benefit of the Animal Rescue League and the Floating Hospital was given on the handsome estate of Mr. and Mrs. Herman D. Murphy on Highland avenue Wednesday afternoon. The palisaded grounds made a beautiful stage setting for the play which had been arranged by a group of girls.

The program included a playlet, "The Birthright," written by Miss Carlene Murphy, 13 years of age, when she was visiting in the Azores last winter. The characters were King Holcott, Miss Carlene Murphy; King Juan, Miss Sally Thompson; King's Guard, Miss Helen McCartney; Mary O'Sullivan, Ruth and Edith Bowe; Lord Berkeley, Frances Maone; Lady Unita, Gertrude Felber; Hangman, Harry Blaisdell. Following the playlet, there were fancy dances by the girls, including the Shepherd dance and the Wind and Fairy dances.

A feature of the event was the drawing for a suffragette kitten, donated for the purpose, the guests participating in the drawing selecting a number. The kitten was won by Miss Murphy, who took the number 1913. Following the entertainment on the lawn, lemonade was served in the archway, where there were also a variety of souvenirs and place cards done by Miss Helen McCartney, and other articles for sale. The young people realized $24 from the entertainment, and this is to be divided between the two institutions.

This is an annual event conducted by the little band of girls, and they have not only raised considerable sums of money, but have also furnished pleasing out-of-door entertainments in the summer months.

The award of prizes on the Cutter Village table at the recent Summer festival of St. Mary's parish has been made as follows: John Carney, picture; Miss Annie Glendon, table; Miss Beatrice Kelley of Jamaica Plain, $5.00 gold piece; William Hanev of Woburn, box of cigars; George Campbell of Woburn, bread mixer; William Kelley of Arlington, $2.50 gold piece.

Main street between Thompson street and the Parkway on which a report from the Committee on Street Lights was received and accepted June 9 to the effect that such light was not necessary so long as Mr. Fogg's garage was lighted, attention was directed to the fact that Mr. Fogg had taken out his light. The matter was referred to the Committee for report at the next meeting.

In the matter of complaint presented June 30, concerning the unfinished condition of the sidewalk on Park Avenue, the Committee on Ways and Bridges reported that the loam on the southerly side of Park Avenue was to be utilized for loam space where granolithic sidewalk is being constructed and that it would hardly be advisable for the Town to go to the expense of moving the loam to the yard and then re-carting it to approximately the same location and recommended that the loam be left where it is until needed for sidewalk construction purposes. The report of the Committee was accepted.

TROUBLE BREWING OVER EXTRA CLERK.

It is rumored that trouble has arisen between the Board of Selectmen and the Assessors over the payment for clerical work now being done by the latter. For some years the town has had a general clerk, Miss Stinson, who during the past two years has been overloaded with work. She is extremely competent and has at her fingers end all the details of the general work done by the town. In order to relieve her of some of the routine work the Selectmen asked at the last March meeting that Miss Stinson be given an assistant who could be broken into the town business, and thereby relieve her of much routine work, and this was granted. After careful examination by the Selectmen Miss Le Duc was appointed at a salary of $500 a year, and so far as ascertained she has made good.

The disagreement between the two boards arose when one of the Assessors appeared before the Selectmen a short time ago and asked that the latter pay for a clerk to copy names of taxpayers and property owners into the valuation book. The board informed him that such a step was not necessary, as Miss Le Duc who was employed for just such purposes and who had an abundance of time could do the work, therefore under these circumstances the board did not believe that the town should be put to the expense of employing another clerk to do this work which could easily be done by Miss Le Duc. The Assessor replied that they wanted a clerk who would continue at the book undisturbed until completed. The Selectmen replied that they would arrange to have Miss Le Duc give her entire time and not be interfered with until the work was done.

Nevertheless the Assessors engaged a girl from Boston to do the copying and agreed to pay her about $14 a week. The total bill will amount close to $100. And now the trouble is to arise over whether the town should be called upon to pay for this extra clerk, as the Selectmen say the Assessors have a clerk of their own, and if he cannot find time to do the work, that they could call upon the assistant general clerk who is competent and has ample time on her hands to do the copying.

It is intimated that the Selectmen will let the question of payment of this extra clerk go before the citizens for settlement.

The warrant committee in their deliberations last winter, were not unanimous in recommending an assistant general clerk, as it was believed that the town was already pretty generously supplied with clerks to attend to all the town's business.

YOUR AFFAIRS AND MINE.

A valued reader of the STAR writes The Spectator at length, taking for his theme the valuation of childhood and quotes quite generously from a very excellent editorial article published in The Congregationalist. Every good Winchesterite is vitally interested in the child. As the article in The Congregationalist says, "the child is the object of reverence and the hope of the world." The Spectator believes in the coming fall steps should be taken for a child welfare exhibit in Winchester. Of course we do not have the child problems here that exist in many other towns of our size but there is plenty of opportunity for good men and women to accomplish much good. To quote from the editorial article in question:

"Helpless, undeveloped, imperfect though he is, the child has certain inalienable rights.

"The child has physical rights. He can justly demand that he be properly born into the world and not condemned from infancy to suffer all his life from a baneful inheritance. He has his right to fresh air and plenty of it, to a decent home, to ample and wholesome food, to surroundings that make for health and not for disease. The child welfare exhibits in various cities during recent years not only show how concerned philanthropists and reformers are about this side of a child's life, but they vividly portray what has been done and can be done in this direction.

"The child has a right to know both the joys of work and of play. Long days of toil in factories ought to become a thing of the past throughout Christendom, but every boy and girl ought to learn by experience that a certain amount of regular suitable work is a real boon. And neither on the side of work or play should a child be so hedged about that his own individuality is cramped. We heard the other day of a youngster who was asked what he wanted for a birthday present. He is usually pretty faithfully attended by nurses and governesses. Hence the touch of pathos in his reply, 'If you please, I should like to be by myself for half an hour.'

"The child has his intellectual rights. He can justly ask to be trained to study, to acquire, to think, to reason. Our splendid system of public and private education our vast investment in equipment and apparatus, the noble army of teachers devoting themselves to the rising generation are good guarantees that this inherent need of childhood is being measurably supplied.

"The child has spiritual rights. We wrong him when after providing for his physical, mental and social welfare, we withhold from him the best knowledge we have of God, of his ways with men, of his purposes in Christ for the race, of what he expects in obedience and service, both from men and from little children. Roman Catholic churches and homes are wiser and more faithful on this point than many Protestant homes and churches. We need not imitate their precise method, but we may well remember that 'the Lord God says to us, as well as to them, 'Thou shalt teach them unto thy children.'"

The Spectator a short while ago was in a court room less than a dozen miles from Winchester when a man aged 80 years and of venerable appearance was sentenced for the embezzlement of trust funds. He had lived a long and, until this crime was committed, an honorable life. His advanced age and his good record were pleaded in his behalf as reasons why he should be released under a suspended sentence. This the judge declined to do, remarking that these things did not extenuate the breach of trust of which he had been guilty. The man was sentenced to a year. It is a previous record for honesty could be used to extenuate a breach of trust, there could be no convictions for this offense, because no one who has not a reputation for honesty is usually employed as the custodian of trust money. While the departure of an old man from the paths of rectitude and honesty naturally excites genuine pity, there is really less excuse for such a man to commit crime than there is for a younger and more impulsive one. Unless, The Spectator allows the mental faculties of the old man have been impaired by age.

A Winchester gentleman wants to know what refuge is left for the ugly men when they begin to send portraits by wire. Strange as it may seem, there are men even here in Winchester who are not proud of their facial beauty. There are some men who know they are homely, and try to make up for their defects in face and form by being kind-hearted and good to their wives and children. By thus remaining in an amiable obscurity they have managed to go through life without attracting the undue attention of the inquisitive. When the art of photography was invented it was a sad day for the homely man. The camera snapped him in all his ugliness. He couldn't smile it away or joke it away, for there were his lineaments exposed to the gaze of an unfeeling world without mitigation or excuse. The invention of a device by which a man's features may be telegraphed is the final blow. The ugly man could still retain the regard of those at a distance, no matter how much he had to suffer in his home town. But when they can pick up the lines of his face and form and telegraph them to the four corners of the earth, where can he find peace?

FLAHERTY TO CATCH IN NEW BRUNSWICK LEAGUE.

"Charlie" Flaherty left town on Monday afternoon for St. Johns, New Brunswick. He has accepted a flattering offer to catch for that team in the New Brunswick League.

Flaherty first attracted notice as a catcher while playing on the Winchester High School team. He has caught for the Winchester town team and for the Allen School team at West Newton. He will undoubtedly give a good account of himself in the Provinces.

LIGHTHOUSE IN LITTLE MYSTIC LAKE.

LIGHTHOUSE ON MYSTIC.

Artistic Tower Attracts Much Attention.

In common with the attractive growth of the town the shores of the upper Mystic Lake have been beautified and laid out until they are now causing attractive comment and admiration of all who pass over the parkway and Everett avenue.

Built and tended by children of the neighborhood who gathered stones from the shore and nearby fields and who bought cement for the mortar, a lighthouse has been erected on the point of land that juts out from the northern shore of Little Mystic.

L. Stanley Redding, in the rear of whose estate at Wedgemere is the point, superintended the construction and made the housing for the ship's light, which serves as a beacon for canoeists on the lake at this shallow spot.

The children worked nearly a month on the lighthouse in the early morning and on Saturday afternoons. One youngster was out early and late wheeling stones in his little wheelbarrow to the point. The larger boys worked on the masonry under the direction of Mr. Redding and the girls did their share too.

Each week one of the boys or girls in the vicinity has the commission to see that the lamp is lighted at the right hour. As much punctuality and reliability is observed as in conducting a government lighthouse. Although there is a foot bridge to the lighthouse, at sunset the small keeper puts out into the cove by the point in a boat with his lamp into which he has put just enough oil to last the proper length of time.

The lighthouse is of field stones, and is about twelve feet in height and six feet in diameter at the base. The housing for the lamp is octagonal with a little railing of iron pipe.

Passersby on the state boulevard and residents of Winchester have shown much interest in the structure. On account of the solidity of construction and the carefulness with which each stone was placed, the lighthouse will stand indefinitely.

There are about a dozen children in the neighborhood who helped with the construction and consider themselves stockholders in the lighthouse company and responsible for its care. When conditions warrant the youthful keeper of the light may be seen performing his duty with his rubber coat and "so' wester" on, which adds a touch of the sea to the scene. MRS. MARY E. GALLAGHER.

Mary Ellen Gallagher, widow of the late Francis E. Gallagher, died at her home on Canal street, Sunday of Bright's disease. She was 47 years of age, and leaves three sons, Charles, Frank and William, all of this town.

Mrs. Gallagher was born in Kingston, Ontario. She had been a resident of this town for a number of years, her husband dying here in 1896. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Marvin.

Solemn high mass was held at St. Mary's Church on Tuesday morning at nine o'clock.

The burial was at Calvary cemetery, Montvale.

HEATING SYSTEM.

Now is the proper time to consider a warm house next winter with no gas to kill the flowers. We are the only firm in Winchester that can furnish you practical heating men of all kinds. Hot air furnaces, steam and hot water. Fifty-two (52) weeks in a year at a moment's notice.

We advise attention now to that important feature in your home. Anybody can make a bluff at cleaning your furnace but it takes a practical furnace man to produce results. We have the practical men and would rather serve you now than in the busy season, it being much easier now to get the repairs.

OLD MILL BEING TORN DOWN.

The old Whitney mill, the last of the group of buildings at the corner of Walnut and Main streets, is being torn down. Work was commenced to raze the building Monday. This is the last building of the group of old time structures at this corner to be taken away, and within a short time the corner will be vacant and ready for the park board to start the work of grading the lot.

BASE BALL.

The game last Saturday afternoon between the Winchester club and Lincoln team of Somerville, got onto the nerves of the fans badly, because of the handling and loose playing by the home team. During the first part of the game no one knew just what was to happen, flies were muffed and the grounders passed through the hands of the players, as if the ball had been greased. This with poor base throwing promised to bring on heart trouble to the benches. Fortunately the errors were not confined altogether to the home players, as the visitors had their troubles also. After the middle of the game the men on both sides settled down to work and for some time the score remained at three and three. But in the seventh inning Winchester broke away and gained two runs, making the score five to three. The Lincoln's could not overcome this lead failing to score again. There were brilliant plays marking the game, one being a triple play by Winchester. But taking it all in all the game was sporty.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

The Progressives will carry on an active campaign in Winchester this autumn and fall, and it is to be hoped that they will give attention to county affairs.

It is finally settled that Gov. Foss will again be a candidate for his present office. This time he will run as a Republican, and a singular thing is that he says he cannot prevent being a candidate, the demand that he shall run being so great,—forced to run, as it were.

Gov. Foss believes that with a reciprocity plank in the platform that the Republican party could win out in the election this fall. The Governor does not say so outright, but nevertheless he would like to be the standard bearer of this party. While an outcast of the Democratic party, yet he has a host of voters who believe in him and will vote for him.

Wakefield has bought a portable school house, paying for the same $1,500. Our neighbor evidently finds money extremely easy. Winchester, and some other towns, would not for a minute consider a waste of good money for such a purpose, but would add more to it and erect a substantial building that would last for many years. When the cold of winter arrives, what then?

The reason why the laws were changed turning fees paid for speed and other violations of the automobile laws into the channels of the state highway funds, instead of to towns and cities, was that rural police were persecuting owners of cars and hauling them into court on any kind of charge, is the answer to those persons who are asking to have the fees go to those cities and towns where the laws are violated.

Complaint has been made in surrounding towns that persons riding in automobiles as they go through intentionally drop cats and kittens with the purpose of losing them at a safe distance from their former homes. This is inhuman. For the information of any, who wish a home for their animals, there is an Animal Rescue Home at 51 Marble Street, Stoneham, and any card sent to Mr. F. B. Weston, or telephone Stoneham 167-M, would receive attention and result in proper care given these homeless creatures.

Secretary of State Bryan does not set a good example to the people of this Country when he makes the assertion that he cannot live on $12,000 a year, but that it requires about $20,000. And to make up the difference he is on a six weeks' lecture tour. He is not a poor man by any means, and it seems as if he might for the honor of holding the office have made up the difference. But the dollar appears to be the same with about all of humanity.

President McDonald of the Boston & Maine Railroad is having many kind words said about him. It is to be hoped that this feeling will continue, and that he may be allowed to give his attention to the railroad.

FREE FISHING DAY.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

I clip the following from the Boston Post. If 20,000 people can fish in a 40 acre artificial reservoir without injury to a water supply, how many could fish in reservoirs over 200 acres in extent same as Winchester possesses? Why not draw lots and allow 50 or 100 Winchester citizens so chosen to fish once a week or so during the summer in the Winchester reservoirs carefully guarded as they are by the Metropolitan police? It makes my mouth water for a fishing rod to see the great black bass break in the both reservoirs and Winchester citizens not allowed to fish from them.

ISSAC WALTON.

Bloomington, Ill., recently held its "free fishing" day, an event unique among municipal celebrations in the United States.

Once a year on a day chosen by the Park Commission, any one is permitted to fish in the waters of Miller Park Lake. The chosen day is always made a public holiday, and the shores of the 40-acre lake are lined with fishermen, trying their luck.

Bloomington is one of the few inland cities of Illinois without a river, and until the lake was made in Miller Park a few years ago those who desired to fish were forced to go to the Mackinaw or Illinois Rivers.

Soon after the lake was made and filled with water, fish of various species were put in it. As these assumed size there came a demand for permission to catch them. At first the park commissioners refused to consider the matter, but later they agreed to allow free fishing once a year.

Usually some day in July is chosen, and with each succeeding year the day becomes of greater interest. The country people come in by the hundreds, bringing lunch baskets in their automobiles or carriages, to join the throng of Bloomington people. The day is made one picnic long by men, women and children.

Many fishermen try their luck in boats, but the majority prefer to stand on the bank and watch the bobbing corks. To stimulate interest, local merchants offer prizes for the largest fish caught.

The restrictions governing free fishing day are few and simple. At 7 a. m. sharp the park custodian blows a whistle, which is heard all over the lake. Simultaneously, hundreds of books drop into the water, and fishing is on. At 8 p. m. the whistle blows again, and the fishermen are compelled to cease operations. There is no limit to the number of fish anyone may catch.

PARCEL POST.

The parcel post made a most salutary move this month when it reduced the cost of insuring a package worth up to $25 from ten to five cents. The refusal of the parcel post to guarantee the sender against loss as an express company does is one reason why so many people prefer to remain as patrons of the express. The inauguration of the plan of sending parcels C. O. D. which was put in operation this month has also helped business men greatly. The next helpful change that will be instituted the middle of August is the increasing of the weight of the maximum package that can be sent from twelve to twenty pounds together with a reduction on rates. Both of these changes will apply only in the first and second zone, the latter being within a radius of 150 miles. Another welcome change was the permitting of the same stamps to be used on parcels post as upon any other mail matter as the government found that the hardship of having other kinds of stamps was unequalled. The parcel post has made wonderful strides and the post office department financial statement will be awaited with interest.

SELECTMEN'S MEETING.

dition of the roadway and sidewalk in Vine street, the Committee on Ways and Bridges reported that they had viewed the street and recognized that its condition was unsatisfactory. The estimated cost of properly resurfacing the street is $400.

At 8 o'clock as advertised, a hearing was declared upon the petition of the Edison Electric Illuminating Company of Boston to construct and maintain underground conduits and manholes on Church street at Lewis street. Committee on Ways and Bridges reported that an amended plan had been submitted to Mr. Howard and approved by him and usual location was passed.

In response to the request of this Board July 7th that the School Board consider establishing a catch basin at the Wadleigh School to connect with the Town drain on Mt. Vernon street in the advance of the construction of granolithic sidewalk on that street, a letter was received and filed from Schuyler F. Herron, Secretary of the School Committee, stating that at a meeting held July 17, they had decided that they would prefer to take care of the surface drainage in some other way and would agree to see that provision was made to avoid any further trouble when the granolithic sidewalk was constructed.

A petition was received from the J. J. Fitzgerald Contracting Co. for permission to construct two stepping stones in front of the residence 6 Copley street, and granted subject to the usual conditions.

A petition was received from the J. J. Fitzgerald Contracting Co. for permission to lay granolithic entrance to the garage 15 Everett Avenue, and granted subject to the usual conditions.

A Petition was received from the J. J. Fitzgerald Contracting Co. for permission to lay granolithic entrance to driveway 79 Church street, and was granted subject to the usual conditions.

Mr. H. C. Miller appeared before the Board and called attention to the fact that the heavy storm about a month ago had washed out considerably at the back of his building on Mt. Vernon street, and the matter was discussed with him at some length and referred to the Committee on Ways and Bridges.

Mr. Miller also called attention to the fact that the right of way giving access to the Town Dump was being misused; that a fence he had put up had been in part removed so as to make an entrance further to the west and that the same was being used in violation of his rights. The matter was referred to the Committee on Ways and Bridges.

A letter was received in response to one from this Board concerning the one form this Board concerning the lights at the Centre stating that to put all the all-night-arcs on one circuit it would be necessary to go to a large expense and create a special circuit, and suggesting as an alternative that these lights be placed on the regular street schedule, and the clerk was instructed to reply that the Board was of the opinion that the lights at the Centre should be operated all night as at present, and that the Board would like to have an estimate of the probable cost of arranging the lights as suggested in the letter.

The Committee on Ways and Bridges reported that Mr. O. C. Sanborn had complained that the gutter on High street was in bad condition at the top of the hill and the matter had been referred to the Town Engineer for investigation and report.

Adjourned at 10:10 p. m.

Frank R. Miller,

Clerk of the Board.

MR. BRYAN AND SO CALLED DEMOCRATS.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

These few remarks by Senator James printed in the Congressional Record, so well states the facts as to Mr. Bryan, that I will ask you to print them, as a few so-called Democrats are so glad to find fault with our great Commoner at any and all times.

Whitfield Tuck.

Mr. James. Mr. President, so far as Mr. Bryan is concerned, no assault made here, no assault, in my judgment, made in the newspapers, no assault that may be fomented by political foes, can affect him. He is secure in the confidence and affection of his countrymen. No resolutions that you may pass, no partisan speeches that you may make will ever convince the American people that William J. Bryan would desert his post of duty when there was the slightest necessity for his presence.

That has not been his record in times of defeat. It will not be his record in times of triumph. Our Republican friends used to tell us that if Bryan ever got into office he would ruin the country, and now the Senator from Kansas is telling us that if he leaves office he will ruin the country. [Laughter.]

Mr. President, many distinguished men, as the Senator from Missouri said, have gone upon the Chautauqua platform: and let me say, of all the forces of uplift, of all the powers that have made for our progressive life, of all the influences that have battled to relieve the people from the clutches of greed, I most respectfully point you to the Chautauqua platform. Free from the rancor and malice of partisanship, they gather to hear when they are cool and unprejudiced. They listen to these arguments, and the forces and the power of not only many distinguished men in this country but more especially of Mr. Bryan, are responsible for the great uplift in this country and the trend toward better and higher ideals and purposes.

Mr. President, so far as criticism of Mr. Bryan is concerned, Senators upon the other side remained silent and free from criticism of the President of the United States, Mr. Taft, when he went, at Government expense, for the purpose of making political speeches, yet they freely and violently criticize Mr. Bryan when the speeches that he is making are those of a religious character, and I do not believe that even the Republican Party has much to fear from that.

And you may rest assured of just one thing, that Mr. Bryan will be in touch with his office at all times, and that at the slightest show of the necessity for his presence at the Capital he will be here to perform his duty.

Stoneham has given up using truck horses for hauling its fire apparatus and the department now has horses of its own.

Up to this time there has been an arrangement whereby two horses used in trucking business were pressed into service as fire horses to pull the ladder truck to fires. At a recent fire on William street, the owner of these horses would not let them leave their work to go to the fire. Further investigation showed that he thought he had made a contract simply to let his horses for night alarms.

TO STANDARDIZE

AUTO HORNS.

A cable dispatch from Paris says that two thirds of the street accidents there have been attributed by experts to the diversity of sounds used as automobile warnings; and that a movement is on foot to standardize the signals used for this purpose.

Charles Thaddeus Terry, General Counsel for the American Automobile Association, and one of the highest authorities in the country on automobile legislation, in commenting on the movement in the French city said that similar action by the state legislatures of this country is of the greatest importance in order to prevent the rapidly increasing number of automobile accidents.

"I am firmly convinced that by far the greater number of accidents occasioned by motor vehicles, are due directly to the inadequacy and diversity of the warning signals now used on motor vehicles. It must be admitted that pedestrians using the streets are for the most part thoughtless and indifferent of their own safety. This indifference, of course, is brought about by continued use of the streets and familiarity with rapidly moving vehicles. Such thoughtlessness is increased by the fact that when a pedestrian crosses the street, his car hears so many different sounds, one killing or mungling with the other, that no clear sound of warning is distinguishable from the general din of traffic, and he, therefore, proceeds on his way, lulled into a feeling of false security.

"If the statutes required a uniform signal for motor vehicles, which could be easily recognized, a warning would thereby be brought home to the pedestrian and as a consequence, many accidents would be prevented.

"It is not enough, however, to require merely that motor vehicle signals should be uniform. The character of such uniform device must be clearly defined. Such statutes must provide that a device be used capable of giving a signal which shall create an immediate diversion of the thoughtless mind, or the careless and indifferent mind, to the direction from which the signal proceeds. The value of any signal does not depend upon its indistinct repetition. Such a repetition tends to allay fear, rather than to create it. A statute enacted for the purpose of making uniform motor vehicle signals will not accomplish its purpose, if it permits any signal made up of a series of separate notes arranged in harmony, or to a scale, or a prolonged musical strain varying in pitch, or if it permits any soft, even well rounded sound, or a long shrill sound. If such a statute is to be enacted as it should be, in order for it to accomplish the purpose intended, a signal must be required which will give a sharp, unusual, broken or ragged sound, staccato and syncopated,—unpleasant if you will, but so unusual and so unpleasant that the instantaneous attention of the pedestrian or other user of the highway is compelled by it.

"If a proposed uniform motor vehicle law required such a signal, the enforcement and enforcement of it will do more than anything that has already been done, to prevent accidents."

COLD STORAGE EGGS.

The following act relative to the sale of eggs taken from cold storage was passed by the last Legislature:

Be it enacted, etc., as follows:

Section 1. Whenever eggs that have been in cold storage are sold at retail, or offered or exposed for sale, the basket, box or other container in which the eggs are placed shall be marked plainly and conspicuously with the words "cold storage eggs" or there shall be attached to such container a placard or sign having on it the said words. It eggs that have been in cold storage are sold at retail or offered or exposed for sale without a container, or placed upon a counter or elsewhere, a sign or placard, having the words "cold storage eggs" plainly and conspicuously marked upon it shall be displayed in, upon or immediately above the said eggs; the intent of this act being that cold storage eggs sold at retail or offered or exposed for sale shall be designated in such a manner that the purchaser will know that they are cold storage eggs. The display of the words "cold storage eggs," as required by this act, shall be done in such a manner as is approved by the state board of health.

Section 2. Violation of any provision of this act shall be punished by a fine; of not less than ten dollars nor more than five hundred dollars for each offense.

Better Times After a Change In Food

Lack of energy is usually the outward sign of faulty nutrition.

Folks who don't feel "spry" because of lack of the right kind of nourishment

"Pick Up"

On

Grape-Nuts

FOOD

Thousands who know the personal value of clear-thinking and vigorous action, make Grape-Nuts a part of their regular diet.

"There's a Reason"

SICK DOCTOR

Proper Food Put Him Right

The food experience of a physician in his own case when worn and weak from sickness and when needing nourishment the worst way is valuable:

"An attack of grip so severe it came near making an end of me left my stomach in such condition I could not retain any ordinary food. I knew, of course, that I must have food nourishment or I could never recover.

"I began to take four teaspoonfuls of Grape-Nuts and cream three times a day and for 2 weeks this was almost my only food; it tasted so delicious that I enjoyed it immensely and my stomach handled it perfectly from the first mouthful. It was so nourishing I was quickly built back to normal health and strength.

"Grape-Nuts has great value as food to sustain life during serious attacks in which the stomach is so deranged it cannot digest and assimilate other foods.

NEW HAVEN'S NEW RULES.

General Manager Clinton L. Bardo, of The New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad Company and the Central New England Railway, in compliance with the recommendations of the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Public Utilities Commission of Connecticut has issued the following order in respect to the assignment of engineers to passenger trains to General Superintendent C. N. Woodward and Mechanical Superintendent G. W. Wildin of the New Haven Railroad and G. W. Clark, General Superintendent of the Central New England Railway, with instructions to issue and to enforce:

Engineers must not be permitted to operate passenger trains except under the following conditions:

First: They must have two years' previous road experience for through trains, and one year's previous road experience for local trains.

Second: They must have a certificate showing that they have passed all of the required examinations, a watch certificate, and a certificate of competency based upon the personal observation and knowledge of the Road Foreman of Engines and Master Mechanic and approved by the Division Superintendent. A copy of this certificate must be given to the engineer and a copy filed in the Division records.

Third: No engineer must be assigned to passenger trains without the prescribed service qualifications or certificate of competency, unless he is accompanied by a Road Foreman of Engines or other competent employee, who will remain with, and be responsible for him until his competency is established.

Fourth: No man will be promoted to the position, or employed as an engineer, or take rating as such, until he is furnished with the prescribed certificate of competency from the Road Foreman of Engines and Master Mechanic and approved by the Division Superintendent, a copy of this certificate to be filed in the Division records.

LEGHORN NOT TO BLAME.

George W. Leghorn, of 296 Newbury st., Boston, was before Judge Johnson in the District Court on a charge of manslaughter, and was discharged, the Justice finding no probable cause.

According to the evidence Leghorn on July 10 was driving an automobile down Cambridge st., Winchester, at the rate of 10 miles an hour. At the same time Florence and Elizabeth Rossley, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Rossley of 184 Cambridge st., were playing in the street near their home. As the car approached they ran across the street. Elizabeth got across safely, but Florence, age 4, turned back about midway of the street and ran directly in front of the auto, which struck her. Her death was almost instantaneous. Leghorn attempted to swing the car to one side and to stop it to avoid hitting the child. He at once surrendered himself to the Winchester police and was held in $2000.

NEW ELECTION LAW

The old election law prohibited the posting, circulating or distributing of any poster, card, handbill, placard, picture or circular, intended to influence the action of a voter, except a poster to be placed upon the official ballot, in the building in which the polling place is located, on the walls thereof, on the premises on which the building stands, or on the sidewalk adjoining such premises.

There was nothing in the law, as may be seen, to prevent a person standing in the streets in front of a polling place and distributing such circulars, etc., or from placarding the wall of a building opposite the polling place.

It is now provided in the new law, however, that such circulars, etc., shall not be distributed within 150 feet of a polling place. The word "exhibited" is also added to the statute, shutting out so-called "sandwich men" with placards on them, and likewise preventing a person from standing in or near the polling place and holding up a placard in favor of a certain candidate.

COUNTY PROGRESSIVES ORGANIZE.

A conference of Middlesex County Progressive Committee was held at Cambridge last week at which a county organization was perfected.

A. M. Richards and George Goodwin of Cambridge were chosen chairman and secretary respectively with Mr. Byam of Lowell as treasurer. These gentlemen with one member from each of the eight Middlesex senatorial districts will form an executive committee, of which Frederick S. Snyder of Winchester is the local district member. After considerable discussion, Lowell and other places being considered, it was voted to establish headquarters at Cambridge.

At the conclusion of the business, the conference, composed of 50 delegates from all parts of the county, was addressed by Daniel Cosgrove, the party candidate for lieutenant-governor.

HOW TO SAVE YOUR ICE.

If you will use the paper ice blanket in your home this summer you will not only cut the cost of living but you will have less sickness, because the vegetable parchment keeps germs, flies, etc., away from food. The ice blanket is simply thrown over your ice in your ice chest. It makes a big saving in your ice it being claimed that the ice will last twice as long. It is simple and easy, and the ice blanket will not go to pieces when wet. The price is only ten cents. For sale at Wilson the Stationer's, jv25,t,adv.

EQUAL SUFFRAGE DEPARTMENT.

Conducted by Winchester League.

We have heard from various sources of the remarkable power evinced by Mrs. Catt at Budapest. The Springfield Republican says: "That Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt would preside with admirable force and dignity at the sessions of the International Woman Suffrage Alliance at Budapest could, of course, have been predicted by most Americans as well as by many European suffragists. But European writers are outspoken in expressing their surprise and admiration for her skill in keeping order in what was deemed an unmanageable crowd of 2500 delegates from all countries speaking all languages."

Andre Tudesca, a well-known writer of Paris, is quoted as saying: "She is an incredibly skilful master of parliamentary machinery which is all the more remarkable in view of the present convention, for every word she utters is immediately and simultaneously shouted forth by corps of interpreters in the French, German and Scandinavian languages. She possesses, too, a great talent for shutting up speakers with a weakness for digression or for pointless anecdotes."

"Writing in the New York Evening Post on the great gathering of suffragists at Budapest, Amelia Von Ende says of the world significance of the Congress, 'The internationalism of the movement was only emphasized by the president (Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt) in her inaugural speech at the Academy of music, when she reported about the trip round the world which she had made with Dr. Aletta Jacobs of Holland, when she observed surprisingly numerous signs of awakening among the women of the Orient. It was an inspiring moment for the members of the international woman suffrage alliance when at the meeting of Tuesday morning, Dr. Jacobs presented the banner sent by Chinese women as a gift to their western sisters, their delegate having been prevented by the political unrest in her country from coming to the congress; and it fairly took one's breath, when close upon this presentation a telegram from Teheran was read conveying the greetings of the women of Persia in the words, of the first wire message sent from Washington to Baltimore: 'What hath God wrought.'"

"A telegram conveying news of the Illinois victory was also received at this convention—From it Jane Addams returned to her home in Chicago, a voter—not so, Mrs. Catt to her home in New York! It is hoped Congress will soon remove this discrimination."

NEWMAN'S SAILS OVER-SIZE.

No Favoritism Shown in Selection of Canoe Trophy Defender.

Mr. Herman Dudley Murphy, artist and canoeist of international repute, returned from New York last Friday night after participating in the trial races for the selection of the defender of the international sailing canoe trophy. Mr. Murphy also was a member of the committee in charge of the races, although by reason of his participation in the trial events took no part in the selection of the defender.

The race was held upon the challenge of Ralph B. Britton of Canada. Many New York canoeists took part in the trial races for the selection of the American to defend the trophy.

According to newspaper reports James A. Newman of this town, a well known sailer of the Winchester Boat Club, was selected to defend the cup, his nearest competitor in the trial races being Leo Friede, a New Yorker. Just before the races the papers stated that Friede had been chosen by the committee in place of Newman, and friends of the latter were inclined to lay the sudden change to favoritism.

Mr. Murphy states that this was not so. Three trial races were held, the first being won by Newman, who however, fouled the starting buoy; one other was won by Friede and the last by Newman. Although in the cup race the fouling of a buoy would have disqualified the canoeist, the committee were only seeking the best sailer and selected Newman.

Upon sail measurement for the international race it was found that Newman's sails were four feet over size. Upon this discovery the committee decided to hold another series of races between Newman and Friede. Two races were held, both in light air. The third was postponed on account of no wind at all. Both races were won by Friede, and it was thus that he was selected as the defender.

Before leaving for New York Newman sent his sails to a well known firm of sail makers and had them cut and fitted to regulation size, and it was through no fault of his that they were over size. Universal regret was expressed by all who participated in the event that the Winchester boy met with this unfortunate incident, for it was felt that his sailing was equal if not superior to any of the contestants.

SPIRITISM SAID TO BE DEMONISM.

A most interesting little brochure has recently come off the press setting forth with Bible proofs that the communications received by and through Spiritist Mediums is of Demon origin. The writer traces his subject through the Scriptures from the time when certain of the holy angels became disobedient. He proves from the Scriptures that these fallen spirits personate the human dead, with whose past history, spirits, though invisible, are thoroughly acquainted. He shows that they also frequently personate the Creator and the Redeemer, commanding their deceived ones to pray, do penance, etc. This, however, is merely to lead them on and to bring them more thoroughly under demonic control. Sometimes by breaking down the natural barrier, the human will, they possess their victim, and rule him more or less to his ruin—frequently sending such to the mad-house. Numerous illustrations, Scriptural and otherwise, are given. The price of the little book is but five cents; it should be in the hands of all interested in Spiritism or who have friends interested therein. WHAT, WHEN AND HOW TO EAT

The Importance of Selecting, Combining and Proportioning Food.

By EUGENE CHRISTIAN, F. S. D.

(Copyright, 1913, by American Press Association.)

THERE are three common laws that govern all forms of animal life—namely, nutrition, motion, oxidation, or, in other words, eating, exercising and breathing. Both exercising and breathing are automatic processes; therefore they are done in accordance with nature, but it is different with our food.

Man has put into his stomach in some form or other nearly everything on the face of the earth, and his efforts have been crowned with a series of mistakes that are largely responsible for a condition of universal disease and a woeful shortening of life.

As this series of articles will deal largely with these mistakes and how to correct them, I will first take up the subject of nutrition—man's food. I will subdivide this subject into three parts—selecting, combining and proportioning.

In order to get the best results the diet must be selected so as to contain all the elements of nourishment the body needs. It must be combined so as to be chemically harmonious when mixed in the stomach, and it must be proportioned so that one is not overfed on some things and underfed on others. In other words, the diet must or should be balanced.

Man's Life Is Too Short.

Man has existed a long time on this earth, and he thinks he has done fairly well without knowing or caring anything about these laws, but when we examine the mortality tables of all civilized countries we realize that there is something radically wrong.

The life period of mankind, reckoning from an age of six, is only a little over thirty-eight years, and if we take him from his infancy it brings his period of existence down to less than thirty-four years. He barely gets grown before he drops into his grave.

Nature does not demand exactness in eating. If one eats a little too much or the wrong proportions the surplus can be worked off, but the work must be done or the penalty must be paid. The penalty is some form of congestion in the body which we are pleased to call disease.

Three Other Laws of Diet.

When we learn how to select, combine and proportion our food it should be taken of according to our age, climate, time of the year and the work we do.

If we wish the best results we must select and proportion our food according to age, because the growing child or youth needs much structural material—sulphate of lime, with which to build bone, teeth and cartilage. This is found in cereals and all starch foods. The middle-aged person needs but little of these, just enough for repair, and the aged person needs practically none.

In selecting and proportioning our food we should observe the laws of temperature or time of the year. We should not partake of foods of a high caloric or heating value at a time when the sun is giving us this heat direct, thus building a fire inside while the sun is giving us the same heat outside. The violation of this simple law is the cause of all sunstroke and heat prostrations. On the contrary, if we are going to be exposed to zero weather we should build the fire inside by partaking of foods of a high caloric value.

Balanced Diet Essential.

We should select and proportion our food according to the work we do, because eating is a process of making energy, while work is a process of expending energy, and we should make these two accounts balance. When they are balanced we are healthy; when they are unbalanced we are diseased.

Health is our natural condition, and the nearer we obey the laws of nutrition as above subdivided the more perfect our health will be and the more automatically all functions of the body will work. Correct eating, exercising and breathing, therefore, cure disease by establishing normal conditions, by removing its causes, thus permitting nature to give us our birthright, which is health.

Results of Wrong Food Combinations.

There are hundreds of chemicals so opposed to each other that they produce violent action when mixed together, and so it is with food. Every article of food we eat is composed of a definite chemistry; therefore to get the best results or the highest value (energy) out of what we eat our meals must be composed of things that are chemically harmonious.

The stomach serves two purposes—first, a mixing and testing crucible; second, a storehouse or depot.

It is estimated by the highest authorities that about 90 per cent of all human disease originates in the stomach; therefore if people knew how to select and combine their food so that every article composing the meal would be both nutritious and chemically harmonious it would do more to promote health and raise the standard of life than any other one thing known to science.

When several foods are eaten at the same meal that are not chemically harmonious nature pours into the stomach a large amount of hydrochloric acid, which produces fermentation. This is nature's way of neutralizing and getting rid of these opposing elements. Then we say the foods did not agree with the stomach when the facts are they did not agree with themselves.

Cause of Heart Trouble.

When there is too much hydrochloric acid in the stomach foods digest too quickly. This causes congestion in the upper intestines. The food, being supercharged with acid, undergoes a process of fermentation which generates gas. This gas accumulates in the transverse colon, and the pressure in this distended colon often causes an insufficient blood flow into the heart; hence the faint heart action, now and then skipping a beat. At other times it causes an excessive blood flow or arterial overflow, and then we have palpitation, dizziness and sometimes complete heart failure and death.

In addition to congestion and irregular heart action the excess acid causes irritation of the mucous membrane or intestinal lining, and the millions of little nerve fibers that lead out from these irritated surfaces to every part of the body also become irritated and cause what we call nervousness.

The brain and the stomach bear the same relation to each other that a balloon bears to a basket. They are connected by thousands of nerves and capillary vessels, therefore when the stomach becomes irritated by acid the brain is the first organ to suffer. Then we have insomnia, nervousness, melancholia, lack of concentration, etc.

Results of Autointoxication.

These are only a few of the conditions caused by the wrong selections and combinations of food. The general physical trouble is described by the word autointoxication, which means that we have eaten more food than the body could use, and nature has decomposed or changed it into alcohol and carbon dioxide poisons.

Autointoxication causes innumerable symptoms, such as anæmia, languor, drowsiness, impure blood, indigestion by pimples or acne; melancholia, a lack of interest in things. That is, where we should be normally cheerful we are melancholy. Instead of being mentally bright and quick to comprehend, our mind is disturbed, wandering and dull, and we undergo a sort of general mental and physical let down.

There are a number of other conditions caused by the wrong selections and combinations of food which, named in the order of their importance, are rheumatism, Bright's disease, gout, lumbago, diabetes, hardening of the arteries, enlargement of the liver, etc.

Inasmuch as the true remedy for all diseases must be found in the field of their cause, it is obvious that the cure for these disorders lies in food. When I say cure I mean that scientific feeding will remove the primary causes, and nature will do the curing.

Disease Is the Penalty.

Just as the state punishes people who violate her criminal laws, so all disease is merely the penalty for violating natural laws. Nature, however, is more merciful than the state. She will forgive and cure if you will turn and obey her laws. This is the reason why the greatest living scientists are gradually turning toward the food question to find the causes as well as the cure for a majority of human disorders.

In this series of articles I shall endeavor to point out the various combinations of food that cause many common diseases and show how their causes can be removed and cures made by the scientific use of food.

Health is the one thing we all desire, and, as this great prize is a matter of obeying or disobeying natural laws, let us examine man with some care and if possible ascertain some of these cosmic rules.

Scientific feeding does not mean difficulty, deprivation or dieting. It means simplicity, good living, delicious food; it means knowledge of and obedience to the natural laws of building up and maintaining the human body, which are overlooked probably on account of their simplicity.

THE GROWING CHILD NEEDS SULPHATE OF LIME.

PROGRESS ON HELL

GATE BRIDGE.

Link Between New England and the West and South is Assuming Shape.

Work on the New York Connecting Railroad, the four track freight and passenger road which is to connect the New Haven railroad system with the Pennsylvania and provide a new way for moving much of New England's freight and passenger traffic, has been progressing steadily now for a year. The work thus far has consisted chiefly in building the concrete abutments and retaining walls in the Bronx and in Queensboroughs of New York City and in constructing the piers for the great arch bridge over Hell Gate, the greatest steel arch bridge in the world. This concrete work has now advanced so far, however, that within a few months at the most the erection of the steel for the viaduct portions of the line will have been begun.

The New York Connecting Railroad, which is the joint enterprise of the New Haven and Pennsylvania roads, is the greatest private engineering enterprise at present under way in this part of the country, and the bridge will be the longest in the world. The bridge itself will be 15,840 feet long, the railroad and bridge combined will be ten miles long and cost $30,000,000.

The road will leave the New Haven's Harlem River branch at 142nd street in the Bronx, will cross Bronx Kills to Randall's Island, thence across Little Hell Gate to Ward's Island and running along the easterly edge of Ward's Island on a steel and concrete viaduct will cross Hell Gate over the arch bridge, 3,000 feet long and 300 feet high, to Long Island City. There it will connect with the Pennsylvania near the Sunnyside yards, but the freight line will be continued farther until it joins the tracks of the old Manhattan Beach road over which it will run to Bay Ridge, where the freight will be ferried across the bay to Greenville, N. J.

Work was begun at the Bronx end and on the Long Island end of the bridge in July, 1912. On the Hell Gate towers for the arch bridge, the crowning achievement of the enterprise, the work was begun last September.

The towers which are to carry this enormous weight of steel will be of concrete and will rise 250 feet in the air. They will be 140 by 104 feet at base and 100 by 75 above the base. The foundation of the Long Island tower has just been completed. It was necessary to go down only 25 feet to get bedrock on that side of Hell Gate. It will be many months, however, before even the foundation of the tower on the Ward's Island side is done, for the reason that it must go down 150 feet to secure bedrock and the work must be done by caisson. At the present time caissons are being sunk for this tower in the same manner as they were sunk for the towers of the great bridges farther down the East River. It will probably be a year or more before any steel work is begun on the Hell Gate bridge.

In the Bronx and in Queens progress on the work in the past year has been such that people can now get a fair idea of what this aerial four track railroad which is to link New England with the South and West is going to look like when completed. At present half of the 32 concrete piers and abutments of the bridge in the Bronx have been completed. They range in height from 30 to 50 feet and can be plainly seen. About 900 feet of retaining wall for that portion of the viaduct which connects the road with the New Haven tracks at 142nd street has been completed. To fill in this viaduct, which will be on an average of 35 feet in height and will run for about six blocks, dirt will be obtained from the New York subway excavation.

Over in Long Island City and Queens great concrete retaining walls now rear themselves over a large part of the distance there. Seven piers and abutments and two concrete arches over streets have been finished and 1,000 feet of retaining wall has been built. Work on the eastern viaduct, as the Long Island City part is called, will be completed, it is expected, within two years. Not only is the work on the bridge now being actively pushed in two populous boroughs of New York City, but on the two Islands, Randall's and Ward's, which are passed by the Sound steamers, the contractors' plants have now been installed and there may be seen as one approaches New York's eastern portal a line of latticed wooden towers, some of them 150 feet high, not only on the two islands but in the Bronx and Queens as well. Up these towers the concrete is being lifted in elevators and distributed through chutes, the same method as is employed at Panama. There are a dozen or more of these towers forming a huge semicircle marking the pathway of this stupendous engineering enterprise so that all may see it.

At the present there are about 1,000 men employed on the actual construction work of the bridge and viaducts. The entire work will require about 90,000 tons of steel and 450,000 cubic yards of concrete reinforced with about 5,000 tons of steel rods. Gustav Lindenthal is the chief engineer. The work will be completed within four years.

When the bridge is completed through trains will be run from Boston to Chicago, Cincinnati, New Orleans, Washington and Florida. In his testimony before Commissioner Prouty recently President Mellen said that he was figuring on forty trains a day running over the bridge into the Pennsylvania station. This would mean a larger through service over the Hell Gate Bridge than there is running today out of New Haven's main line alone.

THE AUGUST AMERICAN MAGAZINE.

The August American Magazine is a fiction number and leads off with the first instalment of a new serial by Inez Haynes Gilmore entitled "Angel Island." Mrs. Gilmore is the author of the celebrated "Phoebe and Ernest" stories. The scene of this new story is laid on an uninhabited island where, owing to a shipwreck, five men are stranded and there put to work out their problem under primitive conditions. In the course of the story five women are to be introduced into the community and the tale is to center around the solution under the various difficulties that arise. Mrs. Gilmore is an ardent suffragist, and while in her new story the romance is always paramount, the story symbolizes the whole feminist movement with a vividness, a concreteness, impossible in the most ably written narrative of fact.

John A. Moroso writes a remarkable short story having to do with a fire in a skyscraper. John Taintor Foote writes a horse-race story, and William Hawley Smith contributes a rat story. George Fitch, Stephen Leacock and James Montgomery Flagg—all humorous writers—present stories and sketches.

Hugh S. Fullerton contributes "The Making of a Big Leaguer." David Grayson writes another "Adventure in Contentment," an anonymous writer describes her experiences saving her husband from drink. Mabel Howe Farnham records her experiences with a Japanese servant, and Ellsworth and Emory Koh, famous southwestern photo-

Editor Hoag Confesses

"For many years, as Editor and Proprietor of the Pine Plains, N. Y., Herald, I have advertised Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy. While I enjoyed not only the business relationship but the personal friendship of Dr. Kennedy, I have never, until now, paid him a long standing obligation. For many years, as my friends so will know, I suffered excruciating pains from rheumatism. Many were the nights when it was impossible to sleep. Without much faith, I tried as a sort of last resort, a bottle of Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, and like them I found permanent relief. Favorite Remedy has stood the test of time and I believe it is the best medicine in existence for effectually expelling the cause of rheumatism—uric acid. My regret is that I have neglected to make this frank confession long ago. It makes my kidneys do their work properly, tones up the liver and makes one feel that life is worth living. I publicly and earnestly advise all my friends who are suffering from troubles that arise from unhealthy kidneys and liver, to get a bottle of Favorite Remedy at once. There is no use in putting it off any longer. Write to Dr. David Kennedy Co., Rondout, N. Y., for free sample bottle and free medical book containing valuable information. Large bottles sold by 40,000 druggists."

BIBLE STUDY ON MEN OF DESTINY.
Exodus 5:1-14.—July 27.
"Blessed are they that mourn: for they shall be comforted."—Matthew 5:4.

NAPOLEON was styled a man of destiny, and surely many things connected with his experiences look as though the Lord had something to do with him. This does not signify that he was a servant of God—far from it! But it signifies that Divine Wisdom can always overrule the wrath of man to serve Him, and the remainder restrain, thus causing all things to work out the Divine purpose. With the eye of faith Bible Students can see many ways in which Napoleon's campaigns worked changes which undoubtedly had to do with the "I will not let Israel go." world's progress during the past century.

The Pharaoh of the Exodus was also a man of destiny. We have the Divine assurance of that fact: "For this cause have I raised thee up, for to show in thee My Power; and that My name might be declared throughout the earth." (Exodus 9:16.) St. Paul declares that God hardened this Pharaoh's heart that he should not let the people go. (Romans 9:18.) God's people have seriously misunderstood these words when in the past they interpreted them to mean that God had created Pharaoh a wicked, hard-hearted man, and that subsequently He still further hardened his heart.

Bible Students now realize that the Apostle meant to tell that from amongst the Egyptian princes God raised up to the throne a stubborn ruler, upon whose heart the mercies of God, in lifting one plague after another, would have only a hardening effect. Thus God illustrated the principle that His greatest blessing to mankind—a free will—may be perverted by Satan to work man's greatest injury.

Viewing the Other Side.

Not all men of destiny are in opposition to God, however. Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Moses and others, as well as Jesus and His Apostles and followers, have been men of destiny. Upon these His mercies, tenderness and gracious promises have a softening effect, developing in them the graces of the Holy Spirit—"meekness, gentleness, patience, brotherly-kindness, love."

The destiny of these men is only partly worked out in the present life. They are permitted to pay a goodly price for the maintenance of their fellowship with God and their inheritance of His promises. This costs them the friendship of the world, and the loss of many things highly esteemed amongst men; but it brings them the "peace of God which passeth understanding." This is merely a foretaste of the riches of Divine grace in store for them—in Messiah's Kingdom.

Eventually, the destinies of these faithful before the Cross and those faithful since the Cross will be united in that Kingdom, as St. Paul declares. The Ancient Worthies cannot be made perfect until the Church, of still higher destiny, shall have reached her glory. —Hebrews 11:33-40.

"I Know Not the Lord."

In due time Moses and Aaron presented themselves before Pharaoh, and delivered the Divine message. Derisively Pharaoh declared, "I know not Jehovah, neither will I let Israel go." It was a time of testing of faith, not only to Moses and Aaron, but also to all Israel. Pharaoh with great hardness of heart sent forth the edict that the tasks of the Israelites be increased.

The Israelites were doing forced work, making brick for public buildings. Apparently the bricks were made of unburnt clay, with straw for a binder. By the new rule, the Israelites must produce the same number of bricks per day, but must additionally scour the fields for stubble to serve as binders. Thus their tasks were practically doubled; and if not performed, they were beaten.

Can we wonder that the Israelites, of less faith, murmured against Moses and Aaron and blamed them for the increase of their tasks? Nevertheless, by these very bitter experiences the people were the more prepared to welcome the liberty subsequently offered them in God's providence.

Confirmations of this account were discovered by M. Naville, in 1884. He found the city of Pitom, which the Israelites built.

In the British Museum in London and also in the Metropolitan Museum, New York, there are on exhibition some of those very bricks. In size they are about four inches to eight inches square and about two inches thick, unbaked but very hard.

Another traveler, describing the walls of Pitom, says: "The lower courses of these walls are of well-made brick, with chopped straw in them. But higher up, the courses are not so good. The straw is coarse and scanty, and the last courses have no straw, but have sedges, rushes and water plants, which had been mingled with the mud in their making." Whoever can discern God's dealings with typical Israel should be able to appreciate Divine providence in his life as a Christian.

TO REDUCE THE COST.

A novel way to reduce the cost of living is being tried in one of the Western towns, so we are informed. A grocery store there has fixed two prices on its goods, one price if delivered and another price if not delivered. The idea is to save the consumer the cost of upkeep of an elaborate delivery service. It is said that a store which delivered nothing whatever would be able to offer very material discounts. Most of the ten cent stores are operated on this principle now, deliveries being made only if large purchases are made. But how many people would be willing to take their own groceries home? Very few. Everybody insists on the modern service to be had. They are delighted if their groceries are delivered by automobile. It shows that they are dealing with a strictly modern store.

Be Careful When You Laugh.

Few people know what dangers lurk in excessive laughter. When we laugh our regular breathing is changed, coming in quick, short respirations because the throat muscles are contracted. It is for this reason that, when laughing very heartily at some good joke, we have often to gasp for breath. At times we are obliged to hold our sides on account of the pain a hearty laugh causes us, owing to the partial suffocation of the lungs through the cutting off of their proper air supply. Every muscle in the body becomes contracted during a continued fit of laughter. Often the blood vessels in the face become congested, causing it to turn red and even purple. Should this congestion continue for any length of time apoplexy resulting in death might well occur. It is better in these circumstances to laugh until we cry, for the shedding of tears relieves the congestion of the brain. Tears caused by grief do good in the same way, and that is how, after a great sorrow, many people have been saved from brain congestion and madness by the timely shedding of a few tears.—London Tit-Bits.

A Conservative Scotch Boodle.

Before he went to Glasgow Dr. Story was for many years minister of Rose-nenth, and his old boodle was often sorely perplexed by his "innovations"—standing to sing, kneeling at prayer and various other "seemly attentions." His method of objecting to the changes "was to enter the vestry at the close of the service, firmly clasping the big pulpit Bible and then to lay it heavily upon the table, saying, 'I'm dune wi' ye noo, I'm fair dune wi' ye; I canna thole it any langer. I hae car-riet the Bible for thretty years, but I canna enlry it any langer; I'm fair dune wi' ye.' Dr. Story would reply, 'Foot, foot, John; you'll think better of that.' "Na, na, sir, I canna thole you. I'll carry the bulks me langer; I'm dune wi' ye." But the bandle thought better of it, and remained with Dr. Story "as his sure and trusty benchman" till the end of his life.—Westminster Gazette.

Death, Expert Mechanic.

"It is," writes Wilhelm Lamszus in "The Human Slaughter House," "as though Death had scrapped his scythe for old iron, as if nowadays he had graduated as expert mechanic. They have ceased to mow corn by hand nowadays. By this time of day even the sheaves are gathered up by machinery. And so they will have to shovel our millions of bodies underground with burying machines."

As to falling in battle: "Once it was a knightly death, an honorable soldier's death; now it is death by machinery. That is what is sticking in my gullet. We are being hustled from life to death by experts, by mechanical means. And, just as they turn out buttons and pins by wholesale methods of production, so they are now turning out the crippled and the dead by machinery."

WINCHESTER AUTO IN CRASH.

Mr. Frank A. Black of the Parkway, accompanied by his family, met with an accident in the Falls Monday night while driving in their Abbot-Detroit touring car near the pumping station at Spot Pond. According to reports of the accident the Black car was proceeding on the right side of the road. Just as it approached Ravine road the other auto, which was owned and driven by Joseph P. Moore of 24 Natalie avenue, Melrose, and containing four passengers, came around the corner onto Woodland road. Neither of the two cars had any warning of the approach of the other and they crashed together. In the Black car were Mr. and Mrs. Black, a woman and four children. It was going in the direction of Stoneham.

Both autos were badly wrecked. The Black car having a front wheel torn off, a damaged radiator, windshield and other injuries, and the Moore car broken mud guards and other damage. The most serious injury occurred to Mary Black, four years old, who was thrown through the windshield and badly cut by glass. The other occupants of the cars were somewhat bruised and cut by glass, but none sustained serious injury. The Black child was not dangerously injured. Both cars had to be abandoned and the parties returned to their homes.

BASE BALL.

In one of the best games seen on Manchester Field this season Winchester defeated the strong Braman-Dow team Saturday. Tift was in great form getting 11 strikeouts and allowing 6 hits. Winchester was there with the bat, getting in some good solid drives where hits counted. All the men played good ball, the errors having no effect on the score. Mitchell at third played a great game and drove a swell homerun to the river. Hunnewell at second is doing well and will improve each game, he has a good eye for the ball. Roche in center is playing the game of his life and doing well at the bat. As for Dickie the team is lucky to have such a catcher. So far this season there has not been a catcher on the field that is in the same class. The score:

THE RESULT OF A MIXUP.

Because of juggling with the revised town By-Laws by amendments at the March meeting when they were before the voters for acceptance, a queer condition arose, and one that will cost all persons who may desire water connections with the street mains more money than it has been customary to pay in past years, or since water was first introduced into Winchester. It was section 9 of article five, "Regulations and Rates of the Water Works" which came out of the fracas badly battered by the plumbers. The section as it had been for years, and as recommended by the special committee to revise the By-Laws, read:

SECT. 9. Said Board shall lay all service pipes from the main in the street to the inside of the building which is to be supplied in such location and manner, and using such material, as they deem proper, the cost thereof from the street line to the building to be charged to the owner. An estimate of the cost shall be made and the amount shall be deposited with the Town Treasurer before the work is begun.

As finally adopted, after amendments, it read:

SECT. 9. Said Board shall lay all service pipes from the main in the street to the inside of the building which is to be supplied in such location and manner, and using pipe of such quality and size as the owner may desire and said Board deems proper, the cost thereof to be charged to the owner, but the service water pipe from the service box to the inside of the house may be furnished and installed by any competent person whose work shall be satisfactory to said Board or its inspector. An estimate of the cost shall be made and the amount shall be deposited with the Town Treasurer before the work is begun.

Therefore, as the section now stands abutters will have to pay the expense from the main to the inside of a building.

This was a good thing for the town as it meant additional revenue for the water department, but it also meant that that additional revenue would come from all persons who wished to connect with the street main either for a new building or a change in the service pipes. It is said that an effort will be made at the next March meeting to have the blunder remedied so that abutters will only pay from the street line.

BAND CONCERT.

The First Corps Cadet Band Inc. and Orchestra will give the concert on Manchester Field, Saturday afternoon at 3.30. This will no doubt prove to be a rare musical treat to all who attend as this organization is considered to be one of the best in the State. The program will be as follows:

SELECTMEN'S MEETING.

Request Made for a Watering Trough for Horses in Town.

The Board met at 7.30 p.m. All present.

The Chief of Police returned with his approval the application of Frank E. Connelley, 3 Belmont street, Woburn, for a license as hawker and peddler, and it was granted subject to the payment of the fee of $10.

An application for a license as hawker and peddler was received bearing the approval of the Chief of Police from D. J. Daly, 20 River street, Winchester, and granted subject to the payment of the fee of $10.

The Town Counsel reported on the request of Charles H. Davis, chairman Finance Committee, Progressive party of Massachusetts, presented July 14, asking whether any permit would be needed to fly flags or banners over the streets or highways in the town, the consent of the abutting owners having been obtained, and the Clerk was instructed to notify Mr. Davis that no permit would be required, but that any banner must be hung in such locality and in such a manner as not only not to obstruct travel, but also to the satisfaction of the Superintendent of Streets; not to constitute a possible danger either directly by falling on travellers or indirectly by scaring the horses of travellers, and suggesting that the Superintendent's approval of the place and manner of hanging the banners be secured in advance.

On the suggestion made July 21, Mr. Daly, to whom the matter was referred, reported that he had consulted Mr. Dana of the Boston Elevated Railroad, who agreed that the matter of better signboards indicating Winchester cars at Sullivan Square terminal would receive his attention; also that the man on the platform would be instructed to call Winchester cars in his announcement. The report was accepted.

The resignation of James H. Roach as Democratic member of the Board of Registrars of Voters was received, to take effect at once, and accepted. Bernard F. Mathews, representing the Democratic party, was nominated to serve the unexpired portion of Mr. Roach's term, the nomination to lay over one week under the rules.

Thomas Maher was nominated to be a special police officer, the nomination to hold over one week under the rules.

The Clerk was instructed to place on the docket for attention the first meeting in July, 1914, the appointment by the Chairman of a Dog Officer under the provisions of chapter 102, section 14B, Revised Laws.

A letter was received and filed from A. E. Myers, Superintendent Bay State Street Railway Co. at Reading, containing telephone conversation of July 21 in regard to surfacing Forest street within the Company's rails and on the outside of the rails next to the travelled way which was disturbed when the new rails were laid last year, the expense of this surfacing to be charged to the railroad company.

A letter was received from the County Commissioners inquiring whether the roadbed of Pond street had been made the full width, 21 feet, as required by them, and approving the bill rendered to them for 25 per cent. of the cost, provided the road was the full width as required, and stating that the light oil would suffice, and concluded the work so far as the County was concerned. The Clerk was instructed to reply that the road had been constructed to the full width as required by the Commissioners.

A letter was received and filed from the County Commissioners approving the bill rendered them for 25 per cent. of the cost of the alterations on Cambridge street at the Arlington line.

A letter was received and referred to the committee on Ways and Bridges asking that the tar sidewalk in front of 39 Wildwood street be resurfaced when the contractors are doing the work this season.

Voted: That in the opinion of this Board public convenience and necessity requires the grading, constructing and covering with tar concrete sidewalks the following streets or portions thereof as described, namely: Washington street, westerly side from Irving street to Forest street; Cross street, southerly side from Washington street to the Washington schoolhouse; Harvard street, northerly side from Washington street to Florence street; Irving street, northerly side from Washington street to Florence street.

The preceding vote was passed subject to the provision that the remaining streets referred to in the Warrant Committee's recommendation of this year be recommended for construction to next year's Board, namely: Main street, from Canal street to Hemmingway street, estimated cost $255; Richardson street, southerly side from Main street to Rumford street, northerly side from schoolhouse to Main street, estimated cost $853.

Contract for construction of tar concrete sidewalks with bond was received duly signed from Daniel McDonald the contractor, and one copy of the contract was signed and ordered returned to him.

A request for necessary repairs to granolithic sidewalk on Dix street street pole 21-12, corner of Pine street, at the cost of the telephone company was received from them and referred to the Superintendent of Streets.

Forms of agreement submitted by the Town Counsel for signatures of abutters releasing the Town from all claims for damage by reason of the construction of sidewalks at the established grade on Park avenue were referred to the Committee on Ways and Bridges.

A letter asking that the sidewalk in front of 408 Main street be rebuilt, the owner to pay the customary charges for same, was referred to the Committee on Ways and Bridges.

A letter was received from the Town Engineer with estimate of granolithic sidewalk along Sanborn, Main and Grove street frontage, together with facts of valuation and estimated cost of taking the land at the corner of Main and Sanborn streets, also estimates for cement walks and curbs at properties lying within the area enclosed by Sanborn, Brooks, Grove and Main streets, and referred to the Committee on Ways and Bridges.

A letter was received and referred to the Highway Committee from owner of the estate 18 Central street, asking that the workmen be instructed to connect the new granolithic with the resurfaced sidewalk so that the connection will be more properly graded than at the present; also asking that at the corner of Central and Norwood streets a curbing be so placed as to protect the sidewalk from the encroachment of teams.

Mrs. C. G. McCauley of 155 Highland avenue appeared before the Board and expressed her great interest in the matter of providing a suitable watering trough for horses in the town and of finding a suitable location for the same, and also asked whether some temporary arrangement might not be put in force during the hot weather to take care of their needs.

A citizen appeared before the Board and objected to the proposed location of a watering trough on Cambridge street at High street, more particularly on account of the danger to be anticipated in cold weather when the overflow from the trough would be frozen and slippery.

The Town Engineer was instructed to submit his report and plan for a watering trough as soon as possible. The James J. Fitzgerald Contracting Company asked for a permit to lay granolithic stepping stone at the entrance to garage across the loam space at 1 Lakeview road, and same was granted subject to the usual conditions.

The matter of street lights on Main street between Thompson street and the Parkway referred to them July 21, the Committee on Street Lights recommended the installation of an additional 60cp incandescent light on the westerly side of Main street on the pole opposite Converse place. The report of the Committee was accepted and the Clerk instructed to order the light installed.

Mr. Brown made a report in the matter of the Winthrop street drainage and its effect upon certain property, and the matter was referred to him to again consult with the owner.

A letter was received and filed from the Town Engineer stating that he had renumbered two houses on Forest circle and his action was approved.

In the matter of lights on Swan road the Clerk was instructed to order the Edison Company to install two 60cp incandescent lights on Swan road one of which shall be near the first bend in the road and the other approximately half way, as determined by the Town Engineer.

The Clerk was instructed to order an 80cp incandescent light installed on Holland street at the corner of Swanton in place of the arc light now existing at this point. A sketch of suggested alterations at Symmes corner and vicinity in connection with the development of the Henry property was presented and was filed.

A report was received and filed from the Town Engineer in the matter of notice received from the Recorder of the Land Court July 7th, concerning petition for the registration of land on Highland avenue that he had taken up with the Town Counsel, the determination of the line of Highland avenue and found that the paper tracing supplied by Mr. Dutch confirmed to the line of the street as he had laid it out from the County Commissioners' plan, and had so reported to Mr. Dutch.

A report was received and accepted from the Committee on Ways and Bridges in regard to a complaint presented July 14 concerning dust on Main street, that portions of Main street would be oiled again during the season and they did not find that the dust is at present serious enough to require immediate oiling.

A letter was received and referred to the Committee on Street Lights from W. H. Lott, Supt. Right of Way and Street Lighting Dept. of the Edison Electric Illuminating Company stating that the cost of placing the all-night arcs in the Centre on one circuit would be approximately $150.

A report was received from the Town Engineer on complaint of O. C. Sanborn presented July 21 concerning the gutter on High street, that he had gone over the ground and found that the gutter from the upper driveway to the steps leading from High street was in generally fair condition, but from the steps mentioned to the lower driveway the gutter was quite badly washed. When this part of High street was planned the expense of paved gutters was included in the estimate, but the gutters were never constructed. The Town Engineer recommended that they be built at present, and the matter was referred to the Committee on Ways and Bridges.

A letter was received from the Superintendent of Streets suggesting that the Metropolitan Sewer contractor be asked to cross Bacon street with a tunnel instead of an open trench. Referred to the Committee on Ways and Bridges.

The James J. Fitzgerald Contracting Company petitioned for permission to lay granolithic entrance across the loam space to the stable at 7 Stratford Road, and to lay granolithic entrance to stable and a step stone across the loam space at 10 Pine street, and the permission was granted subject to the usual conditions. TRADERS' DAY.

All Stores Will be Closed Next Wednesday, Aug. 6th.

The annual outing of the Winchester Traders will be held next Wednesday, Aug. 6th, and on that day all the stores and business offices in town will be closed.

The outing this year will be at Nahant, and the committee in charge, consisting of Messrs. Albert C. Robinson and James Rogers of Richardson's Market, and William Follan of J. C. Adams' grocery, have made arrangements for the day which will include all who attend.

Special electric will leave the centre at 8.30, conveying the party direct to Nahant without change or delay. The usual attractions will be enjoyed, with a fish dinner at noon.

In the forenoon a base ball game has been arranged for between two nines of the clerks under the guidance of Mr. Howard Johnson of Richardson's Market and Robert Sullivan of J. C. Sullivan's barber shop.

The committee on sports consists of Messrs. Howard Johnson, Robert Sullivan and Everett Smith. The sports will consist of 100yd. dash for the single men; 100yd. dash for the married men; running broad jump for all and base ball throwing contest for the ladies, for all of which suitable prizes will be awarded.

The tickets for the outing may be obtained of any of the clerks and at all of the drug stores.

The prizes for the sports have been donated by the merchants of the town and are on exhibition at Rooney's store.

THE SABBATH.

Dear is the hallowed morn to me,
When village bells awake the day;
And by their sacred minstrelsy,
Call me from earthly cares away.
And dear to me the winged hour,
Spent in thy hallowed courts, O Lord,
To feel devotion's soothing power,
And catch the manna of thy Word."

Because the new arrangement of Union Church services of this vacation season were for three successive weeks to be held in the Methodist Church, where as yet there is no bell,—the whole community last Sunday missed the regular Sabbath bells that year in and year out chime forth the glad summons to worship.

Arrangements have now been made whereby next Sunday and the following one the bells of the Baptist and the Congregational churches will ring at 9.30, as also for the services at 10.30 a. m. and 7.00 p. m.

Preaching by the Rev. O. C. Poland pastor of the Methodist church. A cordial invitation to attend is extended to all.

VACATION SCHOOL EXHIBITION.

The annual exhibition of the work of the summer school will be held at the school on Swanton street on Thursday, August 7th, from nine to twelve. There will also be a sale of baskets made by the children. All friends interested in the school and parents of the children will be most welcome.

Company asked for permission to construct a granolithic entrance across the loam space to the garage at 23 Everett avenue, and the same was granted subject to the usual conditions.

A granite curbing at the northerly corner of Bridge and Elm streets was applied for and the matter was referred to the Committee on Ways and Bridges.

A request from Fred T. Ley & Co. that loam be placed about the poles recently set by them on Church street cost of same to be paid by them was referred to the Superintendent of Streets.

Mr. John McCarron, White street, appeared before the Board and asked that he be given the grade of the street and sidewalk in front of his property where he is building a house. Referred to the Town Engineer.

Mr. Jewett called attention to the fact that Curtis street washes out after every storm and that it would be for the town's advantage to pave the gutter and it was Voted, that a gutter be laid in Curtis street if funds are available, otherwise it may be placed on the list for next year's work. The Town Engineer was requested to make an estimate of the cost of the gutter to connect with a stone gutter that has been laid by a resident of the street.

The Clerk was instructed to write a petitioner for sidewalk on Pine street that the Board had considered the question of laying a sidewalk abutting his estate from the curve towards Wildwood street and had decided that if a sidewalk was laid in that section it should run from Pine street to Wildwood; that his request had been placed on the list with other work to be considered later.

The Clerk was instructed to write the Edison Company in regard to charges for shifting lights. Adjourned at 11.25 P. M. FRANK R. MILLER, Clerk of the Board.

COMING EVENTS.

August 2, Saturday. Base ball on Manchester Field at 3.30. Winchester vs Winthrop Athletics.

Aug. 2, Saturday. Lawn party and dance by Winchester Highlands Athletic Club at Club house on Maple road off Forest street.

Aug. 6, Wednesday. Traders' Day. Outing at Nahant. Cars leave the centre at 8.30 a. m.

Aug. 12, Tuesday. Trolley ride to Revere Beach by Young Men's Social Club.

MID-SUMMER POLITICS.

This fall there will be three sets of candidates to be voted for at the State election that Winchester will take an active interest in. There will be local candidates of the Republican, Progressive and Democratic parties. The Progressives are active already, and it is predicted they will make an even stronger fight than was the case at the last election. Of course Winchester is most interested in the Senatorial and Representative contests as they are local. But interest in the entire State ticket will be very keen also.

Mr. W. F. Prime will be a candidate for re-election to the Massachusetts Legislature on the Republican ticket. Mr. Prime has been a faithful and conscientious legislator, as all his friends knew he would, and the only discordant note heard comes from the ladies of the Equal Suffrage League because of his voting against giving women the ballot at the last session of the Legislature. How much this will count against him at the polls is not known, as the members of the League have not taken any action up to the present time so far as known.

Mr. James J. Fitzgerald will be the Progressive candidate in opposition to Mr. Prime. He made a strong showing last year, and the party leaders expect to do even better with him this fall.

Selectman William J. Daly, it is said, will be the Democratic candidate. Mr. Daly is chairman of our Board of Selectmen, and his work on the Board has made him many friends, not to mention the great many of years standing. He is very strong among the Democrats in the two Medford wards that with Winchester make up the district, and they have already come out enthusiastically for him.

Senatorially, William B. Fay, of Medford, the present Senator, will seek a second term. Mr. W. L. Tuck has taken out Democratic nomination papers which are being circulated for signatures. Charles Zuehlbin will no doubt, again be a candidate on the Progressive ticket, and it will be remembered he received a very large vote.

Aside from all this is the interest being taken to see whether Gov. Foss, the Democratic Governor will now capture the Republican nomination.

BOY SAVED FROM DROWNING IN MYSTIC.

Francis Howland, 10, of 3 Arlington street, Woburn, almost lost his life by drowning in the Upper Mystic Lake, late Tuesday afternoon, when he was barely rescued, after he had gone down for the third time, by Warner Ames, 13 years old, of 390 Main street, Woburn. Policeman Golden of the metropolitan police gave the unconscious boy first aid. It took two hours to resuscitate him.

Howland who was in bathing with a group of companions, stepped into a mud hole and immediately sank. The other boys thought he was feigning drowning when he commenced to call for help. Finally young Ames dived for the boy after he had sunk for the last time and pulled his body to the shore. The officer who heard the boys' cries reached the scene just as the lad was being carried ashore.

"FRED" KILLED BY AUTO.

"Fred," one of the pair of handsome tiger cats at Morrill's grocery was struck and instantly killed on Wednesday night by an automobile.

The animal was in the gutter in front of the store on Church street. Fred and his mate, French have been great pets and known to hundreds who pass by Morrill's store. Both were particularly intelligent and the sudden and untimely end of Fred has caused much regret.

YOUR AFFAIRS AND MINE.

The Spectator frequently is grieved to behold how impatient some men and women here in Winchester are. We need patience to conserve our physical energies. Nothing is so destructive of nerve force as a hurried, anxious or impatient spirit. We see evidences, sad reminders, of this homely truth everywhere in Winchester as elsewhere. "The pace that kills" is one synonym for impatience—impatience to enjoy oneself, to indulge every variety of self-fish pleasure. We want the fruit of our labor speedily. All this is wrong, as every good Winchesterite will agree. The physical economy can be kept in a sound and healthy state only by cultivating calm and rest and patience. For the sake of the body, then, "let patience have its perfect work." And it this be true of the body, how much more true it is of the mind! We need patience, surely, to give intelligence and moral character time to grow. There is too much ambition to get to the front before we are ready; we rush ahead of our intelligence; we crowd into a few weeks or months an apprenticeship which should occupy years, and, as a consequence, many collapse in middle life. Psychology teaches us that it is dangerous to force the mental faculties ahead of their power of understanding the duties involved in social life and moral obligation. This applies to the training of children, and of adults equally. All hurry spells failure. Character, too, is a matter of exceedingly slow growth even under the best conditions. We are learning every day that mere quickness of intelligence, without goodness of life, is one of those products of nervousness which is producing undesirable citizens. Rome was not built in a day. It has taken God 60,000,000 years to produce man on the earth. So the training of the individual, in order to fit him to do good work in the world, is a matter of years, requiring patience and quiet toil. How true is Othello's observation, "How poor are they that have not patience." Their poverty is worse than the lack of money, because it shows the absence of self-reliance and courage to pursue an ideal at all odds. Have patience with yourself. Find room in your life for the very best things. Remember the old proverb: "He that will have a cake must tarry at the grinding." Look for the microbe of impatience within. Then, have patience with others. Masters with their servants, employers with their employees, wives with their husbands and husbands with their wives, and both with the younger set. There is plenty of wickedness in Winchester; there is no doubting that fact, and it is foolish to shut our eyes to it, but "let patience have its perfect work." The sins of society are of slow growth. Equally slow will be their correction and elimination from our lives. To patient work, done in a spirit of trust, the issue is certain. They will all disappear, if we have patience. Give the Church time; give the school time, and do not sit down like the contented mole and do nothing, or worse, sit in the seat of the scorpion and criticize. Join the good work of making the world better, beginning with yourself; do your share of it and hope for the best, which will surely come to those who bide their time.

The world has been, and now is very well contented with its present assortment of animals. It is true that persons of fastidious tastes have occasionally suggested that a few simple improvements might be put upon some of our domestic animals. For example, there are those that think it desirable to have the tail of the milch cow fitted to the animal in such a way that it could be easily unsprung during the process of milking. This suggested improvement, however, is merely a matter of detail. The idea of adding new animals to our present stock is quite a different affair, and no one as far as the Spectator knows, has seriously advocated it except when jeering at the evolutionists and seeking to draw them into a vexatious position. On the other hand, the belief that a new variety of human beings is imperatively needed has long prevailed among the most advanced social reformers. It is generally conceded among the friends of the "Emancipation of Woman" that what is really needed is the invention of a new sex. It is obvious to the minds of our strongest minded women not only that men, being unmitigated brutes, are entirely unfit to live, but also that women, who are spiritually a little higher than the angels, are physically unfit to meet all the exigencies of life, of course, they consider that if men could be wholly eliminated and the world placed wholly under the control of women, the change would be an enormous improvement. Nevertheless, they admit—in the confidence of private tea and toast—that even in a world governed by women contingencies would arise with which the ablest woman would be unable to successfully cope. There is the implacable and devastating mouse. What would become of a Senate of women if a mouse should venture into the Senate chamber? Before the world can be brought to a state of absolute perfection a new kind of woman, having the moral and mental excellencies of the present variety of woman, and the boldness in the face of mice and creeping things which distinguishes the brave though brutal man, must be devised. Such a being would virtually constitute a new sex, to whom would be rightfully appertain the possession and government of the world. The "male girl" is the crowning achievement of evolution. We almost have her here in Winchester. The end is in sight that evolution cannot evolve a new pattern of humanity and a revival of courage

Police officer James Danchy started on his vacation Monday. Officer John Harrold returned to work Monday night.

A Winchester merchant upon arriving at his home in Wilmington last Saturday night, missed his watch. He recalled that he had left it in his vest which he had hung up in his office during the day, neglecting to take it home with him at the time of leaving. On Sunday he visited his place of business and found that his watch was not there. He reported its theft to the police, who counseled him to make a thorough search at his home, and promised to investigate the matter. The merchant returned home and started looking for the missing timepiece, finding it in the soiled clothes hamper.

GLIDDEN—SOMES.

The wedding of Miss Ester Saville Sones, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David A. Sones of Cabot street, a prominent young lady of this town, and Mr. Elmer Reddington Glidden, also of Winchester took place at the summer home of the bride's parents at Fernwood, Gloucester, Saturday evening.

The wedding was informal, the bride being attended by her two little cousins, Misses Martha and Barbara Pew. Rev. William H. Rider, D.D., of the Universalist Church of Gloucester, performed the ceremony. The bride was gown in a dress of white shadow lace and carried a bouquet of sweet peas, and with the exception of her two little cousins the couple were unattended.

The residence was decorated for the occasion with a profusion of laurel wild bramble, sweet peas, phlox and other similar garden bloom. A reception was held from seven-thirty until ten, with light refreshments and dancing, the Salem Cadet Orchestra being in attendance.

Following the wedding trip through the White Mountains the couple will take up their residence at their new home 15 Ward street, North Woburn. They were most generously remembered by many handsome gifts from relatives and their many friends.

AUTO WENT INTO DITCH.

A Ford touring car, owned by Dr. Ernest S. Brisbee of 777 Tremont street Boston, went into the ditch on Main street at Cutter's Village Saturday. The accident occurred on the hill just above Symmes' grain shed. At this point the street is dug up for the laying of water pipes.

The car was going toward Woburn and contained besides the doctor, who was operating it, a man and woman. According to report one of the front wheels struck a pipe which was lying along side of the trench, this caused the wheels to turn and the doctor lost control of the steering apparatus. The car ran its two front wheels into the ditch.

No one was injured and the car was not badly damaged, its front axle only being bent.

ALWAYS COOL.

Falmouth, Mass.

July 28, 1913.

Editor of the Star:

Dear Sir:—I never realized how universally the Star was read until two years ago when I wrote you from Falmouth how perfectly comfortable we were, only two hours away while the heat was so intense at Winchester, and nearly every acquaintance I met spoke to me about it.

At that time I had no land here for sale but through a trade of some Winchester property I now have a large tract here which I bought of control the development of and which I advertise on another page. I should take pleasure in showing this property to any of my townspeople who may be at the Sippewissett this summer.

We have been so comfortable that we have hardly noticed the thermometer, but I know 80 degrees has been the extreme, and even then the constant breeze kept us cool.

PARK POLICE PULLS GEORGE NORTON INTO BOAT.

George Norton, the twelve year old son of Benjamin F. Norton of 75 Woburn street, West Medford, was saved from drowning about 2.10 last Saturday afternoon by officer David Gogan of the Metropolitan Park Police, who patrols the Winchester side of Upper Mystic Lake.

The boy had been bathing in the lake and, going out 50 feet, had got beyond his depth and was sinking. Officer Gogan put out in a rowboat, seized the boy by his hair and pulled him into the boat. Young Norton was unconscious, but after working over him for twenty minutes officer Gogan revived him and sent him home.

APPROVE PRIEST'S STAND.

All honor to Rev. James Conlin, pastor of St. Rose Catholic Church of Meriden, Ct., who has refused the holy communion to women who appear in his church wearing slit skirts exposing the legs, or wearing ultra décolleté or transparent waists. "I have no objection," says this sensible and fearless priest, "to women wearing cool, decent clothes to church, but when they appear before me in things that are mere apologies for sleeves a wisp of cloth and a yard of nothing, it is time to call a halt. The church of God is neither a ball room nor a recreation pier." [New Salem correspondent, Gazette and Courier.]

RELIEF ALL ROUND.

The Bay State Railway officials think they have the trolley wires at the square leading over the tracks of the steam road in good shape for safe travel. Conditions at this place for some time have been bad for getting the cars across safely, and the officials of the road have not been slow to recognize the constant danger, therefore they have been making every effort to remedy the trouble. A special study was made of the overhead wires and last week extensive changes were made in the arrangement of the overhead wires, and the result appears to be satisfactory as the trolley poles now keep to the wire. What made the trouble difficult to correct was because two lines of cars cross each other at the square, one going to Woburn and the other to Arlington. The trouble has almost altogether been with the Woburn north bound cars, the majority of them losing the overhead wires while passing over the crossing, the Arlington cars being but seldom troubled. No doubt the conductors and motormen of the Woburn line will feel much relieved because of the improvement.

Winchester's railroad crossing is said to be the most dangerous on the Southern division, and the engineers of the trains keep a sharp lookout when approaching it. An engineer of a fast express that passes through the town daily says that he always feels relieved when he has got his train through Winchester. As soon as the new president of the Boston & Maine has become familiar with the conditions on the railroad, the settlement of the grade crossing problem should be taken up and pushed to completion. Conditions are vastly more dangerous now than they were seven years ago when the crossing abolition question was first taken up, and a person does not have to linger in the square for any great length of time to witness the chances that many people now take in crossing over when trains are approaching, and strange as it may seem women are the most reckless. But for the alertness of the gate tenders there would be hits where now there are misses.

HOW TO SAVE YOUR ICE.

If you will use the paper ice blanket in your home this summer you will not only cut the cost of living but you will have less sickness, because the vegetable parchment keeps germs, flies etc., away from food. The ice blanket is simply thrown over your ice in your ice chest. It makes a big saving in your ice it being claimed that the ice will last twice as long. It is simple and easy, and the ice blanket will not go to pieces when wet. The price is only 10 cents. For sale at Wilson the Stationer's. tf,adv

HEATING SYSTEM.

Now is the proper time to consider a warm house next winter with no gas to kill the flowers. We are the only firm in Winchester that can furnish you practical heating men of all kinds. Hot air furnaces, steam and hot water. Fifty-two (52) weeks in a year at a moment's notice.

We advise attention now to that important feature in your home. Anybody can make a bluff at cleaning your furnace but it takes a practical furnace man to produce results. We have the practical men and would rather serve you now than in the busy season. It being much easier now to get the repairs.

The man who can not see the benefit arising from a local newspaper does not take much interest in his town.

Secretary Bryan can readily change his views of others when they apply to himself. It is not such a long time ago when he said that no man who received more than $5000 a year earned his salary.

An automatic attachment is to be installed on telephones in the Boston exchanges that will ring the bell every three seconds until the subscriber answers. This will be of benefit to subscribers and bring the party called to the telephone more promptly.

Postmaster Roach says that the business men in Winchester are a factor in this town and that he proposes, if he can arrange it, to give them an additional delivery in the afternoon. Good for Postmaster Roach; this will be appreciated by the business men.

When a man points a gun at you, knock him down. Don't stop to look if it is loaded, but knock him down and don't be at all particular what you do it with. If there is going to be a coroner's inquest, let it be over the other fellow; he won't be missed. [Reading Chronicle.]

On the whole it is just as well that auto fees go to the State to be used for good roads. Improved roads throughout the State are now almost of as much benefit to us as if in Winchester. The auto in time may bring about placing the care of the roads in the hands of the State altogether.

Secretary Burleson predicts that some day the government will handle all the parcel shipments in the United States. And when that time arrives the government will conduct the greatest monopoly in this country. There will be no appeal from the rates, and the deficit will be made up by the people through taxes.

The oftener the barbers strike in Boston the more they break down their livelihood. The safety razor is coming more and more into use, and once accustomed to handling it the less inclined men are to go back to the barber. Here in Winchester conditions have not been disturbed by strike dissatisfaction of employees, the master barbers endeavoring to be fair to their men.

The Arlington Advocate says of the increased tax rate in that town: "There is another side to this high rate business. People now demand in the way of public utilities many costly things not thought of not so very long ago. If they want them and vote money to meet the expense, the higher rate is inevitable. And who desires a return to the conditions when the tax rate was only a little more than half what it is today."

The action of the selectmen in refusing to allow an advertising concern to erect a bill board on a building abutting the square will meet with the approval of every citizen. Such a structure would not only be an additional fire risk, but very undesirable from an aesthetic standpoint. [Stoneham Independent.] And yet we see here in Winchester square a huge glaring sign board recently erected on the top of a building. Still some persons have accused Stoneham of lacking in civic pride.

MIDDLESEX COUNTY AFFAIRS.

State Commission on Economy and Efficiency Make Report.

The State Commission on Economy and Efficiency suggests that Governor Foss secure from the Attorney-General opinions as to the responsibility of various officials over the auditing of the Middlesex county accounts.

The commission, which has been investigating the recent defalcation of nearly $40,000 there, says in its report to the Governor that the manufacturing or industrial department of the House of Correction in East Cambridge has been so inadequately supervised and controlled that a larger defalcation might readily have occurred without detection.

The commission believes it to be the duty of the controller of county accounts to examine accounts in the manufacturing and industrial departments of houses of correction.

The commission says there is no such examination owing to the opinion of the controller that he has no authority to make such an examination.

The commission says that the prison commission contends that it has not made such an examination because of the view that the controller had the right.

The commission says that the county commissioners say they have no responsibility in the matter.

The sheriff says that the matter is up to the controller.

Speaking about the defalcation the report says: "The shortage should have been discovered the first year in which receipts of the institution were misappropriated. The failure to audit, therefore, is partly responsible for the continuation in the misappropriation of funds."

The bond of the sheriff contains four county officials or employees, as sureties, thus tending to place the sheriff under a sense of obligation to persons with whom he has official relations.

"The responsibility for the recent defalcation of nearly $40,000 from the receipts of the Middlesex county jail workshops lies between the prison commissioners and the controller of county accounts," said Lewis S. Gould, chairman of the Board of County Commissioners of Middlesex county, when commenting on the report.

IN KEEPING WITH THE TOWN. NOT!

The following verses were clipped from the Woburn Times, the author being a Winchester man:

Winchester has an engine house, a wreck from top to toe,
You will never find its equal no matter where you go,
Its walls are cracked its floors are bent, its roof is falling down,
It's a plague to all the firemen and a black eye to the town.

It's like an ancient Tavern, that once saw better days,
Its bell sounds dull from age and rust and trembles when it sways,
'Tis years since it was varnished or got a daub of paint,
A first night's sleep within its walls would make a hobo faint.

We read on history's pages how the North and South did fight,
And picture in our memory that great and glorious sight,
But though this house has a history our memory can't recall,
If it knew its age 'twould surely rage, then crumble down and fall.

In a backward lot on a lonely spot, this Engine house stands there,
In a very poor location though quite close to the Square,
There's just one way to go or come to reach the street below,
To avoid the danger of two curves the drivers must run slow.

All men are born equal you will hear most people say,
But the Firemen's Apparatus has got the right of way,
This is all imagination and it all looks wrong to me,
For the Banana teams, to me it seems, block Mt. Vernon street you see.

Some Charitable Institution should take pity on this Coop,
And throw a Cable round it or run it through a loop,
Hitch on a few good horses, and take it on the jump,
And make its grave and trouble save, up on the Main street dump.

The days are fast approaching and there'll be a new house yet,
Chief DeCoursey and his men will be very proud you bet,
Keep up the agitation boys, keep kicking like a mule,
And always fight courageous, like the Irish for Home Rule.

EVERETT C. BENTON

Candidate for the Republican Nomination for Governor

Everett C. Benton, of Belmont, last year surprised every one familiar with political conditions by entering the contest for the Republican nomination for Governor at the eleventh hour, and almost winning the nomination from a man who had been in the running for that office for more than one year at least. As the result of a brief campaign of a few weeks, he secured nearly 50,000 votes in the primaries and by the hearty support he later gave to his opponent at the polls, won the respect and admiration of all Republicans.

Mr. Benton's strong showing of last year, and his straightforward conduct and loyal support of his successful opponent have made him the logical candidate of the party at this time. Both his supporters of last year and many of those who then favored his opponent feel that he is today the most available man to lead the fight for the party next November.

He was born in Guildhall, Vt., Sept.

25, 1862, and was of humble parentage, coming from revolutionary stock. His inheritance was mental and physical rather than financial.

When he left the village school at the age of sixteen, he had before him the task of making a living and sought employment in the office of the old "Essex County Herald," where he served his apprenticeship and later worked as a journeyman printer. In the Boston Public Library may be found a sample of his work, which consists of "The History of Guildhall, Vermont," which young Benton himself wrote and printed. Ambition urged him into larger fields, and when nineteen he arrived in Boston and secured employment in the insurance office of John C. Paige.

His strict application to the insurance business soon brought its reward, and he became head of one of the departments in the office, and with the reorganization which came on the death of John C. Paige, was admitted to partnership in its then extensive business. Together with his partners he worked untiringly, and his firm is now the largest general insurance office east of New York. Seeking further fields of activity, a few years ago he organized The Massachusetts Fire and Marine Insurance Company.

In addition to his experience in general business he is not without experience in the affairs of the State, having served in the Governor's staff, and upon the Governor's Council. He has always been a fighter in both business and politics, and one of his most memorable battles was in 1904. At that time Governor Foss being an enrolled Republican, was a candidate for Delegate-at-Large to the National Republican Convention which subsequently nominated Col. Roosevelt as President. Colonel Benton displayed in this political fight the same vigorous and uncompromising qualities which have made him such a successful figure in business. He was loyally supported by his many friends, and was successful.

In his home town of Belmont he has offered himself for public service, and has many times been called to act as moderator at town meetings. He was appointed by Governor Guild a member of the Metropolitan Park Commission, and has consistently advocated, and caused to be adopted, rules and regulations permitting a freer use of the parks by the public, and making all the reservations more available to the people.

Some years ago he purchased the Cushing estate at Belmont for a family home and after restoring the gardens, posted at the entrance invitations admitting the public. Through his generosity his estate has been thrown open for benefits in aid of the Boston Floating Hospital. Daughters of Massachusetts, Peabody Home for Crippled Children, Florence Crittenden Home, The Tyler Street Hospital for Babies, South End Day Nursery, the Cambridge Tuberculosis Work, and many similar charities. The first funds for the purpose of installing nurses in the Boston Public schools were raised at a benefit held on Mr. Benton's estate.

Colonel Benton in 1885 married Miss Willena Rogers. He has six children, two of whom are married. Colonel Benton is the most democratic of men,—in fact, it would have been hard for a man of his upbringing to be otherwise. His own early struggles have taught him to sympathize with others situated as he was, and who are striving to rise in the world. His life has been full of intelligent and successful effort to lend a hand, and he has exemplified in business, and in every relation of life, the theory that he prospers most who helps others to rise with him.

His election as Governor guarantees the state a constructive business administration. He will bring to the office of Governor the aggressive qualities and keen insight into business which have marked his entire career and what is perhaps fully as important, he will never forget in his dealings with men to temper justice with human sympathy and broad charity.

TAX RATE.

The Assessors have announced the tax rate for this year to be $17.40. Last year it was $18.00—showing a gain to the taxpayers of 60 cents. In 1908 the rate was 17.40.

The total valuation of the town for this year is $16,327,675, of which $3,538,750 is on personal estate and $12,787,925 on real estate. There is a gain of $205,000 on personal property, $681,100 on building and $319,700 on land, making a total increase in valuation of $1,205,800 over last year.

Of the amounts to be raised by taxation this year the State tax is $28,000, an increase of $7000 over last year; the Metropolitan sewer tax is $13,871.08, an increase of $2094.72 over last year; the Metropolitan park tax is $9728.40, an increase of $755.79 over last year; the County tax is $14,125.59, an increase of $2567.56 over last year; the State highway tax is $98, the same as last year; the Charles River Basin tax is $1341.59, an increase of $269.29 over last year. The only decrease in the amount to be raised this year comes in the town grant, which is $217,977.40, or $1231.21 less than last year.

No Restful Sleep for Seventeen Months!

Dangerous, distressing Kidney and Bladder Trouble removed by Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy.

Mr. C. H. Smith, 320 Washington St., Providence, R. I., writes: "I thank you for the free sample bottle of Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy you sent me. Since taking this I have continued its use and have used three large bottles, with much relief. I had been troubled severely with constipation for years. My case was supposed to be chronic. Now my bowels are regular. I was also a great sufferer from Kidney and Bladder trouble and for seventeen months I had no rest at night, as it was necessary to get up so often, sometimes as often as twice an hour. I am pleased to say that now I do not have to get up more than twice during the night and sometimes only once. Your Favorite Remedy has proved a blessing to me. I feel better all over. The heavy 'loggy' feeling has left me, as well as the bloated eyes. I sincerely thank you for if I had not first tried the sample bottle I would today probably be in the same old condition, with aches and pains and all tired out."

Write Dr. David Kennedy Co., Rondout, N. Y., for free sample and helpful booklet. A standard Kidney, Liver and Blood remedy. 40 years successful. All druggists.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF BROGAN.

The cobbler shop was crowded Sunday afternoon and questions of moment were being thrashed out. It had been decided that the Panama Canal would put a crimp in Japan and settled that fresh water was better than salt; and a verdict on the tariff, currency bill and the "L" strike had been reached. Then Martin Whalen remarked out of a clear sky, "What is this Eugene Noble marriage I read about?"

"Lord save us," laughed Corrigan, "don't you know what this is, Martin? Why whin Foss nominates the husband an' the girrl is confirmed by the Council it's a Eugene wedding of course."

"Yer an ignorant ilahoola, Corrigan," snapped Whalen. "An' it's divil the thing you know about that or anything else."

"Thine for you Martin," said Malachi Brogan. "Corrigan is an all round ignoramus, an' a haythen likewise, besides."

"What are thin Eugene," Martin began again. "Eugene, Martin dear, Eugene," corrected Malachi. "I believe that's the way to say it for I hard Counselor Brady discussin' the subject down in Harrigan's own last Chewdah an' he knows."

"Of course he knows," assented Whalen, glaring at Corrigan. "A man o' larnin' an' infloence. None o' yer street corner blathers that butts his nose an' tongue into sensible people."

Corrigan took his corner without a word and Malachi laying down his pipe and paper said:

"Tis this away, Martin. Eugene marriages is a bran new idayah that kem in with these tight petticoats that looks like pants. Eujanies Counselor Brady was sayin' is a science an' a science as every man knows is a thing that nobody knows what it is but explains it an' there yer. Anyhow, says he, eujanies is for doethors an' childer an' so on; an' an' min of science is sayin' that no one should have a weddin' unless ther sound in wind an' lumb, an' able to vote the democrat ticket an' support a walkin' delegate like Lannigan."

"Ther's some sense in that same," assented Whalen. "Whin a lad wants a girrl," continued Malachi, "round he goes to yer house an' he'll say, 'Martin Whalen, I'm coortin' yer Mary Ann. Here's a doethor's prescription about meself, and you'll take it an' read it an' it will say, 'This is to satisfy that John Joseph O'Leary has a strong chest, two sets o' teeth, an' two legs. He's vaccinated an' free o' corns, spavins, ingrown' nails, an' moral character, an' is fit to marry an' be supported by a hard workin' girrl. I recommend him to widdies, orphans, ould maids an' wimmin with strong arrums an' some visible manes of existence. Thomas Francis Gallagher, M.D., 195 1-4 Division Street. Office hours tin to one, every other Saturday night.'"

"Well! Well! Did yer iver hear the like?" grasped Corrigan. "Thin John Joseph will say," continued Malachi, "that if you stholl up to the injin house and see Captain Moloney he'll show you his diminishin' an' thumb marks, a histry of his fam'ly an' his freckles an' birth marks, an' let you see his photograff. That's half of it. Whin you, in yer joy o' gettin' Mary Ann off yer hands—"

"I'd have you know Brogan," interrupted Whalen, "I'm not thyrin' to turrun my girrl out o' doores." "Aisy, Martin," said Malachi, "Aisy. I'm ownly supposin' it's your Mary Ann. Any girrl is the same. You'll be sayin' 'Take her, O'Leary, an' much good may she do you; but John Joseph will be sayin', Not yet, Mister Whalen, sind Mary Ann up to the doethor to be investigated an' get her sartificate an' up to the injin house to be measured an' marked, an' if she passes whin I'll consider her case eujanically an' take her over to the priest for the remaindher o' he crimmonies."

"Is it coddin' us yar, Malachi?" said Whalen, feebly. "D'y'e mane to say that Mary Ann would be examined like a horse an' get a sartificate like a policeman, before she could be married?"

"That's it, Martin," replied Malachi, smiling. "Min an' girrls must be gettin' a civil service examination if they want to get married whin eujanies is the law."

"Well," said Whalen truculently, "any blaggard that comes round my house with a doethor to coort my Mary Ann will get his back broken. You an' yer eujanies! A doethor no less! Lave them thry it, bad cess to them. Fine times indade whin a dacent girrl has to be sartified by some young snip down from the dispensary. What are we comin' to? The first bucko that comes round, I'll eujanies him be breakin' his jaw. That's what I'll do begob."

"Martin," added Malachi, after a pause, "I'll take a day off meself to help you to do a good job on him."

This is only a partial list of what has been done in the suffrage states during the past few months; but can any equal number of unenfranchised states show as good a record?

The California Legislature before adjournment passed several other measures that the women wanted, in addition to those already mentioned. The list now includes not only the red-light bill and joint guardianship and the restoration of suffrage to American women who have married foreigners, but also mothers' pensions, the raising of the age of protection for girls from 16 to 18, the establishment of a State Industrial School for girls and the widening of the eight-hour law so as to make it apply to more women and girls, and to boys under 18.

"The passage of the new red-light law is proof that the women of California have decided to let in a little light and air on civic life," said Dr. Charles F. Aked of San Francisco, in his midweekly lecture. Touching on the Weller recall, he added that "Judge Weller had such a view of his duties as made it undesirable that he should hold a judicial position."

WHAT CITY CHILDREN LACK.

That the home and especially the city home, is in grave danger is the contention of Margaret Woodward in a strong article in the August issue of Suburban Life—The Country Magazine. In discussing the home life of the average city child she says:

"There is little home companionship for the city bred child. Father's business calls him down town daily. With the lightening of manual labor, mother finds time to engage in social, charitable, and literary work outside her home. Oftentimes her children and her home become objects of secondary importance. The younger children are left in charge of irresponsible nursemaids and the older ones never expect to find either parent when they come home from school. A loss of sympathy grows out of this loss of companionship. The children select their friends and confidants outside the home circle. Both parents are usually out evenings. Being members of clubs, their time is largely divided between these functions and theatre parties."

THE WORD HELL.

A Little Book That Contains Some Startling Information.

A little book selling at only five cents, postpaid, is having a very wide circulation—running up into the millions. It contains some very startling information respecting the meaning of the word Hell. It claims to demonstrate, both from the Hebrew and the Greek of our Bible, that Hell is NOT a place of eternal torment, but merely another name for the TOMB, the GRAVE, the STATE OF DEATH. It affects to show that man was not redeemed from a far-off place of eternal torture, but quotes the Scriptures proving that he was REDEEMED from the GRAVE at the cost of his Redeemer's LIFE and that the Scriptural Hope, both for the Church and the World, is a resurrection hope based upon the death and resurrection of Jesus. The book is certainly worth the reading. The information it furnishes is certainly valuable, far beyond its trifling cost. Order it at once from the Bible and Tract Society, 17 Elcks Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

WHAT, WHEN AND HOW TO EAT

Man Has Advanced Along All Lines Except In Science of Eating.

By EUGENE CHRISTIAN, F. S. D.

[Copyright, 1913, by American Press Association.]

MAN begins his struggle with the food question a few hours after his birth and continues until a few hours before his death. It is the one thing that engages most of his attention. It is, after all, the dominant thing in life.

He could live as his anthropoidal ancestors did—entirely without clothes or houses—but food he must have. He is in active contact with the food question about one-eighth of his entire life.

If any intelligent man should take three lessons a day from a competent teacher in any of the arts or sciences for thirty, forty or fifty years he would no doubt be master of his chosen profession, especially if his teacher could not err—always taught him the truth.

Man eats three meals a day, or about 1,000 meals during the year. Every meal is or should be a lesson, a sort of clinic, and Nature, his great teacher, never makes a mistake. Every symptom she gives to him is a truthful one. She speaks in a language that never deceives him, and yet at the close of a life, after eating three meals a day for forty, fifty, sixty or seventy years, the average man acknowledges defeat and declares that he knows nothing about feeding his body, and even if he does not acknowledge defeat disease is his accuser.

Disease Is Not Normal.

The natural man is a healthy man. It is disease that has to be "caught," and most people chase it for years before Mother Nature will permit them to possess it.

Nature's laws are so simple, especially that of nutrition, that most people have entirely overlooked them.

The human body is composed of fifteen well defined chemical elements. A normal body weighing 150 pounds contains these elements in about the following proportions:

	Pounds.	Ounces.	Grains.
Oxygen	35	12	..
Carbon	30
Hydrogen	14
Nitrogen	2	14	..
Calcium	2	..	150
Phosphorus	1	..	270
Sulphur	..	2	150
Sodium	..	2	250
Chlorine	..	2	250
Fluorine	250
Potassium	340
Magnesium	150
Iron	115
Silicon	90
Manganese	90

Man could subsist indefinitely upon as few as six different articles of food, and, taken in certain proportions, he could with them keep his diet thoroughly balanced at all seasons of the year.

Perfect Health Is Natural.

If these natural foods were prepared in a simple way and the taste trained to accept them they would appeal to the highest sense of hunger and eating would be far more enjoyable and the human body would give back the natural result, which is perfect health, but most everything man does to his food injures it.

I have before me a bill of fare sent by the proprietor of one of the large eastern hotels in order to show me his elaborate offering to the public. It is in booklet form and contains sixteen pages. There are fewer than half a dozen things on this entire menu that are really good food. About half of the things, however, were originally good, but they have been roasted, toasted, oiled, boiled, mixed, fried, soured, sweetened, chopped, mashed, hashed, canned and fermented until they are a veritable olla podrida of dietic confusion.

Food, air and exercise are equally important. In fact, all forms of inanimate life are governed largely by these laws. The roots of plants and trees take in nutrition from the soil while the leaves and buds take in oxygen from the air and throw off carbon dioxide the same as the human lungs, and the more the plant or tree is cultivated, exposed to the sunshine and blown about by the wind the more it will grow and the higher it will develop.

Curative Feeding.

Man has drifted along for many thousand years without giving any scientific attention whatever to his eating. He has selected his food and drink largely according to his appetite, and this has very often become warped and perverted by bad habits. As an illustration, from the standpoint of the scientist, all stimulating and sedative articles, such as liquor, beer, tea, coffee, tobacco and many drugs, are things that fear down instead of build up human tissue. Hence, from a scientific viewpoint, the man who takes these things is acting as foolishly as the architect who would put one crew of men to constructing a building and another smaller crew to tearing it down.

We have, however, a great deal of disease to contend with caused by man's bad habits and in order to deal with this subject scientifically it brings us directly into the question of curative feeding—that is, selecting, combining and proportioning food so as to remove the causes of disease. This subject, however, will be discussed more thoroughly in the latter part of this series. What I desire now is to point out the results of man's bad habits or lack of attention and obedience to the fundamental laws above named.

Nearly all animals on this globe except man live under normal conditions about eight times their respective periods of maturity. A horse, dog or cow that will obtain its growth in four years will live under ordinary conditions about thirty-two years. This rule applies especially to all anthropoidal and quadruped specimens.

Life Needlessly Shortened.

Man matures or gets his growth at about twenty-four years. Measured, therefore, by the scale governing the lives of all other animals, he ought to live eight times twenty-four, or about 200 years; but, reckoning from the age of six, which takes him out of the infant class, man dies at a fraction over thirty-eight years of age, which is about one-fifth his natural period of life, while if we calculate from his birth his period of existence in all civilized countries is brought down to less than thirty-two years.

Man drinks the same water, lives under the same sunshine as his brother animals, but differs from them mainly in his food, air and exercise, the three fundamental laws above referred to. It is fair to assume that man is no exception to the general laws governing all other animals—that is to say, if he did not commit some very grave errors he would live his normal period of years, as perhaps did his ancient ancestors.

Man has greatly increased the productivity of labor by invention and the productivity of the soil by the science of agriculture. He has almost conquered the air and carried the transportation of intelligence (talking through the air) to its limit, but he has forgotten himself. In fact, just to the extent that he has progressed in all the other sciences he has retrogressed in the science of preserving his own health.

Where Science Has Failed.

Man is entitled by inheritance to live 200 years. Science therefore can boast only when it has carried him beyond this period. If he had given as much attention to the science of health as he has to that of mechanics and the accumulation of wealth there is every reason to believe that he could have doubled his present period of life or perhaps brought it up to or beyond the 200 year mark.

The difference between youth and age is, in fact, only a chemical difference. The differences between the stiff and flexible cartilage, the hard and soft artery, the normal and irritated nerve, the rich hemoglobin (red) and thin blood, the black and white hair, are only chemical differences. They represent deposits, things taken into the body which in some way the body could not cast out.

If man had studied his construction and maintenance and made of them a true science these chemical differences could have been known and their causes removed, and man would perhaps today be in possession of his birthright of 200 years. If he had carried the science of physiological chemistry and food chemistry to the same degree of development that he has carried industrial chemistry no doubt he would be able to prolong his life even beyond the 200 year mark.

Vegetable Diet Ideal.

But his eating has been haphazard. The most important thing in life has been guessed at. Is it any wonder, therefore, that he is sick, weak, has gas fermentation, nervousness, indigestion, constipation, insomnia, backache, headache, gout, rheumatism, is too fat or too thin? Is it any wonder he is only 51 per cent efficient and lives only an average of thirty-eight years when he guesses at the material that makes his blood, bone and brain? All of this has changed hunger into appetite and health into disease.

All the chemical elements composing the human body can be found in the vegetable world in their best and purest form. It requires, therefore, but little knowledge to enable man to select his food from articles that will supply all these elements in approximately the right proportions, but to this important matter man gives practically no thought.

It is the boast of many a housewife who has a good cook that she does not know what is coming on her table. Feeding the family, therefore, is a system of thoughtless guesswork. Building the temple divine, the heritage of a million years of evolution, making the blood that feeds the little engine in our breast that pumps over twenty tons of blood above its own level every day, is left to mere chance, is left to the judgment of one who knows absolutely nothing about the chemistry or needs of the body or the chemistry of the material that builds up that wonderful structure.

Little Care Selecting Food.

No intelligent mother would give her child or husband medicine compounded by a druggist that knew nothing whatever about the chemistry and action of drugs, yet she is putting a prescription of food upon her table three times a day without any knowledge whatever of the chemistry of food or the nutritive demands of her family.

These are a few of the things that justify thoughtful people in the conclusion that the period of human life is only about one-fifth of what it should be. These are also some of the things that justify the calculation that about 90 per cent of all disease originates in the stomach and that incorrect eating is one of the principal causes of man's shortened period of life.

There is considerable talk among some of the Democrats of Medford of running Representative Joseph Parker of Woburn as the Democratic nominee for Senator against the present Senator Wilton B. Fay a Republican who announced his candidacy for reelection Sunday.

A Medford correspondent says: The Progressive Party City Committee Tuesday evening adopted unanimously a resolution that "National party lines have no logical connection with county issues, and whenever the public interest calls for a change in the administration of county affairs the members of the Progressive party may, and should co-operate with the members of the other political parties in the nomination of independent candidates for county officers and in furthering their election through a nonpartisan citizens' committee." The resolution is aimed at the alleged "Middlesex County ring" according to the statement of members of the committee, who would unite with the Democrats and Republicans in a nonpartisan or independent movement. A copy of the resolution will be sent to the Middlesex County Progressive and the State Progressive Committees. Announcement was made that Prof. Charles Zuehl of Winchester, the Progressive candidate for Senator in the 6th Middlesex District last year will not be able to accept a renomination this year. The Progressive Senatorial District Committee, on which Sec. Samuel Elder and Harold A. A. Meyer represent Medford, will meet next week to secure a candidate for the nomination. James J. Fitzgerald of Winchester, the Progressive candidate in the 27th Middlesex District last year, will not be a candidate this year. A Medford professional man is understood to be a candidate, and papers will be taken out for him next week.

Mr. Edward O'Brien of the High School staff, is enjoying his annual vacation at Lake Pearl, Wrentham.

The friends of Mrs. Edward Fleming of Pond street will be pleased to know that she has returned from Hillsboro, N. H., where she spent three weeks accompanied by her sister, Miss Annie Ryall of New Jersey, much improved in her health.

Frederico Gennani, who was badly burned in the recent explosion at North Winchester, when the plant of the New England Firework Co., blew up, was taken from the Winchester Hospital to his home on Prince street in the North End, Boston, Monday. It is thought that he will recover.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Ames of Cabot street have returned from a stay at Belgrade Lakes, Me.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold K. Barrows have returned from Lake Dunmore, Vt., where they spent the month of July.

Miss Lillian Brasseur of New Hampshire, is visiting her grandmother Mrs. Mulrenan, of Holland street.

The switch and frog at the west side of the railroad crossing on the electric car lines was replaced this week.

Hon. S. W. McCall was a caller on Gov. F. S. Tuesday. The visit is said to have no political significance.

George A. Barron returned this week from Rochester, N. Y., where he had been in attendance at the annual convention of the American Optical Association. Mr. Barron says the convention was successful beyond his expectations, and that during the convention there were many addresses and clinics of an advanced educational nature, dealing almost entirely with modern methods of eye examinations made without the use of drugs. This means the deduction of the work to a more exact science. He also brings back with him many new ideas of the latest improvements in eyeglasses and spectacle mountings and is especially enthusiastic over the improvements in Toric lenses. Mr. Barron has attended many of these conventions and says that he cannot help but notice the growing tendency of those who attend to study eye work and the fitting of glasses from the more scientific and professional standpoint.

There is a very dark pocket in the square that needs brightening up. It is at the corner of Main and Park streets, and last Wednesday night a person standing at Abare's drug store and looking across the square could not penetrate the gloom. Carriages are continually going in and out of Park street and at times it seems as if it must be difficult for automobilists to see them.

Miss Mary King of Allston, is visiting her aunt, Mrs. P. Quill of Holland street.

Capt. P. A. Nickerson has returned from a stay at Fortunes Rocks, Me.

Automobile Insurance

An automobile accident occurred in Winchester Square a short time ago when a train collided with a motor car at the crossing. The car was badly damaged.

Are all of the automobile owners in town protected by an insurance policy bearing a collision clause? Loss or damage to a motor car from collision with movable and immovable objects is more common than loss from fire.

If you have not this protection see us at once.

Telephone users have noticed that since Thursday, the telephone operators have been using a new form of response when asking for the number with which the calling party desires to speak. The old way has been to put the query "Number?" with a rising inflection. The new form is "Number, please?" This operating feature has been adopted by the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company beginning on the first of August. The two-word query will undoubtedly be more pleasing to the ear, and the polite word "please" to the questioning "Number?" will give a fresh touch of courtesy to the service to which the public will respond with a similar spirit.

NEW CHURCH BUILDING.

First Church of Christ, Scientist, to Have New Home.

The first Church of Christ, Scientist, is to have a church home of its own, if the plans go through. An option has been given on the estate of former Postmaster Richardson, at the corner of Washington street and the Parkway to the Society, and Mr. Richardson and family will have until Oct. 1st to vacate the house now on the lot.

This is one of the best locations in town for a semi-public building. Fronting the Parkway side of the lot is the handsome High School building, while in the rear is the Mill Pond, to be made beautiful by the town in a few years, so that the location will be ideal for such a building as the local church will erect.

For some years the church has occupied the old Episcopal church building on Mt. Vernon street, and it has grown and prospered to such an extent that the members have felt for some time that they should have a church home of their own.

MRS. EDWARD L. BALDWIN.

Mrs. Martha F. Baldwin, wife of Mr. Edward L. Baldwin of Lakeview road, died at her home yesterday forenoon after an illness of a number of weeks. She was 72 years of age.

Mrs. Baldwin leaves her husband, one daughter, Mrs. Fred N. Kerr, and a sister, Mrs. George E. Dustin of Somerville.

She was the daughter of Rev. and Mrs. George W. Adams, being born in Hillsboro, N. H. For the past sixteen years she had made her home with her husband in this town. Her death was due to infirmities of her advanced age.

The funeral services will be held from the residence, No. 1 Lakeview road, this Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Rev. Cyrus Richardson, a former pastor, will officiate. The burial will be in Wildwood cemetery. Please omit flowers.

TRADER'S DAY OUTING
WEDNESDAY.

The outing at Nahant was enjoyed by a good majority of the clerks and merchants. The trip was made by trolley which left the square at 8:30 a. m., reaching Nahant about 10:30. Everyone immediately started for the ball field for the ball game, the first event of the day. The game was between the East and West side clerks, the latter winning by a score of 9 to 3.

After the game everyone enjoyed a good fish dinner and then the afternoon sports were started which consisted of a 100 dash for single men, Henry Maguire winning first prize and Eben Baker second; 100 yard dash for married men in which James Dougall won first prize and F. H. Higgins second.

Three legged race was won by T. J. O'Laughlin and Henry Maguire for first prize, and F. H. Higgins and Albert Sellers second.

Ball throwing contest for ladies, won by Miss A. Sullivan first and Elinor Drew second.

Running broad jump, won by James Rogers first and T. J. O'Laughlin second.

After the sports were over the balance of the day was enjoyed in various ways, the car leaving at seven o'clock for the return trip.

No accident occurred to mar the day and everyone seemed to enjoy the outing in every way.

Mrs. E. W. Russell and her two daughters, Martha and Esther, returned Monday from Old Orchard, where they have been summering.

SELECTMEN'S MEETING.

Matters Passed Upon by the Board Monday Evening.

The board met at 7:30 p. m., all present.

Bernard F. Matthews, nominated July 26 to serve the unexpired term of James H. Roach as registrar of voters to April 30, 1914, was elected. A letter was received from J. Frank Davis, Secretary Democratic Town Committee, recommending Mr. Matthews for the position in behalf of the Committee.

Thomas J. Maher, 7 Florence street, was appointed special police officer to serve until March 31, 1914.

Application was received from James Nichols, 114 Morrison avenue Somerville, for a license as hawker and pedler, and granted subject to the payment of the fee of $10.

Notice was received and filed from the State Board of Conciliation and Arbitration referring to the statutes of 1909, Chapter 514, Section 11 which reads:

"If it appears to the Mayor of a city or to the selectmen of a town that a strike or lockout described in this section is seriously threatened or actually occurs, he or they shall at once give notice to the State Board (of Conciliation and Arbitration) and stating that the strike or lockout to which the law relates is one which contemplates a business that employs at last twenty-five persons in the same general line, and requesting in addition to the notice required by the statutes a concise statement of the circumstances with the names of the parties and of their agents or spokesmen so far as known. The Clerk was instructed to notify the Chief of Police of the foregoing."

A letter was received asking permission to allow the Italian residents to hold a parade on August 15, same to begin at 2:30 p. m. The permission was granted subject to the supervision of the Chief of Police, the route to be as specified in petition along Mt. Vernon and Washington streets from the old Knights of Columbus Hall to the Italian quarter of the Town, or as designated by the Chief of Police.

A letter was received from Levi S. Gould, Chairman of the Board of County Commissioners, stating that the County would be willing to waive all differences of opinion of the matter of oiling Pond street and would bear one-quarter of the expense of oiling with heavy oil provided it could be done soon; that it was the opinion of their Engineer who looked at the road a few days ago that it would be well to apply the heavier oil soon as the road showed signs of unraveling; and that the Commissioners would prefer not to let it go over until next year. The matter was referred to the Committee on Ways and Bridges.

The committee on Ways and Bridges reported conditions of proposed layout of tar concrete sidewalks on Harvard, Washington, and Irving streets, and outlining in general proposed method of laying the sidewalks which was agreed to. Question was raised as to whether the corner curbs would be received by the Town in time for the contractor to begin work as ordered August 11, and it was left to the Highway Committee to ascertain all the facts and if necessary postpone the beginning of the work and notify the contractor.

In the matter of request received July 28th in regard to connecting the new granolithic with the resurfaced sidewalk on Central street, and the installation of a corner curbing at Central and Norwood streets, the Highway Committee reported that a proper connection between the concrete and granolithic sidewalk would be made when contractor for concrete was doing his work, and recommended that the curb for the corner of Norwood and Central streets be included in the appropriation for next year. The report was accepted.

On the request received July 28 for a sidewalk in front of 408 Main street to be rebuilt, the Committee on Highways reported that the Town Engineer had been asked to furnish the cost of a granolithic sidewalk at this location to extend from the southerly line of the driveway to the southerly line of the lot. The report was accepted.

Protest was received from adjacent property owners against the proposed location of a watering trough on Cambridge street.

On the application presented July 7 for permission to connect with the drain on Hancock street, the Town Engineer reported and permission was granted to make the desired connection, the work to be done under the supervision of the Town Engineer.

On the complaint presented July 21, reported on by the Town Engineer July 28, the Committee on Ways and Bridges reported recommending that a gutter be constructed this year from the catch basin at the foot of the hill on the northwesterly side of High street to a short distance above the driveway to Mr. Sanborn's residence, and that plans of the gutter on both sides of the street be included in the appropriation for next year. The report of the committee was accepted and the recommendations adopted, and the Superintendent of streets was instructed to take up the work.

On the petition presented July 28 for a granite curbing at the northerly corner of Bridge and Elm streets, the Committee on Ways and Bridges recommended that the curbing be included in the appropriation to be asked for 1914. Report accepted.

On the petition received July 28 for the construction of granolithic curbing on the southerly side of Lakeview Road, an estimate was received from the Town Engineer and ordered transmitted to the petitioners with the information that the Selectmen had no funds to pay any portion of the cost of this work, and that if the abutters desired to have it done at their own expense the Selectmen would attend to the construction.

A petition was received for permission to lay a granolithic entrance across the loam space to the garage, 7 Lakeview road, and granted subject to the usual conditions.

A complaint was received from Prince avenue relating to the condition of that street and referred to the Committee on Ways and Bridges.

A suggestion was made that in connection with the work on Wedgmore Pond the State Commission be asked to include a recommendation in their next annual report for an appropriation for dredging Wedgmore Pond and the stream leading to it. The Clerk was instructed to place the matter on the docket for further consideration.

Mr. Jewett reported that the Engineer of the Sewer Commission had informed him that they intended crossing Bacon street with a tunnel instead of with an open trench.

Notice was received from the Edison Electric Illuminating Company of Boston that the bills for shifting incandescent and other lights had been abated.

Adjourned at 11:10 p. m.
Frank R. Miller,
Clerk of the Board.

AUTO WRECKED ON FOREST STREET.

With a woman at the steering wheel, an automobile containing three women and two men ran amuck on Forest street Tuesday afternoon, collided with the steam roller, and finally brought up against a tree.

Mrs. Minnie Fisher, 64 West Rutland square, who was driving, is at her home seriously injured. The auto was badly wrecked. It is owned by E. L. Gillett, 437 Broadway, Somerville.

The party, besides Mrs. Fisher, consisted of Mr. and Mrs. Peter H. Babin, 15 Whitney park, Mattapan, and Mr. and Mrs. T. F. Marshall, 437 Broadway, Somerville. Mrs. Marshall is the daughter of Mr. Gillett, Mrs. Fisher is a friend of the family and Babin is the chauffeur.

While going towards Winchester on Forest street about 4 o'clock Mrs. Fisher, who has been anxious to learn to run the car, announced her desire to try her skill at running the automobile. So the party changed about in the auto, with Mrs. Fisher at the wheel and Babin beside her. In the rear seat was Mrs. Babin, together with Mr. and Mrs. Marshall.

Everything went along smoothly until at a place where the street was being repaired the party came upon a sprinkling cart and a steam roller. Mrs. Fisher attempted to slow down and turn out for the obstructions, when it is thought she must have used the accelerator by mistake. Instead of slowing down, the big auto suddenly shot forward at a terrific speed. Narrowly missing the watering cart, the machine just barely grazed the steam roller and shot up an embankment only stopping when it came in contact with a large tree.

Mrs. Fisher was hurled with terrific force against the wheel of the steering gear and it was feared her breast bone was broken.

Mr. Babin, who was sitting by her side, was hurled from his seat with terrific force. He landed against a tree, fracturing his knee.

The other three passengers were also thrown out and severely shaken up.

Mrs. J. C. Folts and Miss Gladys M. Folts are summering in the Berkshires.

THE WINCHESTER HOSPITAL.

It's Needs Demand Additional Accommodations for Patients.

About two years ago the Winchester Visiting Nurse Association, aided by philanthropic citizens, established the Winchester Hospital. It was started as an experiment, with some misgivings on the part of the less sanguine supporters. Some questioned the community's need of a hospital, and doubted the wisdom of the undertaking. The pros and cons were heard at length and then the pioneers went ahead with the work, and undaunted, carried the project through.

The results have justified their labors. The hospital is no longer an experiment but a demonstrated success. Now we ask "how did we get along without it?"

During the last month the hospital has been taxed beyond its capacity. With accommodations for fourteen, it has cared for as many as twenty-five at one time, patients occupying every room in the house, including the emergency and etherizing rooms. When everything was full but the operating room a nurse gave up her bed and room to accommodate one more. Besides others there were seven maternity cases and six accident cases in the hospital at one time. Others applied for rooms and treatment, but were turned away, among them a woman injured in an accident, who had to be taken to a hospital in an adjoining town, where she died.

The Winchester Hospital has made a good name for itself. Other hospitals and out-of-town physicians speak well of it. Patients in many instances prefer it to other hospitals. The nurses are faithful, conscientious, kind and competent, and to them, in large measure, is due the superior tone and character of the institution. The hospital has been a blessing to the physicians as well as to the people of Winchester.

More frequent meetings and more consultations have contributed a keener interest in the battle with disease. This is one of the most important benefits conferred upon any community by a good hospital. Winchester needs and can afford a maternity department or separate maternity building of twenty beds and a general hospital of thirty or thirty-five beds would meet the demands of the present and near future. The pioneers have blazed the trail, who will go to aid them? There is, there can be, no nobler charity. A gift to the hospital is a gift to humanity, irrespective of creed, color or country. It was an American nurse who gave her bed two weeks ago to a wounded Italian, and she said to me "I am glad we had a place for him."

It is better to give than to receive. The greatest good comes of doing good.

D. C. DENNETT,
7 Washington Street.

COLGATE-PULLMAN.

The wedding of Mr. William Homer Colgate of this town and Miss Evelyn Marguerite Pullman, daughter of Mrs. John N. Macleod, of Newton Center, took place on Aug. 2nd at the home of the bride's mother. The ceremony was performed at three o'clock by Rev. Parkinson, pastor of the Newton Methodist church. The bride was gown in a travelling suit of blue broadcloth. The couple were unattended.

A reception followed the ceremony, which was largely attended by friends of the bride and groom. The music was furnished by Miss Norma Cardy of Foxcroft road, piano, and Miss Gladys Colgate, violin, the latter a cousin of the groom. The residence was decorated for the occasion with palms and roses.

Many handsome gifts were received by Mr. and Mrs. Colgate, including a china breakfast set, a copy of the 14th century ware, which was given by Mr. Colgate's business associates.

MISS MARY MCGOVERN.

Miss Mary McGovern of Mystic avenue died yesterday afternoon. She was 73 years old and was a sister of Mrs. Martin Gillispie. The cause of her death was a general break-down.

The funeral services will be held at St. Mary's church Sunday at 2 p. m.

Mrs. Alexander Livingstone and children of Lebanon street have returned from several weeks stay at Hull.

GONE TO WHEAT FIELDS OF NORTHWEST.

A party of Winchester men left this week under the guidance of Henry J. Lyons, for the wheat fields of the Northwest. They will locate in Manitoba. Mr. Lyons has already spent several years in that region and is greatly attracted by its vast possibilities.

Included in the party are Michael Foley, Bernard Johnston, Bartlett Connolly, John Sullivan and George Gibson.

HIRAM FOLSOM STRUCK BY AUTO.

Mr. Hiram Folsom, a well known resident of this town, was struck and badly injured by an automobile on Main street Monday morning. The accident occurred in front of the Whitney mill building.

Mr. Folsom was struck a glancing blow and thrown to the street. One ear was almost torn off and he received a cut seven inches long on the side of his head, besides numerous body bruises and cuts. He was immediately taken to the Winchester Hospital and his condition is serious.

According to reports Mr. Folsom started to cross the street and had reached the car track in the center. An automobile owned by James Littlefield of Woburn, driven by his chauffeur, Andrew Anderson, and containing Mrs. Littlefield, a woman friend and two children, came along the street. The car is reported to have been traveling slowly. Just as it reached the point where Mr. Folsom was he turned and stepped directly into it, being hit a glancing blow. Mr. Folsom is partially blind and is rather feeble in his movements, and evidently thought that he was in the path of the car when he turned back.

He was taken to his home nearby and attended by Dr. Dennett and Dr. Sheehy, who ordered his removal to the Hospital.

AUTO STRUCK POLE.

As Mr. F. H. Mannix of Washington street, Boston, attempted to turn his touring car around on Mt. Vernon street in front of the STAR office Sunday afternoon he swung too wide and struck the big telegraph pole in front of the store. The pole was not more than dented a little, but the front of the auto was quite badly wrecked. The car was taken in charge by a local garage.

AN APPRECIATED GIFT.

Mr. P. J. Johnson, driver of one of the Horn Pond Co. ice wagons, well known to almost every Winchester housewife, has a warm spot in his heart these days for Mrs. Charles G. McCawley of Highland avenue. This benevolent lady has presented him with a fine pair of leather fly nets for his team of horses, which are much appreciated.

VISITING IN CALIFORNIA.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph C. Adams of Dix street are in California, visiting their two sons, Prof. Walter H. Adams and Roy C. Adams. Mr. Walter H. Adams is professor of mechanical engineering at the Throop Polytechnical Institute.

Newsy Paragraphs.

If President-emeritus Eliot believes as he says, that it is not for the interests of a community to have women teach longer than five years, how long does he think women ought to work in business offices?—[Somerville Journal.]

Mr. Henry C. Nickerson and family, who are touring through the White Mountains, are stopping at the Profile House for a few days.

Among the Winchester Country Club golfers who competed in the open amateur tournament of the Woodland G. C. Saturday, were the following:

A. P. Smith.	96	21	75
R. S. Smith.	98	13	76
P. W. Dunbar.	95	13	82

Mrs. Neil Doherty and daughters of Main street are at their cottage at Salisbury Beach for this month.

The STAR received a letter from Marcello Bonino of Genova Tasso, Italy, this week. Mr. Bonino is well remembered by many Winchester people as the former proprietor of the fruit store on Mt. Vernon street. He has been in Italy now for a number of years, but expects to return to Winchester again sometime in the future. He says: "I get the STAR every week regular, and I couldn't go without it."

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph T. Clark and son Richard returned this week from Manomet, where they spent the month of July.

Miss L. J. Sanderson has returned from a month's stay at North East Harbor, Maine.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Goff have returned from a stay at Winthrop.

AUTO RAN AWAY.

The Maxwell automobile delivery car of Blaisdell's Market met with a peculiar accident Tuesday noon when it ran down Windsor road, across Highland avenue and into the residence of Mr. Hollis L. Riddle. The car was being driven down the hill of Windsor road, by the residence of Mr. Horatio C. Rohman to Highland avenue. According to reports the driver had his foot caught beneath the pedals and was unable to work the transmission. He found that he could not stop the auto and jumped out. The auto ran down the hill, across Highland avenue, through the grounds of the residence on the opposite side, carrying with it a grape arbor, and into the front of Mr. Riddle's house. It went between two trees which gave just enough room for it to pass, then the length of a dahlia bed, through the grape arbor, dropped over a four foot embankment, took a turn to the right to avoid another tree, and came to rest at the piazza of the Riddle house.

The damage done was very slight. Several slats were broken out of the piazza, both headlights on the auto and its cranking apparatus were broken and the grape vine ruined. The contents of the auto were hardly damaged, the loss being confined almost wholly to eggs.

OAKLAND

Model 42 Oakland

MODEL 42 five-passenger touring car is bound to create a deep impression before the season is far advanced. It embodies sound engineering principles and possesses enough meritorious innovations to distinguish it from the common type of touring car. The body has a number of daring lines which stamp it as an individual design, and the aluminum steps, shroud and V-shaped radiator give the car a dashing appearance. Oaklands are made in four and six cylinder types—$1000 to $3000—four, five and seven passenger touring cars, limousines, coupes and roadsters.

TOO MUCH TAX.

Everett Sawyer, chairman of the assessors was in Boston, last week, in consultation with the state tax commissioners and with men from the eastern part of the state interested in taxation. Some of the towns and cities are indignant at the increase in tax as proclaimed this year by the state. Athol has over $4000 more to pay this year in state taxes, over last. It is said that the town of Arlington is to enter a protest. According to Mr. Sawyer the state tax commissioner receives from the corporations sworn statements as to their valuation, and these statements differ to a large extent from the lists which the local assessors submit. The state men take the lists rendered by the corporations and subtract from them the amount which the corporations are taxed for by the local assessors, and add the difference to the total valuation of the town. The difference between the valuation of corporations as declared by the Athol assessors and the reports submitted the state by the manufacturing concerns is due to the assessors figuring the valuation on the intrinsic value of property. For instance, a machine in a factory may have cost several thousands of dollars to develop, by experimenting on it to perfect it. This machine has only an intrinsic value, however, as it becomes a pattern, and other machines similar can be turned out at small cost.—[Athol Chronicle.]

EXAMINATION OF ROYAL ARCANUM.

The insurance department results of an examination of the Royal Arcanum begun in December which covers the year of 1912, have been announced. The examination was an exhaustive one by experts of the Massachusetts and Connecticut insurance departments.

The figures show that the surplus of the order has diminished each year since 1905, when the rates were last revised, and the losses exceeded the receipts in 1910, '11 and '12. As a result of this the emergency fund has had to be drawn on the past two years to meet the obligations of the order in death benefits.

It also developed that the Royal Arcanum rates are lower than the rates approved by the National Fraternal Congress, which computed a scale which they considered a sound working basis for fraternal orders. Their death rate is also below the standard of the congress.

In conclusion the report shows that it is clear the Royal Arcanum was not justified in making the concession to members of advanced ages which was done in 1905. During that period the order has paid out to members of 60 and over a great deal more than it received from them.

WILL USE SUPERHEATERS.

The New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad has decided to equip all of its locomotives with the superheater device. The locomotives will be overhauled at the rate of five a month. The work will cost in the neighborhood of $1,000,000.

The use of superheated steam in locomotives is a development practically of the last few years. Superheated steam is steam having extra heat, part of which may be lost without causing condensation. While it long ago was recognized that the use of superheated steam would mean a great saving in the cost of maintenance of locomotives, it was only within a few years that the mechanism was so perfected that it could be called commercially successful. The fifty new Pacific type locomotives just acquired by the New Haven and known as the 1300 series are all superheaters.

About 350 locomotives in all will be equipped with this device. The large outlay required by this work is justified by the fact that while the hauling capacity of a locomotive is increased about 20 per cent., there is at the same time a saving effected of 20 per cent. in coal and 25 per cent. in water.

The work of overhauling the locomotives of the New Haven system will be done at the Readville, Mass., shops.

OFFICER SAVED LAD FROM DROWNING.

The second escape from drowning in Upper Mystic Lake, Medford, within three days occurred late Thursday afternoon of last week, when Edward Cannon, 12 years old, of 143 Montvale avenue, Woburn, sank from sight within a few feet of several companions without a cry. Only by the fact that Officer Grogan of the Metropolitan police noticed bubbles rising to the surface where he had seen a boy a moment before did he know that the lad had gone down.

The boy finally was pulled out by the officer, who hurried to the spot in a rowboat. As the boy rose to the surface he was grasped by the hair. When carried to the shore Cannon was unconscious and it took the officer an hour to revive him.

NURSERY BLANKET.

LEARNING TO SWIM.

This is the season of drowning accidents. The deaths from this cause may exceed the fatalities of football or the deadly July 4 twenty or a hundred times. Commission and legislators discuss the former evils. But agitation on the drowning question is confined to occasional newspaper editorials.

It seems to take death in the mass to arouse popular interest. Death on the installment plan, in isolated and separate cases, though more frequent, attracts less attention.

The danger of death in the water is not from the occasional horrors like the Titanic disaster. It is in ten thousand summer resorts and a million bathing haunts, where young people flirt with the elemental treachery of water.

The summer time scatters people far from their accustomed scenes. It brings into resorts that have water sports a host of persons who know no more about boats than about an aeroplane. Having learned to swim a few strokes, they swim across the river. They paddle out in a canoe, which they regard as a conservative craft, worthy of the confidence one would place in a heavily ballasted row boat.

Steering a sail boat is usually the next exploit. As it floats at the wharf it looks as secure as a ferry boat. But feel what a Titanic leverage a stiff breeze will have on your spreading sail. Against it you have merely the fluid pressure of the water on the keel and sides. The innumerable overturns record how, in the language of an old salt, "them that know nothin' fear nothin'."

It seems almost useless to preach caution to people who are temperamentally sanguine. But the father who, at home or in summer haunts, can teach his young folks how to swim, very considerably increases the chance that he will have the continued joy of their companionship.

Suffered Awful Pains From Stomach Trouble

Sick Three Months—Could Eat Nothing—Only Relief Was Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy.

Read what Mrs. May T. Bartlett, of Salem, Mass., says in a recent letter: "I shall never be without Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy again. When I wrote for a sample bottle I was suffering badly with my stomach and from constipation. I could eat hardly anything and I would have awful pains. I was down sick for three months that summer and could take nothing but gruel and beef tea. I am now on my second bottle of Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy. My stomach is better, my bowels move freely. I used to have severe headaches but do not now. Not only has it helped me, but four of my friends who have been troubled with constipation are using it and have been benefited."

Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy has had 40 years of wonderful success in kidney, liver and blood troubles. A physician's prescription, formerly used in his large private practice, and now prepared for general use. Write to-day for free sample and booklet of valuable information. Many people who a few years ago thought that they could not afford to own a horse, now have an automobile.

Four automobile accidents on the first three days of the week are reminders that extreme care is the only guarantee of safety while operating a machine.

The sale of cigarettes has increased 20 per cent. during the last six months, and a great majority of smokers are young men scarcely out of their teens.

The repeated washing away of the surface of Prince avenue during every rain storm would seem to indicate that this street should be macadamized. It would be economy to do so.

It is predicted that within ten years the price of beef will be so high that it will be beyond the purse of all but the well-to-do. A thoughtful selection of other foods, particularly vegetables, are more nutritious than beef and more healthful.

Hon. Samuel W. McCall is being considered by many leading Republicans as a candidate for Governor to block Governor Foss who, they now feel sure, intends to enter the Republican primaries, and who they feel would defeat Colonel Benton.

Settees placed near the band stand on Manchester Field on both sides of the river would add to the comfort of all who attend the concerts, and also result in a larger attendance. Furthermore such seats would be attractive when the concerts are not being given, as the location abounds in beautiful and restful scenery amid which the cares of a busy life would be vacation for the time being.

A property owner who desires to make only a slight change in a building must get a permit from the Inspector of Buildings in conformity with the building laws of the town. And yet it seems there is no law that will prevent an outsider from placing a huge billboard on top of a building—a menace to public safety and a fire risk. There should be no distinction between the two, the law should apply to both. Wakefield is confronted with the same problem.

Fortunate is Winchester the suburban town of delightful homes, if the dreams of the local assessors come true. In this year of high taxes, after a preliminary examination of the figures, they are reported as confident that the rate can be reduced 60 cents to $17.40. Most of the neighboring communities less favored in this respect have been informed of an increase of about $1 per $1000 on account of the extra State, Metropolitan and county levies of 1913.—[Boston Globe.]

MORAN—ROCHE.

Miss Charlotte Roche and Mr. James Moran, both of this town, were united in marriage by Rev. Francis E. Rogers at St. Mary's rectory on Wednesday evening. Mr. James Callahan of this town was best man and Miss Marie Moran, sister of the groom, was bridesmaid.

A reception was held immediately following the ceremony at the new home of the couple, No. 7 Grove place, which was attended by a large gathering of their friends. They left during the evening on their honeymoon, and will visit New York and the Provinces before their return.

After the wedding the couple attended a wedding supper given to a few of the bride and groom's intimate friends.

During their trip to the Provinces they will visit at the home of the bride's father, a very popular resident of Yarmouth, N. S. They have the best wishes of many Winchester friends.

Miss Anna Gillis of Richardson street has returned from Clifton Beach.

BOARD OF HEALTH REGULATIONS

FOR THE PROTECTION OF FRUITS, VEGETABLES, ETC.

1. No room within the Town of Winchester in which any article of food is exhibited or offered for sale shall be occupied as a living room or sleeping room by any person or persons.

2. Excepting during the process of sale, cutting, weighing or other preparation for sale, no meat, game, poultry, fish, dried fruit, nut meats, cut melons, fresh fruit (except citrus fruits and bananas) vegetables, breadstuffs, pastry, milk, butter, cheese, candies, or confectionery shall be conveyed from place to place or stored or exposed for sale or inspection in or on any public or private way, in or near any open window or doorway, or in any part of a shop or store in the Town of Winchester unless it be so placed covered or screened as to be protected from dirt, dust, flies and animals.

3. No person suffering from tuberculosis shall be employed in any grocery store, meat market, bakery, ice cream parlor, dairy, or any other place in the Town of Winchester where food stuffs are manufactured, sold or handled.

Regulations in regard to Milk.

1. No person engaged in the business of producing milk to be sold or distributed in the Town of Winchester shall store, cool, mix, or strain said milk in any room which is occupied by horses, cows, or other animals, or for the storage of manure, or in any room used in whole or part for domestic or sleeping purposes, unless such room is separated from other parts of the building to the satisfaction of the Milk Inspector. All rooms in which milk is stored, cooled, mixed, or strained shall be kept clean and well screened at all times to the satisfaction of the Milk Inspector, and all utensils actually employed in the storage, sale, or distribution of milk shall be washed with boiling water or sterilized with live steam before they are again used.

2. Milk kept for sale in any store, shop, restaurant, market, bakery, or other establishment shall be kept in sealed bottles and stored in a covered box, cooler, or refrigerator and kept at a temperature not above fifty F. No bottle containing milk for sale shall be allowed to stand outside such box, cooler, or refrigerator except while a sale of milk is being made. Every box, cooler, or refrigerator shall be properly drained and cared for, and shall be kept tightly closed except during such intervals as are necessary for the introduction or removal of milk or ice, and it shall be kept in such locations and under such conditions as shall be approved by the Milk Inspector.

3. All milk produced for sale or distribution in the Town of Winchester shall be strained, and cooled to fifty degrees Fahrenheit as soon as it is drawn, and kept at a temperature not higher than fifty degrees F. until delivered to the customer, but said milk shall not be cooled or stored in any well.

Regulations in regard to Ice Cream.

1. No ice cream shall be manufactured or stored in any portion of a building which is used for the stabling of horses or other animals, or in any room used in whole or in part for domestic or sleeping purposes, unless the manufacturing or storage room for ice cream is separated from other parts of the building to the satisfaction of the Board of Health.

2. All rooms in which ice cream is manufactured or stored shall be provided with tight walls and floors, and kept constantly clean. The floors and walls of said rooms shall be of such construction as to permit rapid and thorough cleansing. The room or rooms aforesaid shall be equipped with appliances for washing or sterilizing all utensils employed in the mixing, freezing, storage, sale, or distribution of ice cream, and all such utensils after use shall be thoroughly washed with boiling water, or sterilized by steam.

3. No person shall employ as a container for other substances than ice cream, any vessel used in the manufacture and sale of ice cream.

4. No person shall use a utensil of any kind or description in the service or sale of ice cream, the use of which has been disapproved by the Board of Health; and no person shall use any utensil in the service or sale of ice cream, unless said utensil is washed in boiling water or sterilized at least once a day or oftener if necessary; and no person shall use his fingers or hands to remove particles of ice from inside any vessel containing ice cream intended for sale.

5. All establishments in which ice cream is manufactured shall be equipped with facilities for the proper cleansing of the hands of operatives; and all persons immediately before engaging in the mixing of the ingredients entering into the composition of ice cream, or its subsequent freezing and handling, shall thoroughly wash his or her hands and keep them clean during such manufacture and handling. All persons shall be dressed in clean outer garments while engaged in the manufacture and handling of ice cream.

6. No urinal, water closet, or privy shall be located in the rooms mentioned in the preceding article, or so situated as to pollute the atmosphere of said rooms.

7. All vehicles used in the conveyance of ice cream for sale or distribution shall be kept in a cleanly condition and free from offensive odors.

8. Ice cream kept for sale in any shop, restaurant or other establishment shall be stored in a covered box or refrigerator. Such box or refrigerator shall be drained to the satisfaction of the Board of Health, and shall be kept clean and tightly closed, except during such intervals as are necessary for the introduction or removal of ice cream or ice. Said box or refrigerator shall be kept only in such locations and under such conditions as shall be approved by the Board of Health.

9. Every person engaged in the manufacture, storage, transportation, sale, or distribution of ice cream, immediately on the occurrence of any case or cases of infectious diseases, either in himself or in his family, or amongst his employees, or within the building or premises where ice cream is manufactured, stored, sold or distributed, shall notify the Winchester Board of Health, and at the same time shall suspend the sale and distribution of ice cream until authorized to resume the same by the said Board of Health.

10. No person shall use to hold or convey ice cream any vessel which has been handled by a person suffering from contagious disease, until said vessel has been thoroughly sterilized.

11. All cream, milk, or skimmed milk, employed in the manufacture of ice cream, shall before use be kept at a temperature not higher than fifty degrees Fahrenheit.

12. No person, by himself, or by his servant or agent, or as the servant or agent of any other person, firm or corporation shall in the Town of Winchester sell, exchange, or deliver any ice cream which contains more than five hundred thousand bacteria per cubic centimeter.

13. No old or melted ice cream, or ice cream returned to a manufacturer from whatever cause shall again be used in the preparation of ice cream.

BASE BALL.

In one of the most interesting and exciting games of base ball ever seen on Manchester Field, Winchester won from the strong Winthrop team last Saturday afternoon in 14 innings.

The game was a pitchers' battle between Benson the former Winchester pitcher, and Tifts, with honors in Tifts favor, as he pitched the steadier game and refused to go in the air in the tight places. Up to the eighth inning not a hit had been made off him and only one man reached first base. In the eighth he eased up a little and one run came across; then in the ninth a hit, a couple of slip-ups and a lucky home run tied the score, making five each. Then commenced the battle all over again.

It went along one, two, three until the 13th, when Cox, the first man up for Winthrop, drove out a three bagger. It looked all up for Winchester. The next man up drove what looked like a sure single to right, but Hunnewell made a regular John Evers stop, holding the man on third and retiring the runner at first. The next man was an easy out. Then Cox on on third base attempted a Marblehead play, trying to steal home. Dickie chased him back and put the ball on him so hard that it took all the ginger out of the rest of the team.

In the 14th Roche got a single, went to second on a sacrifice and scored on Dickie's drive to center, which would have been a home run anyway, although he got credit for only a single.

The greater part of the crowd stayed to the finish, and a number of people who had seen Winchester play woke up to the fact that we have some ball team. The fans were so overjoyed when Dickie came in that they carried him off the field on their shoulders.

Outside of the battery work of Tift and Dickie there is no need of any special mention, as every man on the team was on his toes every minute of the game.

BRYAN'S LECTURES.

Editor of the STAR:

I thank you for printing in one of your late issues what Senator James, a Democrat, said as to Mr. Bryan talking at the Chautauqua meetings. Will you again print what Senator LaFollette, a Republican, says about it, and oblige yours courteously,

WHITFIELD TUCK.

"Secretary Bryan is the subject of a violent outburst of criticism because he is filling a number of lecture engagements contracted for before he became a member of President Wilson's cabinet.

"The country has confidence in the integrity of Mr. Bryan and it is not ready to believe that he will cheat the government on his services. To do his best work as Secretary he ought to take some time for recreation from the onerous and exacting duties of his great office. Every president and every cabinet officer leaves Washington for a few weeks during the heated term. One goes to Oyster Bay, another to Berkeley, another to Cornish, another to Yellowstone Park, another to the seashore.

"Mr. Bryan goes to the Chautauqua platform. It is his recreation. It is no discredit to him that he finds vast audiences eager to pay to hear his inspiring oratory. His lectures are not partisan. He is a great preacher. Every man and woman, boy and girl who hears him is the better for it.

"He is entitled to spend his vacation time as best suits him. He will not neglect the duties of his important office for any personal advantage."

Still In The Lead

For over fifteen years Grape-Nuts, the pioneer health cereal, has had no equal, either in flavour or nutrition.

Thousands of families use it regularly because

Grape-Nuts

Has qualities which make it the ideal food—

Delicious Flavour,
Rich Nourishment,
Quick Preparation, and withal, easily digested.

Grape-Nuts and cream, in place of heavy, indigestible food, helps to make one cooler and more comfortable on hot days; and builds body and brain in a way that gives zest and energy.

"There's a Reason" for Grape-Nuts

Sold by Grocers everywhere.

STRONG WORDS

From a Doctor with 40 Years' Experience.

"In my 40 years' experience as a teacher and practitioner along hygienic lines," says a Calif. physician, "I have never found a food to compare with Grape-Nuts for the benefit of the general health of all classes of people.

"I have recommended Grape-Nuts for a number of years to patients with the greatest success and every year's experience makes me more enthusiastic regarding its use.

"I make it a rule to always recommend Grape-Nuts and Postum in place of coffee, when giving my patients instructions as to diet. I know both Grape-Nuts and Postum can be digested by anyone.

"As for myself, when engaged in much mental work my diet twice a day consists of Grape-Nuts and rich cream. I find it just the thing to build up and keep the brain in good working order.

"In addition, Grape-Nuts always keeps the digestive organs in a perfect, healthy tone." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Strong endorsements like the above from physicians all over the country have stamped Grape-Nuts the most scientific food in the world.

right from a handy faucet, makes dish-washing an easy and quickly finished job.

Plenty of hot water—right from the faucet—takes half of the drudgery out of the cleaning and scrubbing.

Hot water on tap—a dozen tubs full if necessary—puts the weekly wash on the line in double quick time.

You housewives who depend upon a stove to heat water never have enough—your working hours are longer and your household labors are much harder than they should be.

What you need and are entitled to is a little gas water heater that will cost from $17.50 up according to size.

Such a heater will supply—through your faucets—all the hot water you require—at any time for any purpose at a cost of 1-10 of a cent per gallon.

Over 500,000 heaters installed in the United States.

You can inspect all styles at our stores.

WHY PEOPLE DON'T GO TO CHURCH.

People who believe that automobiles, Sunday newspapers, concerts or other features of city life are the principal causes of the lack of interest in the churches, are confounded by the testimony of summer visitors to secluded villages who find that the country churches, with none of these counter attractions, are quite as neglected as those of the city. This scattering testimony of the casual vacationists is supported by statistics, and while there are exceptions in both city and country it may be accepted as a fact that judging by church attendance the religious interest of only a generation ago is sadly diminished at least among the Protestant denominations of this country. Somerville churches do as well and perhaps better than other communities of its kind, but taking into account the growth of the population they are not securing their proportion of increased attendance.

"Why don't people go to church?" is a question that is agitating clergy, laymen, philosophers, and all students of social conditions, but the answers so far given are pitifully inadequate. The real reason lies far deeper than the mere summary of the multitude of other interests that occupy the mind of man. It may be the fault of the people or the fault of the churches. More or less success has attended sporadic efforts to attract the people by superb music, discussions of popular subjects, addresses by eminent orators, but even when great audiences are thus gathered the devotional spirit of our ancestors is missing.

It is a materialistic age. On every side are the wonders of man's achievement, and millions are studying, thinking, toiling to quicken the pace of civilization already fearfully fast. Fairly adequate provision is made by the state, individuals and countless philanthropic and charitable organizations to assist those who cannot keep up. The milk of human kindness has not dried up, but man with his intellect, his labor, and his charities would do it all. In the very exercise of the Christian virtues man fails to think of God as the author of all strength and the giver of every good and perfect gift.

Perhaps if the churches would once more set up their altars in the realm of faith; if ministers would step into their pulpits burning with the importance of their message and inspired by absolute belief in the Word of God; if there were more testing of the efficacy of prayer, of God's power to forgive sins, to solace grief, to renew courage, to restore happiness, perhaps then people would flock to divine worship because of the peace and the power it would bring them.—(Somerville Journal.)

EQUAL SUFFRAGE DEPARTMENT.

Conducted by Winchester League.

Continuing the subject of the garbage question in Chicago, which we dwell upon because the new women voters are interesting themselves in it, we learn that they have accomplished much more in the north since they have had the vote than they did in a years work without it. Indeed the year's work was a failure to secure their end. Now the Chicago council finance committee has not only granted their request for an investigation of the city garbage disposal, but has appointed two members of the Woman's City Club on a commission of seven! When the lives of babies are concerned, women will better conditions if any power is given them.

We learn from the Woman's Journal that the only countries in Europe that have no organized movement for woman suffrage are Spain, Greece and the Grand Duchy of Luxembourg. All the others are represented in the International Alliance.

For the first time in the history of the country, women from all the states where women actually vote will meet in Washington Aug. 13, 14 and 15, to outline plans for having the franchise extended to women of other states. The meeting is to be held under the auspices of the National Council of Women Voters, Mrs. Emma Smith DeVoe, of Tacoma, Wash., president. The women who attend the meetings of the Council will be in a different position than the usual delegates of suffragists who go to Congress with requests. They represent about 4,000,000 who vote. The Council will discuss the campaign for a constitutional amendment giving nation-wide votes for women, and also the several state campaigns to be waged in 1914.

CIGARETTES ON INCREASE.

A report from Washington states that the consumption of cigarettes in this country increased 20 per cent during the last six months and that within the last five years the increase has been nearly 90 per cent. Notwithstanding legislation intended to discourage the use of cigarettes by boys, the habit seems to be increasing among them. While the use of this form of tobacco may or may not be especially injurious to adults, there can be no reasonable doubt that it is a most pernicious habit for boys and youths. Parents would do well to watch closely for signs that their boys are using the weed in this cheap and harmful form and to take the strongest means to break off the habit. The police officers, too, should be always alert to see to it that the storekeepers of this town—particularly of the smaller shops—do not violate the law which absolutely forbids the sale of cigarettes to persons not yet 18 years old.

HEATING SYSTEM.

Now is the proper time to consider a warm house next winter with no gas to kill the flowers. We are the only firm in Winchester that can furnish you practical heating men of all kinds. Hot air furnaces, steam and hot water. Fifty-two (52) weeks in a year at a moment's notice.

We advise attention now to that important feature in your home. Anybody can make a bluff at cleaning your furnace but it takes a practical furnace man to produce results. We have the practical men and would rather serve you now than in the busy season. It being much easier now to get the repairs.

Many Things That People Do That Seriously Injure Their Health.

By EUGENE CHRISTIAN, F. S. D.

[Copyright, 1913, by American Press Association.]

FROM the way people cling to life, from the measures they adopt to avoid disease, one would think that their most profound study would be the laws that would make them healthy and extend their period of life, but when we examine their habits, when we put the conduct of the human family beneath the searchlight of science, we find that most of the things they do tend toward shortening their life period and toward the production of disease. This is rather a gloomy aspect of the question, but it is true.

The dreamy optimist who can see sunshine through the darkest cloud is not always the best friend to humanity; neither is the pessimist who sees nothing but the cloud, but the true friend of humanity is the one who can stand midway between and see the facts as they exist and tell them in plain language and thereby relieve suffering and aid in extending our period on earth. This is what I have endeavored to do.

As stated in one of my previous articles, man gets his growth at about twenty-four years and dies at little less than thirty-nine. If he should live eight times his period of maturity, as do all other animals, his period of life would be about 200 years. The fact that he does not do this is evidence conclusive that there is something wrong—that he is committing some fundamental error that is shortening his life and rendering him less able to enjoy the time he does live. The purpose of this article is to point out some of these mistakes and suggest a few remedies.

Wrong Eating.

Man is by nature a vegetarian. From this healthy and natural custom, however, he has departed and preys like a wild beast upon his brother and mals. When we take the flesh of an other animal into our bodies we must take in the uric acid, the toxic carbon dioxide and carbon monoxide poisons that reside in all flesh food. This adds greatly to the same poisons that are residual in our own bodies. Inability of the system to throw off these poisons causes disease and shortens life.

Instead of studying our diet as we would our business and banking our food as we would our cash, we eat at haphazard. It is a system of guess work. The most skillful mechanics and the most learned of our population are called upon to construct our houses and machinery, to cut and make our clothes, but the most ignorant of our population lay out our diet.

The city people are fed from subcellars. The food is selected, prepared and combined by uneducated persons, who neither know nor care anything about the harmonious chemistry of the things they serve. The one primary object is to appeal to the taste, which causes people to eat more than they should.

Food Should Suit Age.

Bread is the great American staple of diet, and yet cereal starch—that is, everything made out of corn, wheat, rye, oats, barley or rice—is the most difficult of all foods to digest and convert into energy. Food should suit age.

These cereal products are composed largely of starch. The principal purpose of starch is to make bone, cartilage and teeth. When a person is grown, middle aged or old he needs but very little of these foods, and yet starch composes probably 50 per cent of the human diet. Inability of the body, therefore, to cast out this great excess of unused matter is the cause of a tremendous amount of disease, such as stomach and intestinal fermentation, intestinal gas, rheumatism, Bright's disease, sclerosis of the arteries and liver and consequent nervousness and insomnia. A book could be written upon the evil effects of cereal starch and the subject would not be exhausted.

The overconsumption of acid fruits is another fundamental error in nutrition. If we were living in the tropics, where the pores of the skin were constantly open, the body could eliminate and volatilize a great deal of acid, but in our northern climate such articles as grape fruit, lemons, limes, pineapple, apricots and all sour fruits should never be taken except in exceedingly hot weather. When taken at other times the tendency is to ferment other foods, crystallize the starch atom which makes the blood crystal, which in its turn makes rheumatism, gout, lumbago, knotted hands and feet, stiffness and premature old age.

The overconsumption of sweets is another mistake in our diet. The carbohydrate (starch and sugar) element is prominent in nearly all of our foods, and when we add to this pure concentrated cane sugar in any quantity, especially in the hundreds of combinations which compose the desserts on the average table, we are burdening the digestion and assimilation of our food and especially the elimination of waste. The failure of the body to utilize sweets and throw off the excess is a most prolific source of disease.

Overeating.

Overeating is one of the greatest errors of civilized people. There is nothing more conducive to this habit than the average "good dinner," composed of six to a dozen courses. We eat all that we should of probably some good, plain food; then we change from one thing to another, appealing to a different set of taste buds with each change, until we have laden the stomach with twice or perhaps three times as much food as the body needs.

If the stomach cannot dispose of it indigestion, fermentation and sour stomach result. This poisons every ounce of food that passes through the intestinal tract. If the stomach can dispose of it and it is taken into the cells we become superfat, laden with adipose tissue that we do not need and that possesses no item of strength to its own support. It is as much a burden as carrying so much brick on our shoulders day in and day out.

The surplus fat accumulates around the vital organs, limiting the capacity of the lungs to purify the blood. It also accumulates around the heart, making the action of that much overworked organ more and more difficult. This is why fat people have no endurance and often fall down with vertigo and dizziness.

Endurance is measured almost entirely by the ability of the lungs to oxidize and purify the blood.

Wrong Drinking.

In addition to man's "civilized" errors in eating, he has made nearly as many mistakes in his drinking habits. Pure water, designed by nature as the great universal solvent, the helper, the digester of foods, the maker of good blood, is the last thing man seems to want to drink. Instead of this purifying, life giving beverage, he takes whisky, brandy, cordial, rum, gin, beer, wine of a hundred kinds, fermented grape juice and the hundreds of soda fountain concoctions, bubbling, sparkling riches, sharp tasting carbonated waters, anything and everything except the pure article.

In addition to these mistakes the old dieticians have told him for a hundred years not to drink with his meals, the hypostasis of these good old teachers being that water diluted the gastric juice. Modern science shows that this is the very thing that should be done; that man does not take enough water with his food.

The normal human body is composed of 66 per cent water, and the average meal is composed of only 25 to 30 per cent water. If this difference is not made up by drinking pure water, then the stomach calls to its aid a large amount of gastric juice, which robs the body of its normal amount of moisture and sours and ferments the food. Every meal, therefore, should be composed of 66 per cent water, but the liquid should be water, nothing but water.

Tobacco and Liquor.

The tobacco and liquor habits are probably the most universal and the most injurious vices of civilized people.

Liquor is a stimulant that not only dethrones the reason, but poisons the body, and thus the heart action is quickened in the effort of nature to oxidize and cast out these poisons, while tobacco is a sedative which paralyzes, as it were, and slows down the action of the heart and the general circulatory and vital processes.

All the mistakes and errors above recited are difficult, troublesome, expensive and worse than useless. Man's health would be as much superior to what it now is as pure water is superior to beer and whisky if he would obey the simple laws of his organization, and his period of life would gradually increase until in a few generations he could live out his natural period of 200 years if he would obey the three great fundamental laws of life—natural eating, natural exercise and natural breathing.

A. W. ROONEY,
Collector of Taxes for the Town of Winchester.
August 1, 1913.

To the Honorable the Justices of the Superior Court within and for the County of Essex:

RESPECTFULLY sheweth and represents Sadie Isabelle Mitton, of Beverly, in said county, that she was lawfully married to Albert L. Mitton, now of Montreal in the province of Quebec, Canada, at Providence, Rhode Island, on the twenty-ninth day of February, A. D. 1908, and thereafter said husband and the said Albert L. Mitton lived together as husband and wife in this Commonwealth, to wit, at Lynn, Boston and Winchester, that said husband has always been faithful to her marriage vows and obligations, but the said Albert L. Mitton, who is regardless of the same, at Winchester in the county of Middlesex on the twenty-ninth day of March, A. D. 1910, without cause, wilfully and utterly deserted said wife, and has since that time continued from said time to the date hereof, being more than three consecutive years next prior to the filing of this libel.

Wherefore your libellant prays that a divorce from the bonds of matrimony may be decreed between your libellant and the said Isabelle and that she be allowed to resume her maiden name of Sadie Isabelle Mitton.
Dated this fifth day of June, A. D. 1913.
SADIE ISABELLE MITTON.

Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

ESSEX SS. SUPERIOR COURT. June 15, 1913.
Upon the foregoing libel, ordered, that the said libellant give notice to said Albert L. Mitton, by causing an attested copy of her said libel, and of this order thereon, to be published in the Winchester STAR a newspaper printed in Winchester in the county of Middlesex, once a week, for three weeks successively, the last publication to be on or before the first Monday of September next, and that if any libel, which is the return of this Court, at Salem, within the county of Essex, on the first Monday of September next, and by mailing forthwith, by registered letter to the libellant at Montreal, in the province of Quebec, Canada, an attested copy of said libel and order thereon, that he may appear at said Salem within the time from said first Monday of September and show cause, if any he has, why the prayer of said libel should not be granted.
Attest, E. B. GEORGE, CLERK.
The foregoing is a true copy of said libel and of the order thereon.
Attest, E. B. GEORGE, CLERK.

ISRAEL SPARED, OR PASSED OVER

Exodus 12:21-31—Aug. 10.

"The Son of Man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give His life a Ransom for many."—Matthew 20:28.

THE tenth plague upon the Egyptians for their persistent injustice toward the Hebrews was the death of their first-borns.

In every home there was death—the first-born son or daughter. The terror of such a night can better be imagined than described.

In Scripture death is always represented as the enemy of man—the penalty of sin. The death sentence came upon our first parents because of sin, and by the laws of heredity has passed to all their children—the human family. The Bible tells us that the only hope for recovery lies in the fact that God has made preparations for the satisfaction of Justice through the death of Jesus; and that during Messiah's reign the curse of death shall be removed.

What God brought upon the Egyptians in that night was, therefore, merely the same penalty that has been against all mankind for six thousand years. The first-borns, retiring in good health, were corpses before morning, the death sentence coming upon them more suddenly than it otherwise would have done.

This plague did not touch the homes of the Israelites. Their first-borns were passed over, spared, by the Almighty; hence the name Passover. By Divine command the Israelites made the anniversary of this event historical. Every Israelite shows his faith in God and his confidence in this record of Divine deliverance of his forefathers, when he celebrates the Passover.

The Passover's Real Meaning. Israel's experiences in being passed over were allegorical. As a type they represented the experiences of God's Elect—Spiritual Israel, God's salutary people, gathered from all nations and denominations. The chief members came from Natural Israel, but no nation can lay exclusive claims. It is an elect class, chosen along the line of character alone.

Spiritual Israel was represented in the first-borns of fleshly Israel, passed over in that night. The next morning Israel went forth under the leadership of the first-borns, who subsequently became the priestly tribe, typically representing the Royal Priesthood, whose Royal High Priest is the glorified Messiah.

Just as the first-borns of Israel were not the only ones saved from Egyptian bondage, so the Church of the First-borns (Hebrews 12:23) will not be the only ones saved from the bondage of sin and death, symbolized by that Egyptian bondage. The preservation of the First-borns implies the deliverance of the remainder.

"Israel My First-Born." Since deliverance from the power of sin and death was of God's grace, and not an obligation of justice, He had a perfect right to determine long in advance that His blessings should reach mankind through Abraham's Seed. Unnoted by the Jews, the Lord indicated that Abraham would have two seeds; one a Heavenly, the other an earthly. Thus He said, "Thy seed shall be (1) as the stars of heaven, and (2) as the sand of the sea shore." God, in His wisdom, did not explain to Abraham the significance of this figurative statement. We, however, are permitted to see the meaning even of this feature of the Promise.

The stars represent the Heavenly Seed of Abraham—Messiah and His Church. The sand of the sea shore represents the vast multitude who will ultimately be saved from sin and death, and recovered to Divine favor and everlasting life in the Messianic Kingdom. God's providences were to the Jew first as respects spiritual privileges, and will be to the Jew first as respects earthly privileges—Restitution to human perfection.

First-Borns Blood-Protected. Let us not fail to note that Divine favor toward the first-borns of Israel was not without blood. Indeed, the whole lesson of the Old Testament Scriptures is that "without the shedding of blood there is no remission" of sins. The Israelites took a lamb of the first year without spot, killed it and sprinkled its blood upon the door posts and lintels of their houses, and ate the flesh within.

As the Passover was a typical, so also were the lamb and the sprinkled blood. The lamb represented Jesus, the Lamb of God. His death was for the sins of humanity. Christ died not merely for the Church, but as the Scriptures declare, for the sins of the whole world.

The Church is passed over in this night of sin, especially saved in advance of the others, through the merit of the Blood. That the Blood covers more than the First-borns is shown by the fact that in the type it was sprinkled not merely upon the first-borns, but upon the house, as indicating the Household of Faith.

NEW TEACHERS.

High School—Miss Edna M. Hubley of Worcester, Mass., has taken the place of Miss Edith G. Chesebrough, stenography and typewriting, who resigns to be married. Miss Hubley is a graduate of Wellesley College and Worcester Business Institute, with practical experience in office work and in teaching commercial subjects in Proctor Academy at Andover, New Hampshire.

Miss Mabel A. Richmond, of Augusta, Maine, succeeds Miss Susan J. W. Brown, English and Latin, who has accepted a better paying position in Worcester High School. Miss Richmond is a graduate of Bates College, and has recently been teaching in the High School at Warwick, Rhode Island. Previously, she taught in Grafton and Rumford High Schools with marked success.

Wadleigh—Miss Celia Standish succeeds Miss Gertrude F. Greene, First Assistant, who goes at a larger salary to Newton, Mass. For several years, Miss Standish has been principal of the Garrison Grammar School in Concord, New Hampshire. She is an unusually strong teacher.

The vacancy in the eighth grade boys' room caused by promoting Miss Oliver to the Principship of the Prince School has been filled by the election of Miss Charlotte D. Ryder, of Bellows Falls, Vermont. Miss Ryder is a graduate of Randolph Normal school and of the Ossining School, with successful teaching experience in St. Cloud, Minnesota, and Bellows Falls. She is a sister of the late Mrs. Edward H. Kennerston, of 14 Brook street, Winchester, and a charming young woman.

Prince—Miss Carrie L. Mason, formerly principal of the Wyman School, who has been absent on leave for illness for the last two years, will be in charge of the Progress Class. This class has been planned for pupils who seem to require a different elementary course of study than can be given in the regular grades. The work will be planned for individuals, but will include considerable manual training and nature study in various forms. Miss Mason has been studying at Amherst Agricultural College and is preparing for this class. Her long experience and teaching skill qualify her as the ideal teacher for a class of this character.

Chapin—Mr. James S. Collins, of Salem, succeeds Mr. Charles J. Otis, principal. Mr. Otis leaves to resume the principalship of the school at Harrisville, New York, from which he came to Winchester one year ago. Mr. Collins is a graduate of Salem Normal School. He has recently been assistant principal in the Saltonstall School in Salem, and has been successful in both day and evening school work.

Rumford—Miss Mary A. Doherty, of Winchester, will take the third grade left by Miss Elizabeth Cullen, transferred to the sixth grade at the Prince. Miss Doherty is a graduate of Winchester High School and of Lowell Normal School. She has shown particular teaching skill in a primary room at Duxbury, Mass. She is a sister of Miss Helena Doherty, of the first grade in the same building, and a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Neil Doherty, 824 Main street.

Washington—Miss Dorothy M. Ayer, of Winchester, succeeds Miss Marion Frost, who resigns to be married. Miss Ayer is a graduate of Winchester High School and had her professional training at Bridgewater Normal School. She has been very successful with primary classes in Medway and Hull. She will live at 11 Sanborn street with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Ayer.

Associate Supervisor of Drawing—Miss Amy R. Whittier, of Scituate, Mass., succeeds Miss Ruth E. Merriam in charge of the practice work done in our grades by the senior class of Massachusetts Normal Art School. She is a graduate of this school with an unusually successful and varied experience. She is now teaching in the University of Chicago summer art school.

Teacher of Cooking—Miss Jennie P. Clement, of Lowell, succeeds Miss Helen Lyman, who will receive a larger salary in Cohasset. Miss Clement is a graduate of Simmons College and during the last year has been an instructor there. She seems especially adapted to this work.

Supervisor of Physical Training—Miss Margaret L. Comerford, of Cambridge, will continue the work of Miss Adeline M. Tippet, who has resigned to take charge of the Alfred Corning Clark Settlement House in New York City. Miss Comerford is a graduate of the Sargent School for Physical Training in Cambridge, class of 1913, and during her senior year has been an instructor in the same. For the last two years she has been assistant at the summer vacation playground on Manchester Field and has shown marked ability in her work. Heretofore the Supervisor of Physical Training has been engaged for three days each week. Miss Comerford will give her entire time. This will permit the full application of the idea that "health is a necessary precedent to instruction."

Director of Athletics—Mr. Willard C. Hatch, Harvard 1914, succeeds Mr. Ralph E. Guillow, by reason of a rearrangement of the athletic work. Mr. Hatch has taken part in athletics through his high school and college courses and has been director of boys' sports at summer camps and elsewhere. He will have charge of the gymnasium and track work and will assist in the development of the various high school teams.

School Nurse—Miss Constance E. Talpey, of York, Maine, succeeds Miss E. Catherine MacDonald, who will spend the year in Germany. Miss Talpey is a graduate of Waltham Training School for Nurses, and has had experience with private cases, as Superintendent of the Outlook Hospital at Summit, New Jersey, and in public school work. She is capable, thorough, and a tactful woman, and will continue the excellent work of her predecessors.

Associate School Physician—Dr. Frederika Moore will be associated with Dr. Ralph Putnam with particular responsibility for the girls above the fifth grades. Medical inspection in the Winchester schools began before the law required school physicians to be appointed. It has steadily grown in breadth and efficiency as the obvious benefits to pupils have shown how more might be done. Dr. Ralph Putnam will continue to oversee all the work of this character in Winchester schools, as he has from its introduction.

REAL ESTATE NEWS.

Mr. Geo. T. Davidson has leased his house No. 109 Highland avenue to Wm. G. Thompson of Somerville who is now occupying the house.

Agreements have been signed for the sale by Messrs. Geo. A. Fernald and Samuel W. McCall of Lot 9 on Myopia Hill comprising about 55,400 square feet of land to Mrs. Ella T. Wallis. Mrs. Wallis plans to build a residence on the property.

Mr. Nath'l G. Hill has sold the attractive colonial house which he recently built on Woodside road with about 14,154 square feet of land to Mr. John A. Maddocks of Somerville who will move into the premises about September 1st.

Messrs. Frank L. Ripley and Free-land E. Hovey have sold Lots 9 and 10 on Cabot street comprising about 13,000 square feet of land to Mr. Andrew P. Foss of Winchester who plans to build a residence on the land.

The Alexis Cutting heirs have leased the premises No. 91 Mystic Valley Parkway to Mr. Charles D. Warner of Chicago who has recently joined the editorial staff of the Christian Science Monitor.

Mr. J. M. Leonard of Melrose has rented the premises No. 15 Winthrop street to Mr. Andrew P. Foss who will move into the house within a few days.

Mr. Henry S. Bridge has rented his house No. 37 Lloyd street to Mr. Fred A. Wright of Dorchester who will move into the premises before September 1st.

All the foregoing transactions were made through the office of Geo. Adams Woods.

Through the office of Geo. Adams Woods a large tract of land near the Wegemere Station bordering on Lakeview road, Mystic Valley Parkway and Lakeview terrace, consisting of 8 lots numbered 9, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 35, 36, comprising 91,580 feet of land has been deeded by Louville V. Niles of Wellesley to Mr. Robert Coit of Winchester.

The plan of the lots is to be rearranged, restrictions have been revised and the property will be developed on the very attractive lines that Mr. Coit's personal attention will insure.

Through the same office agreements have been signed for the sale of the two family house at the corner of Bacon street and Ravenscroft road and about 14,832 square feet of land by Mrs. Ella T. Wallis to Dr. William H. Gilpatrick who will take possession of the property on September 1st.

SVEN AUGUST ANDERSON.

Mr. Sven August Anderson died last Friday at the home of his daughter at Franklin, Mass. The cause of his death was old age, he being 90 years of age last April. For many years he had made his home with his son, Andrew Anderson, 348 Washington street, near Lincoln street, Winchester. He leaves two sons, a daughter and seven grandchildren. Funeral services were held Monday from the residence in Winchester, and the interment was in Wildwood Cemetery.

Mr. Anderson was born in Sweden and came to this country many years ago. In the old country he was engaged in the meat packing business, but since coming to the United States he had lived a life of comparative retirement. In his prime he was a man of great strength and of massive frame, and these he retained almost to the time of the beginning of his sickness, last Christmas.

BASE BALL.

Saturday, August 16th, Winchester will play Miah Murray's White Bears. This is a fast team and capable of giving any club a run to win. They have Benson, the Dorchester High pitcher, on the slab. He has the reputation of being one of the best pitchers in High School circles, his last appearance on the slab for Dorchester, being a no-hit, no-run performance. The rest of the team is composed of High School and College players.

WARDEN SAVES TREES.

Samuel S. Symmes is much complimented by residents of the Highlands in the announcement that he will not cut down two magnificent elms on Washington street. The Selectmen having decided to lay a concrete sidewalk on west side of this street from Irving to Clematis streets found two elm trees out of line. One, opposite the foot of Stone avenue, was a foot or so inside the sidewalk line, the other near Cross street projected into the gutter about six inches. The Selectmen asked the Tree Warden to remove these trees. As is customary in all cases, the Warden caused to be placed upon the trees notices of a hearing on the question of removing them. The notices were displayed upon them just about long enough it is said, for the small boy to have time to pull them off. However this may be, property owners and neighbors were ignorant of the danger confronting the handsome elms, until they were informed by some discerning person. But it did not take long to pass the information over the telephone, so that when Warden Symmes arrived on the ground last Friday afternoon he found the remonstrators out in force. He listened to the reasons given why the trees should not come down, and then after an inspection and a short deliberation with himself, he announced that the trees would remain.

These elms are among the handsomest and most stately in town, are over eighty years of age, are in excellent condition, and are in no sense a danger to public travel. Mr. Symmes has old-fashioned ideas and believes in the village beautiful, and it is known that if he was obliged to remove the trees, such action would have caused a twinge to his heart strings. For eighty years inhabitants of Winchester have passed under the shade of the trees and no trouble nor annoyance was ever caused so far as known by their being out of the correct position.

Parenthetically it may be said that Mr. Samuel S. Symmes is the best Tree Warden the town ever had, and that the trees of Winchester were never in better condition since the advent of the insect plague than they are to-day. His judgment is good and his discrimination is excellent, and he has kind remembrances of those sturdy pioneer settlers who set out the trees and who made their homes along the now almost forgotten Richardson Row.

ST. JOSEPH'S FIELD DAY.

St. Joseph's Parish of East Woburn will hold its annual field day this Saturday afternoon and evening at Pavilion Park, East Woburn. The events will open at 2 o'clock with a base ball game between the St. Joseph's nine and the Innitout team. Following this track events and sports will be held, for which prizes will be awarded. There will be dancing from 4 to 11:30 p. m.

PURCHASED SPAULDING ESTATE.

It is reported that Mrs. Irving S. Palmer has purchased the Leonard H. Spaulding estate at No. 27 Everett avenue. This is one of the finest estates on the west side. Mrs. Palmer at present resides in Glengarry.

ITALIAN FIREWORKS

TONIGHT.

The annual display of fireworks given by the Winchester Italians will be held on Manchester Field this evening. There will also be a band concert.

Mrs. Marcus B. May and family are camping the rest of the summer at Camp Kennington, South Casco, Me.

SELECTMEN'S MEETING.

After Full Discussion N. E. Fireworks Co. Denied Permit to Rebuild.

The Board met at 7.30 p. m. All present.

At 8 p. m. as advertised in the Winchester Star of July 25 and August 1, a hearing was declared open on the petition presented July 21 by the New England Fireworks Company for permission to use certain buildings or structures to be erected on the Nelson land off Cross street for the keeping, storage, manufacture, and sale of gunpowder, dynamite, and other explosives, and the manufacture of firecrackers or fireworks therein.

Mr. James V. Barbaro appeared for the petitioners and explained that they did not ask for permission to use or store dynamite, that they manufacture nothing but common fireworks, and presented a letter from B. W. Dunn, Chief Inspector, Bureau of Explosives of the City of New York, enclosing a copy of laboratory report covering examination of fireworks taken from the New England Company's plant by their inspector and stating that all of the samples represented material that is considered safe for transportation.

Mr. Barbaro stated that accidents such as they have had were likely to happen anywhere; that the men who were hurt were burned and not hurt by any explosion; that there is nothing very dangerous in what they had at their plant; that the danger is only to the men who are there; that there is no danger to the neighborhood from the fireworks they make; that Mr. Borrelli of the Company was anxious to get a permit for he had several contracts on hand which he was obliged to fill.

No other supporters of the petition appeared.

In response to a question by Mr. Pike as to whether he considered potassium chlorate and barium nitrate as dangerous as dynamite, Mr. Barbaro stated that he did not, and that they were used only for the coloring and were mixed in with powder, that they took every precaution to put in proper proportions of the material and that very little is put into the mixture; that if they had been considered dangerous the Bureau of Explosives would not have written the letter which he presented, that the Bureau is one of the best authorities in the country, having had experience in the work, and if they considered a thing was safe it was safe to assume that it was so; that they themselves did not know very much about these matters, but the Bureau of Explosives did for that is their work.

Those who appeared in remonstrance to the granting of petition were called upon and Mr. Frank G. H. Finnimore of Verplank avenue stated that he lived perhaps the nearest of any other property owners in the vicinity, that his property was within 500 feet of the former location of the building, that on the day of the accident he was at home at work in the front of the house when the explosion occurred, and for that reason cannot tell to what extent his house was shaken. His first thought was to care for the injured and with others went to the scene of the explosion to render what assistance they could. When he returned he found that two or three lights of glass in his house had been shattered in several rooms. It seemed to him that to have any establishment of that kind so near to houses was not fair, that the citizens want to have their homes safe, that it would be impossible to say when explosions were going to take place, if this permit were granted it might be in a week or two; that he did not think they should be required to stand the damage to their houses, and wished to enter a strong protest against any permit being granted for any establishment of this sort so near to residences.

Mr. Edward Duncan of 56 Pinegrove Park said that he wished to endorse the statements of Mr. Finnimore; that he was not more than 500 feet from where the explosion occurred and it was a little too near; that he was the owner of the property in which he lived and asked the Board to consider if the explosion had occurred in the night instead of in the day time what its effect would have been on the children.

Mr. Edward S. Everett, 71 Cross street, stated that he was the owner of between 20 and 30 house lots, the nearest one being about 500 feet from the fireworks building; that he did not see how any one could consider such an establishment anything but dangerous; that he believed it would damage his property, and, in fact, had been told by certain parties that they would not think of coming there to build a house if the factory was to be placed there after what they had read of the explosion in the newspapers; that he objected to any permit being granted on account of damage to property. Mr. Everett also stated that although his house was located 1000 to 1200 feet from the factory one of his windows was broken by the explosion.

In response to a question by Mr. Pike, Mr. Duncan stated that he had no broken windows which might have been because of a banking which lies between his property and the factory. His chimney showed a crack which he noticed a day or two after the explosion, but he could not say that it was due to the explosion.

Mr. William T. Davies of 18 Pinegrove Park stated that he did not feel like protesting against any legitimate business, but that he was a property owner in that vicinity and thought it detrimental to have such an establishment there; that he talked with parties considering the purchase of houses who had expressed their disinclination to buy after reading the report of the explosion in the newspapers. He thought that the protests of the neighbors should be considered, they know it to be dangerous; that Mr. Duncan, Mr. Finnimore and

FORTNIGHTLY VACATION SCHOOL CLOSED.

The vacation school, conducted by the Fortnightly Club of this town, closed on Friday, August 8th, after a successful term of six weeks. The committee in charge consisted of the following: Mrs. W. D. Eldredge, chairman, Mrs. J. H. McAlman, Mrs. C. L. Case, Mrs. H. S. Seagrave, Mrs. John Cleworth, Mrs. C. A. Dodge, Mrs. B. F. Jakeman.

This committee have all worked faithfully for the success of the school and have always been ready to do the part assigned them.

The school was very fortunate in having Mrs. Nellie F. Walker of Cambridge for its principal again this year, and with her assistant, Miss Mildred Gordon of West Medford, and Miss Elizabeth Naven and Miss Evangeline Mathis in the intermediate room, Miss Louise Ide of Boston and Ethel Taber in the kindergarten, Miss Elizabeth Cullen and Irene Murphy in the nursery, it had an excellent teaching force. The faithful painstaking work of the teachers is sincerely appreciated.

The attendance this year has been very satisfactory. Basketry has been introduced in the intermediate grade and the children have done very nice work.

Through the kindness of friends the committee have been able to serve the children a more liberal allowance of crackers and milk than in former years.

The committee wish to thank the friends who have so generously responded.

On Thursday, the 7th, an exhibition of the work was given and a sale of baskets which the children had made was held from which about six dollars was realized, which will be used towards the expense of materials. There are still a few baskets unsold which may be seen at 7 Wolcott street.

On the closing day the children were served ice cream and cake, the expense being borne by an interested friend.

The success of the vacation school is evident from the pleasure it has given the children, the help it has rendered many a family in caring for the children during the hot summer days, and the intense interest displayed by all.

Mr. Walker Jones and Dean Blanchard are cruising along the Maine coast in a forty foot power boat.

Mr. Frank Chapman, who has been very ill for several months has so far recovered as to be able to go to Pepperell where he went the first of the week with Mrs. Chapman.

YOUR AFFAIRS AND MINE.

While waiting for a train at the Winchester station the other forenoon THE SPECTATOR overheard a couple of gentlemen discussing some mistakes made by architects in plans made by the latter, which recalls a story THE SPECTATOR once read told of a sea captain who, after many years of life on the ocean and still following it, decided that he would have a house built for himself in the town between two of his voyages, and thus have a home to retire to after quitting the sea. He, like other men in that line, was very tenacious of his opinions and accustomed, when he gave an order, to have it obeyed as given and without question. When the house business came up he asked a friend if he knew a local master carpenter that he could recommend and who was one who would do as he was told about the job without any ifs or ands or pros and cons, as he had made all the plans himself and it was just such a house as he wanted, and he wanted it built exactly according to those plans. The friend told him he knew just such a builder, and a time was set for the captain and his friend to meet the carpenter and talk the matter over. The meeting was held and the conditions fully explained as to a strict compliance with the plans. The captain brought the plans to the conference and handed them to the builder to look over. The carpenter, after the first glance, said he could build the house according to those plans, but—"Hold on right there," said the captain, "remember there are to be no butts or ands, as we have just been talking. Say, now, can you or can you not build that house just exactly according to those plans?" "I can," said the builder. "Well then," said the captain, "go ahead and do it." The balance of the business was amicably adjusted and in a short time the captain started away on another voyage. On his return he was met by his friend and after mutual greetings inquiry was made as to that house. "Oh," said the friend, "that's all done and tomorrow morning we'll get the carpenter and go out and look it over." They went and walked all around outside and on the inside of the lower rooms, and the captain expressed himself as very much pleased with the job. "Ah!" he said, "you carried out my ideas exactly; now we'll look over the next floor." "All right," said the carpenter, "wait 'till I get a ladder." "Ladder," roared the captain, "what do we want a ladder for?" "Why, so we can get into the second story through a window; there is no other way of getting up there, as you didn't have any stairs on your plan," said "Chips."

A Winchester gentleman complains to THE SPECTATOR that rent is primarily responsible for whatever increase there has been in the cost of the necessities of life. This Winchester gentleman is like a great many other people, who have had no experience in real estate holding, in looking upon the average landlord as a leach and an oppressor. There is a fiction that the owner of real estate, whether business property or dwellings, has only to mark up rents, rather than shoulder any burdens consequent upon taxation and advancing costs, but many a landlord here in Winchester and elsewhere knows better. He could dilate, were it deemed necessary, upon factors which are too often ignored or unknown. There is the investment to take into account, then the taxes and insurance, the items of wear and tear, or depreciation, and finally the losses, either from failure of tenants to pay their bills or else from inability to keep property constantly rented. With reduced hours of labor and increased wages, the upkeep is considerable even when buildings are anything but old; while for new construction, the total cost shows a significant increase in comparison with the figures of recent years.

A list of the men and women here in Winchester who seek trouble would be one of considerable length. It is Orison Sweet Marden who writes:

"One reason why so many fail or plod along in mediocrity is because they see so many obstacles and difficulties. These loom up so threateningly that they lose heart to win. They see so many difficulties that they are in a discouraged condition most of the time, and this mental attitude is fatal to achievement, for it makes the mind negative, non-creative. It is confidence and hope that call out the faculties and multiply their creative, producing power. 'The habit of dwelling on difficulties and magnifying them weakens the character and paralyzes the initiative in such a way as to hinder one from ever daring to undertake great things. The man who sees the obstacles more clearly than anything else is not the man to attempt to do any great thing. The man who does things is the man who sees the end and defies obstacles."

"Napoleon did not see the Alps, which seemed impassable to his generals; that is, his confidence that he could take his army over these mountains into Italy was so great that the difficulties which seemed overwhelming to others had no power to discourage him."

"I have never known a person who magnifies difficulties, who talks a great deal about obstacles, to do great things. It is the man who persists in seeing his ideal, who ignores obstacles, absolutely refusing to see failure, who clings to his confidence in victory, success, that wins out in whatever he undertakes."

A good Winchester gentleman who is interested in the insane and their welfare advises more men and women to visit these institutions and extend to the insane the glad hand and help them to recover their brain power. In one of the State asylums down in Virginia handshakes and kindly words are doing more for the patients than medicine. A rule which is strictly enforced in the asylum is to shake hands with every one of the inmates of the institution daily and to make inquiries regarding their condition. The method is said to be very important in its affects in two directions. In the first place those who are insane appreciate sympathy and cordiality on the part of physicians and others, and it produces a cheerful spirit which improves their condition. Again it is said that those who are familiar with mental diseases get a very good idea of the condition of their patients by the manner in which they shake hands and the conversation makes it possible to get a better idea of individual cases. Everyone will agree with THE SPECTATOR that it is better to try and effect a cure of an insane person by handshaking than it is by pulling, and the latter treatment has been in operation in some states, according to developments.

THE SPECTATOR.

CRITICISMS OF THE PUBLIC SCHOOL

Current criticisms of the public school are discussed in a report just issued by the United States Bureau of Education. Among other things, the contention that the "three R's" are neglected in the modern school is answered with the emphatic statement that "the three R's are better taught to-day than they were 50 or 60 years ago."

"We frequently hear that there are 'too many subjects,' 'too many fads and frills,' and hence neglect of the three R's," says the report. "The critics who utter this sort of criticism seldom agree on exactly what the fads and frills are, but they invariably look back to a golden past when the so-called 'fundamentals,' reading, writing and arithmetic, were taught in such a way as never to be forgotten. As a matter of fact, the system of to-day is immeasurably ahead of the school system of the past. The growth has been steady. Whatever may be said against the enrichment of the course of study, its 'fads and frills,' the contention that the essentials, so called, have suffered in comparison with the past, falls flat."

In discussing current criticism generally, the report finds that much of the criticism of the public schools of to-day is due to a marked change in the purpose of public education. "The charge of a curriculum 'behind the times,' and the demand for vocational subjects, represent no mere call for different school subjects as such, but a complete transformation in the idea of what the public school should do."

"Those who criticize the bookish curriculum of the public school, whether elementary or high school, are really striving for what they conceive to be the changed purpose of education. To reach all the children of all the people with the kind of training that will make them not merely intelligent in respect to things that are in books, but will equip them directly for the kind of life, economic and social, which they will lead when they leave school; while those who oppose the innovations do so because they do not concede this broader, though apparently more specialized, purpose."

FUNERAL OF MRS. TILLEY

Prayers were held over the remains of Mrs. Catherine C. Tilley, who died last Friday at the home of her son, Mr. George W. Tilley of Cutting street on Saturday evening. The remains were taken to Newport, R. I., where funeral services were held on Sunday afternoon. The burial was at Newport.

Mrs. Tilley was 95 years of age at the time of her death, and enjoyed the distinction of being the oldest person in Winchester. Some weeks ago she fell and received a fractured hip, and it was the effects of this accident which caused her death.

Mrs. Tilley was born in Brookfield, November 28, 1818, and was the daughter of Robert and Lois Lawton. Her great-grandfather, William Lawton, was a Minute Man in the War of the Revolution. She came of a long-lived family, her father living to the age of 91, and her mother was 86 at her death. Up to the time of her accident she was in remarkably good health for one of her age. Beyond a slight impairment of her hearing she was in possession of all her faculties to a remarkable degree. She walked about a great deal and frequently did her own shopping unattended at the centre of the town, about a half mile from her home.

She was the oldest of 10 children, a brother and three sisters surviving her. They are Charles Lawton of Everett, Mrs. Phoebe Brownell of Little Compton, R. I., Mrs. Louise Burdett of Denver, Colo., and Mrs. Amelia Fernald of South West Harbor, Me. She was married June 27, 1852, to Edward L. Tilley of Leverett, who died several years ago. She leaves a son, George W. Tilley, with whom she had made her home for a number of years.

N. E. REPRESENTATIVE FROM WINCHESTER

Mr. E. C. Wixom, principal of the High School, who has been spending the summer at the Columbia Summer School, N. Y., left this week for Dunkirk, N. Y. Next week he will visit Trumansburg, N. Y., after which he will return to take up his duties here at Winchester.

The Columbia Summer School, which he has been attending, has 4539 students in regular attendance, and over 60 per cent of them are engaged in some form of educational work. There are 312 from New England and 138 from Massachusetts.

Mr. Wixom has been chosen as the Massachusetts representative in the New England Association of Teachers in the Columbia University summer session.

Mr. Patrick T. Walsh of Highland avenue has a new Westcott "6" touring car. The auto is of the latest 1914 design, and one of the finest of the month's new cars.

REUNION AT OLD HOMESTEAD.

A delightful family reunion at the late Edward Smalley homestead, South Harwich, last Friday was one of those rare occasions that show how dear to the heart are the scenes of childhood when such an opportunity brings the fond recollections so vividly in view.

The party numbering 30 took possession of the old home, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Hammond being the prime movers. Winchester, Milton, Boston and Baltimore relatives joined with Harwich in the festivities. Games, dancing, etc., were enjoyed, and Mr. David L. Small furnished music throughout the day.

At 1.30 p. m. a bountiful collation was spread consisting of quahog chowder, stewed clams, hot coffee, cakes, fruit etc.

The surprise of the day was when Mr. and Mrs. Hammond, dressed in bridal robes, and to the step of a wedding march, entered the room and received. This bridal couple of 38 years ago renewed their youth amid a halo that showed how lightly the years have dealt with them. The bridal dress was that of her sister's worn 62 years ago. The veil was caught by lilies from the nearby woods, and the huge bouquet she carried was of wild roses. A little son of Mr. William Corliss of Winchester, Gordon, acted the part of page.

A male quartette from among those present sang a number of selections. Remarks were listened to from Mr. Hammond, Mr. Asa L. Jones, Mr. Geo. R. Nugent of Winchester, Mr. Edward B. Smalley of Winchester, a grandson of the late Edward Smalley, and others.

It was a day of cherished memories and happy reminiscences. The dear old home resounded with a cheer and gaiety that has not been witnessed there before in years. It was voted to have a similar meeting in the summer of 1914, and the hope was expressed that every one present on this occasion would also be present next year.

AN UNJUST TAX.

The Melrose News thus refers to one of the most unjust taxes ever forced upon the Metropolitan District:

"For the past three years the tax payers of this city together with the other cities of the metropolitan district have been obliged to pay towards the Charles river basin debt. These payments are to continue in a greater or less degree for 37 years more. To no modern sang somebody in the legislature of 1910, or before, slipped one over the members from the metropolitan district. The Charles river basin is a benefit to Boston and Cambridge alone. It has improved property and has or will raise values. It is in no way participated in by the people of this city, as are the parks and boulevards. We can look at the basin if we ride or walk over the Charles river bridges, but it looked about the same before our city was made to pay a few thousands a year to enable us to look at it as a basin. If we are invited to a Beacon street residence we can look upon the basin from the rear windows. It is as absurd to ask us to keep paying out money for its maintenance for forty years as it would be to ask Boston and Cambridge to assist in maintaining our high school. The tax upon us is unfair and unjust and we believe a bill should be presented at the next legislature relieving us, together with the other places in the district, of this uncalled for burden."—[Melrose News.]

Winchester is called upon to pay this year $1341.59 for this water park for Boston and Cambridge.

Another "Hopeless Case"

He Astonished the Doctors—Receives Without Operation—Used Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy.

Mr. James Lettice, of Canajoharie, N. Y., writes:

"Some years ago I was attacked with fearful pains in my back and side. I could not control my kidneys at all, and what came from them was mucous and blood. I was in a terrible state and suffered intensely. A prominent physician of Albany, N. Y., decided that an operation was all that would save me. I dreaded that and commenced to take Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy. I felt better almost immediately. When I had taken about two bottles, the flow from the bladder was much cleaner, the pain stopped. I was saved from the surgeon's knife and am now well."

The above letter was written in 1900. To prove that the benefit he obtained from Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy was permanent, read what he says in a recent letter (in 1912):

"I am enjoying the best of health. Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy cured me permanently. I have answered many letters asking about it. I shall keep on praising it."

Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy has had nearly 40 years of great success in Kidney, Liver and Blood disorders. Not a "patent" medicine, but a physician's prescription, prepared for universal use. Write to-day to Dr. David Kennedy Co., Rondout, N. Y., for a free trial bottle and booklet of valuable medical advice. Large bottles sold by 40,000 druggists.

The carcass of a dead dog, floating with other refuse at the boom log in the Mill pond near the sidewalk at the corner of our beautiful Parkway and Main street, attracted the attention of passers-by last week. The body was in an advanced stage of decay and was not a wholesome sight. The odor was beyond mention. The refuse in which it was floating was of a hardly more savory nature. The Editor visited the spot himself to verify the reports, and found that nothing had been exaggerated. Officer McAnley was informed of the situation, and he had the carcass removed at once. It was only a week or so ago that we mentioned in our columns the nauseating stench which arose at the Mt. Vernon street bridge, and which could be noticed for a considerable distance before the bridge was reached. It would seem high time that some definite action was taken regarding the foul and positively filthy condition of the river. For a town with the high ideals sought for, and in most instances attained, this river flowing through our midst is a disgrace, and not only that, but it must certainly be a menace to health. Anyone in doubt need only take a walk about its shores. Shall this river be continued as a sewer and disposal place for dead animals?

Assessor George H. Carter is the formulator of one of the best schemes to boom Winchester that we have seen for a long time. It is a plan showing the cities and towns surrounding Winchester and giving their tax rates for this year. This clever idea can be seen on first page.

Mr. and Mrs. Roger H. Hurd of Cabot street are spending the month at Kennebunk Beach, Me.

Mrs. Ada Wilberger is at Hedding, N. H., during the remainder of the month.

Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Taft registered early this week at Bretton Woods, where they journeyed in their auto.

Miss Carrie Rice of Fall River, is the guest of her sister, Mrs. Richard Taylor, until September.

Miss Cora Emerson of Cross street is at the Winchester Hospital where she was operated on for appendicitis.

Mr. and Miss Belknap of Edgehill road, who were injured Sunday by the overturning of their automobile on Highland avenue, are still confined to their beds, although improving.

Mr. Joseph E. Ryan of Cliff street has accepted the position as private secretary to Mr. Sumner Bird. Mr. Bird ran for governor last year on the Progressive ticket, and will again be the candidate of that party for the office this year. Mr. Ryan is well known as a leading Progressive of this town, and will probably have active interest in the management of the fall campaign.

Dr. Arthur V. Rogers and Mr. Joseph L. S. Barton have plans under way for new houses, which they expect to build this fall on Myopia Hill.

TWO SETS OF CANDIDATES FOR TOWN COMMITTEE.

It is rumored that there will be a split in the Democratic party in town this fall, and instead of the usual filing of one set of papers for members of the Town Committee as heretofore, there will be two separate sets filed.

It is said that last year's committee will be represented by one body, their candidates embracing three of last year's committee and six new names, and an entirely new slate will be put forward by another faction.

It is also reported that Mr. Thomas E. Barrett will oppose Mr. John F. Holland for the nomination for Representative.

AND NOW McCALL

Ex-Congressman McCall is the latest entry in the Republican gubernatorial race. Strictly speaking, Mr. McCall has not entered, but his friends have taken out papers for him to sign an acceptance. The Republican party will be fortunate if it can secure Mr. McCall as a candidate. He is a man of national reputation, a statesman of the larger sort. He enjoys the respect of the Democrats and Independents fully as much as of Republicans. If Colonel Benton could defeat the ex-congressman in a primary contest it would give him a prestige that he could never gain by winning a nomination unopposed. And if Mr. McCall is the victor, the Republicans will have a candidate of whom they can well be proud and with whom they will have every prospect of victory. [Cambridge Chronicle.]

There will be general regret from all parties that Samuel W. McCall will not run for governor of the Commonwealth. The former congressman from Winchester would have appealed to the independent vote of this state as no other candidate. We believe he would have been elected. The avowed candidates before the people are by no means satisfactory. On the Republican side none of them are the men to unite the party and bring back stray voters. The election of any of the candidates would depend more on how weak his opponents might be, rather than on the positive strength of the candidate himself. The governorship of this state is a great office and worthy of the aspirations of her foremost citizens. It is no place for mediocre men. [Melrose News.]

Mr. McCall's time is coming, but it may not be before there is a cleaning up of the present State Committee who dominate the Republican party.

WINCHESTER PAINTERS HELD SOCIAL.

The painters of Winchester and Woburn held another of their socials last week Thursday evening in Lyceum Hall, Winchester. Representatives of all the various unions of Winchester and vicinity to the number of 100 were present. An excellent musical entertainment consisting of vocal and instrumental selections was contributed and greatly enjoyed. Speeches from the leading Union leaders were also very much appreciated. Refreshments were served.

CONTAGIOUS DISEASES.

The following cases of contagious diseases have been reported to the Board of Health for the week ending August 13th:
Typhoid fever 1
Chicken pox 1

DIED AT NORTH SCITUATE.

The many Winchester friends of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph E. Joslin of Wildwood street were shocked to learn the first of the week of the death of their little son, George Burrage, four years old, which occurred very suddenly at their summer home at North Scituate Beach.

The little fellow accompanied his father to the station in the automobile at 9 o'clock. About an hour later he was taken sick, and the doctor was called and he was put to bed. He was taken with convulsions and died before twelve. The cause was diagnosed as acute ptomaine poisoning. Just what the child ate to cause his death has not been determined. He was the youngest of four children.

The family came to their Winchester home Tuesday evening, and funeral services were held from the residence, No. 14 Wildwood street, Wednesday forenoon at eleven o'clock, Rev. John M. Wilson of Lexington, a former pastor, officiating. The burial was in the family lot at Hudson.

FIRST CHURCH OF CHRIST READING ROOM.

For some months First Church of Christ, Scientist, Winchester, has been looking for a suitable location for a Reading Room in the centre of the town, and outside of the Church building, where the room is at present located.

An opportunity to obtain such a location has recently presented itself in the Lane Building about to be erected on Church and Vine streets, and a room on the second floor of this building facing the Common, has been engaged for this purpose.

It is presumed that it will be ready for occupancy about December 1st, at which time the room will be removed from the present location and arrangements made whereby it will be open, not only afternoons as at present, but on certain evenings, announcement of which will be made when the change occurs.

R. A. FISHING TRIP

Members of the Aberjona Council, Royal Arcanum, and friends will go on a fishing trip on Wednesday, August 27th. A special car will leave Winchester Square for Swampscott, at 4:30 in the morning, and on arrival at that place will take the boat for the fishing grounds. The committee having the trip in charge are Ernest Pooley, Peter McDonald and Elmer Schurman. As in past years the trip will prove very enjoyable. Chowder and coffee will be served on the boat as usual.

WINCHESTER CAME BACK.

Saturday, August 9th, the Winchester team made easy work of the Prospect Unions of Cambridge, winning the game 6 to 1. This team shut out on July 4th and expected to have an easy time with us this time but there never was a minute during the game when they were at all dangerous. Their pitcher was easy for the Winchester batters although he held them to two hits on his last appearance here. Roche, Kenney and Tift were the heavy hitters, while Murray pulled off a play on the field that is seldom seen in a game. Tift pitched his usual steady game and fielded his position in big league form.

SELECTMEN'S MEETING.

himself were probably the first on the scene after the first explosion and that they were within 20 or 30 feet of the hole when the second explosion took place, and he came to the conclusion that it was a dangerous thing to have there; that it was an experience which he should not care to go through again; that their families were a little nervous about such things having also had more or less experience with the blasting at the stone quarry which he feared was to start up operations again, and that he hoped that if the fireworks factory was to be re-established within the limits of the town it would be in a more isolated quarter; that there was considerable travel through that part of the town, that children played about there more or less, and that he wished to protest most vigorously against the granting of the permit.

Mr. Barboro raised the point concerning Mr. Davies' remarks that if he was not more than 25 feet away from the second explosion it could not have been very dangerous, in response to which Mr. Davies said that he considered it most emphatically dangerous; that there was a piece of 3 x 4 timber blown out of the hole that came down between himself and Mr. Duncan, and that it was more by good luck than anything else that those who went to the rescue of the men were not hurt or killed by the second explosion.

Mr. Pike endeavored to secure from Mr. Barboro a statement of just what material it was that exploded, but was unable to get any further information than that it was a mixture of gunpowder and coloring materials.

Mr. Barboro stated that there were two kegs of gunpowder in the storehouse with coloring material and various chemicals.

Mr. Everett and Mr. Duncan also called attention to the danger from fire even if there was no direct danger from an explosion itself claiming that at the time of the explosion pieces of burning paper and wood were thrown in all directions and set fire to the grass and shrubbery and that if a strong wind had been blowing that day a serious fire might have resulted.

In response to a question by the Chief of Police, who was present, Mr. Barboro stated that they had a permit to keep on hand three kegs of powder, and in answer to a suggestion that he was allowed to keep only 25 pounds, Mr. Barboro stated that the kegs varied in weight, some containing 10, others 15, and some 25 pounds. The Chief asked whether he had more than he was allowed to keep on hand at the time of the explosion. He stated that he had all that he was authorized to keep and no more, that it was about 10 or 15 pounds; that before the explosion occurred an inspector had been to the place and taken samples of the material, and that he had not taken in any material since that time, that the inspector had examined the building and that he had his report. The Chief of Police inquired whether this was the New York expert, to which Mr. Barboro assented.

The Chief of Police stated that he did not think the proposed location a proper place for the factory; that he did not think it was wanted in town in any event; that if it was a large business and employed a large number of men it might be different, even the two men who were killed lived out of town; that he understood from the State expert that there were several Italian concerns manufacturing fireworks throughout the state, and their buildings were all located in remote places in the woods; that they manufactured their fireworks in the most primitive way by hand; that this place did have a stockade about it at one time, but boys from Woburn broke into it about a year ago and stole some chemicals, went up on a hill and set them off and were burned quite badly; that it was a temptation for boys to go around such a place. Since that time a good high fence has been built about it, but there was more or less passing through there by adults and children; that he had been through there himself and seen the men at work; that he did not know anything personally about the manufacture of fireworks and how much powder they could stand, but would not want to stay around there himself. He would not object to the factory being located in town if there could be found a more isolated place, but he knew of none. He thought as a general proposition it was a bad thing to have about.

In response to a question by Mr.

Davidson, Mr. Barboro said that Mr. Borrelli did not own the land but occupied it under a lease which expired at the end of the year and for which he had paid.

The Chief of the Fire Department said that he thought the present location of the factory, if one was to be licensed, was as good as any other that could be found in the town, that he did not think there was any more danger from the factory, nor half as much, as people in the town are under every day with dynamite being transported through it. The only difference was that they did not know it. There was no danger from explosives if one kept away from them, and it was only a question whether people could be kept away from them entirely. His only suggestion would be that when the men were working they should have a flag or some signal up so that everybody would know it. As far as he was concerned as Chief of the Fire Department he never gave it a thought because if it did get afire it would be gone before the department could get there, and as far as danger went he would sooner have it where people would know about it than off in some wilderness where no one would know it; that as a citizen of the town, however, he would object to the factory being located here.

Mr. Barboro stated that Mr. Borrelli had been in the business 19 years and this was the first accident he had ever had.

Mr. Daly advised Mr. Barboro that he seemed to be treating the matter rather lightly in view of the fact that the explosion of whatever material it might have been had caused the death of two men, and that if it were possible to answer Mr. Pike's question as to the nature of the material that had exploded rather than to avoid it, it would put him in better light before the Board.

Mr. Barboro consulted with Mr. Borrelli and reported that he said that if he could have a hearing before chemists or men who understood these materials and knew just what they were talking about he could explain that.

Mr. Daly asked why he did not bring his experts before the Board which was the board of jurisdiction.

Mr. Barboro stated that Mr. Borrelli said that if granted a permit he would individually agree that nothing like the past explosion would happen again because he would not leave it to others but would manufacture his own goods.

The Chief of Police asked whether the men making the fireworks were experienced firework makers or simply men who came in there to do what they were told.

Mr. Barboro stated that one of the men had had 40 years' experience in that line. The other two were making up the paper wrappers and were not handling the powder and chemicals, and of course, were not so experienced; that they knew their danger and were told to be careful.

Mr. Davidson asked whether the man who had caused the explosion was the man with 40 years' experience, to which Mr. Barboro replied that he was.

There being no further remarks offered by the petitioners or remonstrants the hearing was declared closed, and it was VOTED, That the petition of the New England Fireworks Company presented to this Board July 21, 1913, for permission to use certain buildings or structures to be erected on the Nelson land off Cross street for the keeping, storage, manufacture, and sale of gunpowder, dynamite and other explosives, and the manufacture of firecrackers or fireworks therein, is hereby denied.

The resignation of Bernard F. Mathews as ballot clerk was received to take effect at once and was accepted. Joseph D. Mawn of 44 Canal street was nominated to serve as teller at elections for the period ending March 31, 1914, the nomination to hold over one week under the rules.

A communication was received from Mathew Hale, Chairman Massachusetts State Committee of the Progressive Party of Massachusetts, requesting that this Board appoint as election officers two members of the Progressive Party under Chapter 835, Sections 234 and 235, claiming that these provisions of the law were made to cover just such a contingency as has arisen in this state where three great parties are contesting in an election, the result of which is admitted to be uncertain and the election machinery was entirely in the hands of two of these parties that it must be apparent that the Progressive Party should have at least two inspectors in every voting place in the coming primary and election. The matter was referred to the Committee on Accounts and Elections.

The Chief Engineer of the Fire Department submitted for the approval of the Board the names of Daniel J. O'Leary, 16 Kendall street, and John Richardson, 1544 Washington street, to act as substitutes in the Fire Department and the appointments were approved.

Information coming to the Board through the Health Department that a licensed hawk and peddler of Winchester had violated a Town By-law by dumping refuse in the street, it was voted to notify him that this Board would hear him at 8 o'clock Monday night, August 18, as to whether there were any reasons why his license should not be revoked, a copy of this vote to be sent to the Board of Health.

Mr. Daly reported for the Committee on Highways in the matter of the Forest street turnout that the plan submitted to the Bay State officials by the Town Engineer was changed to this extent, that the land to be taken was not quite so long as is shown on the plan, but practically all the widening is to be done on the frontage of the Hoyt estate on the southerly side of Forest street, the turnout to be in about the same location as the existing one but much longer and extending westerly. Mr. Gray of the Bay State, however, felt that the Board should act with their Company in the purchase, the construction of the wall, and the other matters pertaining to the widening of the turnout. It was the opinion of the Committee that the Board of Selectmen should not take any part whatever or oblige the town to do anything in connection there-

NOVEL EXHIBIT OF TEETH AND CHILDREN

One of the contributors to the program of the Fourth International Congress on School Hygiene at Buffalo the last week in August will be Miss Cordelia L. O'Neill. Miss O'Neill is principal of Marion School, one of the public grammar schools in the Ghetto District of Cleveland, Ohio. Miss O'Neill's paper will be on the subject of teeth, in particular the teeth of her school children, and her discussion will be illustrated by a number of living subjects—that is, boys and girls who were in her school during the year of 1910.

Miss O'Neill's attention was called to the teeth of her children early in the year of 1909, when the Board of Education granted permission for an inquiry to be made by Dr. W. G. Ebersole, as chairman of the Oral Hygiene Committee of the National Dental Association. Dr. Ebersole desired to see what effect bad teeth had upon the pupil's general health and efficiency. His preliminary examination included an inspection of the teeth of the 846 children in Marion School, and out of these 846 only three children were found whose teeth were in perfect condition. Dr. Ebersole requested that a special class be formed for the purpose of further observation and study.

Miss O'Neill's experimental class in teeth was organized in May 1910, the children being selected at random from the fourth to the seventh grades inclusive. Her pupils were chosen from among those having the greatest number of defects. Among these pupils were some of her best scholars, as well as some of her worst. In the words of Miss O'Neill, "The class typically represented the school."

Dr. Ebersole then explained what was to be required of them: (1) They were to have their teeth put into perfect condition at no expense to themselves. (2) They were to brush their teeth carefully three times a day. (3) They were to masticate their food properly, not using liquid with solid food. (4) They were to attend any and every meeting of the class called, and take from time to time psychological tests, and were to conform to regulations laid down by a supervising nurse. Dr. Ebersole promised a five dollar gold piece to each pupil who lived up to the requirements, and the children were each given a toothbrush and a plain drinking glass.

In the course of their instruction the children were told how to care for their teeth properly and also how to eat their food according to hygienic principles. In September they were assembled again and given a test in brushing their teeth. In the meantime two dentists were treating the teeth of each child in the class.

Miss O'Neill says at the beginning of the test her school children were of various types. There were some who were well-behaved, earnest and bright, and there were some who were disobedient, reckless and troublesome. All in all they were by no means prepossessing in appearance.

"One of the brightest and nicest girls in the class suffered very frequently from headache," she writes. "Most of them had sallow, muddy complexions, and three of the pupils were on the point of being taken into the juvenile court for truancy. One little boy was a candidate for the boys' school because of incorrigibility. He was a nuisance in the school yard. There were others who were a terror, both in the school and outside." As time went on, however, there was a change noted. Each pupil was closely watched and each pupil, according to Miss O'Neill, showed a marked improvement. One little girl subject to sick headaches, not only was entirely cured, but her mother who followed the directions laid down for her daughter, found relief from the same trouble. Speaking of her class as a whole, Miss O'Neill says: "Complexions cleared, a spirit of self-respect was manifested; truancy and incorrigibility in the children disappeared."

Dr. A. G. W. Wallin, psychologist, who has since become Director of the Psychological Clinic in the University of Pittsburgh, was chosen for the purpose of making the psychological tests of the Cleveland Class. It was desired to get definite information on the improvement, if any, in the mental efficiency of the school children. In all a series of six tests were given to ascertain standards in memory, accuracy of perception, rapidity and accuracy of thought and spontaneity of association and differentiation. Of these tests, two were made before the work was begun on the children's teeth, two while the work was being done, and two a sufficient length of time after the month has been put into perfect condition.

Regarding these tests, Dr. Ebersole says: "That increase in working efficiency which occurs usually or regularly during the year's growth of a child, is the only deduction which should be made from the figures represented in connection with the report of the class. All other increase in working efficiency must be credited absolutely and unequivocally to the results obtained by correcting faulty conditions, and teaching the children to properly use and care for their mouths. These series of experiments taken on 10 public school children showed an average increase in working efficiency of 99.8 per cent for the twenty-seven pupils finishing the test. In addition to those shown from a physical standpoint, the increase in health, strength and beauty was so marked as to be considered marvelous by those who watched the development of results from this work."

Such is the message Miss O'Neill and her school children will carry to the Congress on School Hygiene at Buffalo the last week in August, when an endeavor will be made by the National Mouth Hygiene Association to point out the serious need of dental inspection in public schools.

The president of the Congress is Mr. Charles W. Eliot, President Emeritus of Harvard University. The Secretary-general is Dr. Thomas A. Storey of the College of the City of New York.

AUTO WENT OVER TWELVE FOOT BANK

As the big touring car of Mr. Howard Belknap of 17 Ridgefield road was going up the Forest street end of Highland avenue Sunday afternoon shortly after 5 o'clock, it skidded and the driver lost control of it. The car ran across the road, broke down a group of three ash trees, and plunged over the twelve foot wall into the brook below. It landed on its side, turned completely around.

In the car were Mr. and Mrs. Belknap and a gentleman and lady friend. The party escaped miraculously from serious injury. One of the men lost some teeth and one lady was seriously bruised, besides which the whole party were badly shaken up and unnerved by their thrilling experience. They were taken to their home in a passing car.

STRUCK BY AUTO IN CENTRE

Sunday afternoon about 2 o'clock, Michael Flaherty of South Boston, while waiting for a car in front of Allen's Pharmacy, stepped off the sidewalk and was struck and knocked down by an automobile owned by the Gibby Foundry Co., of East Boston, operated by M. C. Kinnear, also of East Boston.

Flaherty was somewhat bruised, but not injured of any consequence, and was able to continue on his way.

EQUAL SUFFRAGE

DEPARTMENT.

Conducted by Winchester League.

According to recent statements the Anti-Suffragists consider it far more desirable for California to spend its money on a building for the Panama Exposition than on up-to-date legislation for mothers' pensions, a proper minimum wage for women and minors and the adequate housing of the poor, not to mention the suppression of vice and intemperance. For ladies who claim to be working for the best interests of humanity this attitude is queer; it smacks a little of the views held by those who oppose the best interests of humanity because they make more money under the present bad conditions. To work women and children long hours for insufficient wages, to rent houses for business, the extermination of which is the only way to insure the welfare of future generations, is very profitable.

The women voters of California have a different idea from that evidently influencing some eastern women who criticize them; they realize what it will mean to bring up the children in a state where vicious practices of all sorts are suppressed. Any one who can walk along the streets of Boston and not envy California these new laws, is blind to everything but the fear of decreased dividends and rentals.

This is the real basis of opposition to woman suffrage. There is apparently not a single case on record of an anti who considered herself unfit to vote. No, her fear always is that the other women are not fit. By these "other women" she means those who live under different economic conditions from hers. These "other women" will try to change these conditions, of course. In the last analysis opposition to equal suffrage is opposition to equality of opportunity of all kinds, not as between the sexes but as between the classes.

For the women opposed to equal suffrage to say they "claim exemption from the duty of voting" is to desert from women's work in the world. It is just as if a few soldiers in an army armed with bows and arrows had refused to fight if compelled to take up the new weapon, the gun. Woman is engaged in the great battle against evil and for anyone to refuse to avail herself of the most powerful weapon on earth is to show that she is satisfied with conditions as they are. But when she tries to prevent other broader women from using this weapon she is a traitor to the very cause she professes allegiance to, woman's cause, the purity of the home, the safety of the children.

WINCHESTER BOYS LOST

The Winchester Playground Junior team played the Cambridge Field team on Manchester Field last Friday afternoon, being defeated by the score of 3 to 2. The game was well played and the Winchester boys came very near being victorious. Snodgrass at first and Conlon, the Cambridge second baseman, excelled for the play.

AUTO TIPPED OVER.

Considerable comment was caused the first of the week by reports of an auto accident on Forrest street Saturday noon. Closely followed by the accident of Sunday on Highland avenue, it was confused by many with the latter.

Saturday's accident was not serious, although the auto was turned over. It appears that while Mr. Elmer Schurman, the electrician, was driving down Forrest street with a friend, a tire burst just before the car reached Maple road. The machine got out of control and struck a telegraph pole. It ran over the gutter, across the sidewalk, and turned over on the grounds of the old A. C. Bell estate.

Fortunately neither of the occupants were injured. The auto was noticed by a number of people, which caused much comment, and numerous stories were in circulation regarding the accident.

Unexpected Conclusions.

The very stones of the Great Pyramid of Gizeh are crying out in no uncertain tones. Every touch of the massive structure, with unerring precision, reveals the solutions to problems which for centuries civilized nations have spent fabulous sums in vain to find and which men of science have encountered hardships to analyze.

This wonderful testimony of the Great Stone Witness, with its general description and storehouse of Truth, scientific, historic and prophetic, with Bible allusions to it, the importance of its location and verifications of astronomical and geographical deductions, is an extensive chapter of a volume which may be obtained by sending 35 cents to the Watch Tower Society, 17 Hicks Street, Brooklyn.

RHEUMATISM

This nerve-racking disease is caused from impure blood and uric acid poison. External applications sometimes give temporary relief but won't cure; the sure way to secure permanent results is to thoroughly eradicate from the blood all the impurities. Nothing on earth will drive out the poisons from your system, keep the bowels, kidneys and liver in good condition as SEVEN BARKS, the wonderful remedy that has proved its great merits the past 42 years.

SEVEN BARKS can be had of all druggists, at 50 cents per bottle. Give it a good trial and watch your rheumatism disappear. LYMAN BROWN, 68 Murray St., New York, N.Y.

WHAT, WHEN AND HOW TO EAT

Sunstrokes and Heat Prostrations May be Due to Improper Eating.

By EUGENE CHRISTIAN, F. S. D.

[Copyright, 1912, by American Press Association.]

THE normal temperature of the human body is about 99 degrees F. Life can exist only within a range of about 10 degrees F. We are alarmed if the clinical thermometer shows a change in the temperature of our blood of two degrees.

When we consider the narrow range of temperatures within which human life can exist and also consider that the temperature of the atmosphere in which we live often changes more than 100 degrees during the year it can be readily seen how important it is to keep the blood at an even temperature in a country where the atmospheric changes are so great. By the wonderful adjustment of the human body, however, this can be done very easily if we will observe a few simple laws that control body heat. The most important of these laws is that of nutrition (food and drink).

The temperature of the body is raised by three things:

First.—The temperature of the atmosphere.

Second.—Our activity (work).

Third.—The food or fuel we take into the stomach.

Of course we have but little control over the atmosphere, and the average person whose bread depends upon his work has but little control over this source of body heat, but it is within the power of every one to control very largely the heat of the body by the food eaten.

An Old Theory Corrected.

Heat and energy being synonymous terms, especially as applied to mechanics, it has been believed by people for many centuries that in order to keep the body supplied with the maximum of energy the same amount of heat producing foods should be taken winter and summer regardless of atmospheric changes. Modern science has proved this theory to be incorrect.

WE ARE AT OUR BEST IN SUMMER.

Every atom of food taken into the body in excess of the amount needed to keep the temperature up to normal must be cast out at a tremendous expense of energy, thus producing heat that cannot be utilized, or it must be stored up in the form of fat, and every pennyweight of fat in the body in excess of the amount needed is a dead weight that furnishes no item of strength to aid its own support and also becomes a source of very great danger during a hot weather.

Hot Making Foods.

Starches, sweets and fats are the greatest heat making foods, and at the same time they are the three staple articles of diet for a majority of civilized people. Fat is used by the body almost wholly for making heat.

Corn, wheat, rye, barley, oats, rice and potatoes, all sweets, honey, sugar and sirups are classed as carbohydrate (starch and sugar compounds).

The principal fat foods are butter, cream, olive oil, nuts and meat. While meat as usually served contains only from 10 to 15 per cent fat, its heat making property is not confined to the fat element. Meat contains a large amount of uric acid and a great deal of connective tissue which is nonnutritive and which must be cast out of the body by the exercise of energy (heat). While uric acid is a high irritant and sets up what might be termed a local fever. The use of meat as a food therefore causes excessive heat, because the body is constantly employed in throwing off and disposing of the uric acid and other waste decomposition products contained in flesh food.

The best meat gives to the body only about 30 per cent nutrition (10 per cent fat and 20 per cent protein). The remaining 70 per cent is nonnutritive tissue and water. The water, of course, being laden with the poisonous products that are always in process of elimination from the animal body, is a source of heat or stimulation that furnishes no energy.

Aside from the local fever produced by the uric acid which is residual in meat, it takes considerable energy and body heat to cast out and dispose of this 70 per cent of waste matter. This heat must be made and this energy expended in addition to or in excess of that required in the daily work.

One Cause of Sunstrokes.

All grain products, breads, pastries, macaroni, breakfast foods, etc., belong to the starch family, and these constitute the principal diet of a large majority of people both winter and summer. These are all heat producing foods, and if the body does not need them the surplus which cannot be used undergoes decomposition, which produces what we call auto-intoxication.

Thus the circulation is quickened, the heart is worked overtime, the blood becomes superheated in the effort of nature to rid the body of these poisons. This is disease. On the other hand, if digestion and assimilation are good and the body stores them up in the form of fat, this becomes one of the primary causes of sunstrokes and heat prostrations.

This group of foods need not be discontinued or eliminated from the diet entirely, but the quantity should be limited to the amount the body actually needs. This is the true science of feeding which all should understand.

The mild soda fountain drink, cold fruit juices and ices are all good, but sweet drinks should be avoided during hot weather.

The Value of Pure Water.

Of all drinks plain cold water is the best. If an abundance of cool water was drunk and a reasonable amount of activity taken the body could be given a real spring house-cleaning and the hot day, instead of being a menace to life, could be made a thing to be desired. Instead of resting in the shade, lolling upon a seacoast veranda and doing everything to avoid the heat, people should learn how to utilize heat so as to increase elimination of body poison and thus promote health.

They should learn how to select their food and drink, first, so as to give the body normal heat and energy under the varying conditions of atmospheric temperature; second, how to combine their food at each meal so it would be chemically harmonious and, third, how to proportion it so that they would not be overfed on some elements of nutrition while underfed on others.

By a knowledge and observance of these facts the hot day would be welcome; it would be made a good day; it would not be feared. In fact, summer is the time when we should be at our best. We can get out into the open air, we can divest ourselves of surplus clothing, and we can become revitalized from the sunshine and fresh ozone.

At this season of the year nature supplies us with every article of food we need fresh and in its most delicious form with which to rebuild and revitalize the body. That we do not enjoy these things and profit by the advantages of summer is because we do not know how to utilize nature's forces and opportunities.

Most Important Factor in Digestion.

Pure water is the most important factor in the digestion and assimilation of food and elimination of waste. Inasmuch as the body is nearly two-thirds water, it follows that the diet should be composed of about 60 per cent moisture. The old theory of dietitians that no water should be taken with meals was based upon the hypothesis that water so diluted the gastric juice that it would not digest the food. Actual practice has proved this thesis to be untrue. Water is the great universal solvent, and the hydrochloric acid of the stomach is only a helper, as it were, in the dissolution or the preparation of food for digestion.

If a meal consists of watery food, such as fresh vegetables, salads, etc., then the drinking of water is unnecessary, but where the meal is composed of solids then water should be taken to make up 60 per cent of the total.

If more water is drunk than is necessary for this purpose the excess will pass off and the stomach will only retain the necessary amount, but if the quantity of moisture is insufficient the stomach calls to its aid an excess of hydrochloric acid, the strength of which has a tendency to crystallize the starch atom (especially cereal starch), thereby causing the blood crystals, which is one of the primary causes of rheumatism, gout, lumbago, arteriosclerosis (hardening of the arteries) and all disorders caused by congestion throughout the capillary and arterial system.

Nothing Like Water if It's Pure.

The most common disorder among civilized people is hydrochloric acid fermentation. Copious water drinking with meals is the logical remedy for this disorder.

Insufficient water taken with food becomes at once the principal cause of superacidity, intestinal congestion (constipation), fermentation, intestinal gas and the long train of ills that follow these disorders.

Water is also a valuable agent in the elimination of body poisons. The liberal use of water keeps the blood supplied with the necessary moisture, and that excess which is eliminated through the kidneys carries away poisons that would reside in the body very much to the detriment of health. It is difficult, therefore, to drink too much pure water, but much care should be exercised that it is pure, or at least free from lime and mineral deposits. The best water is pure water, free from mineral substances; the best time to take it is with your meals.

PRICE FIVE CENTS

THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

Information of Interest to Parents and Scholars.

Winchester public schools will open for the school year 1913-1914 on Monday, September 8, at 8:30 a. m.

High School examinations for pupils who wish to make up work will be held in the High School building on Saturday, September 6, beginning at 9 a. m.

For admission to Kindergarten and first grades, children must have been vaccinated, or be certified by a physician as not fit subjects for vaccination and be four and one-half years or five and one-half years old respectively, before October first, 1913. Pupils who were in our schools last year were notified in June at which building and grade to report. Those who come from other schools will be admitted to the grade to which they were promoted at the end of the last school year. In case of doubt as to which building they should attend inquiry should be made at the office of the Superintendent of Schools.

Sessions and hours will be as heretofore. Kindergarten forenoon session only; grades I to VI, inclusive, 8:30-11:45 a. m., and 1:15-3:00 p. m.; grades VII to IX, inclusive, and High School, 8:30 a. m. to 1:30 p. m. Beginning with September 8th, the high school lunch counter will be in charge of the high school cooking classes under the direction of Miss Jennie P. Clement, teacher of Cooking. The recess period will extend from 11:40 a. m. to 12:05 p. m.

Permission has been received from the Metropolitan Park Commission through the courtesy of Mr. David N. Skillings, in accordance with which Miss Comerford, Supervisor of Physical Training, will continue the classes in swimming at the bath house at upper Mystic Lake, which Miss Tipton began in June. The hours will be from 2:30 to 5 each afternoon the weather permitting.

Mr. N. M. Nichols, Custodian of School Buildings, has had all the buildings thoroughly cleaned during the summer, and with the painting and other repairs, they are now in good physical condition.

Since the list of teachers was published in the Star last week Miss Mary I. Hurley, first grade in the Chapin, has resigned to get married. Her place has been filled by the transfer of Miss Kathryn E. Mawn from the third grade. For Miss Mawn's room, Miss Agnes Cullen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John M. Cullen, 54 Richardson street, Winchester, has been appointed. Miss Cullen is a graduate of Lowell Normal School, and for the last two years has been teaching in St. Joseph's School in Boston. To accept the position in Winchester she resigns an appointment to the seventh grade in a grammar school in Merrimack.

Superintendent Schuyler F. Herron left on Saturday, August 16, for Cobleskill, N. Y., where he will spend the rest of his vacation before going to the Fourth International Congress of School Hygiene, which will be held in Buffalo the week of August 25-30. Mr. Herron is a delegate at the Congress from Massachusetts by appointment of the Education Department and also of Governor Foss. He will return about September first.

The teachers will generally return on Friday or Saturday of the first week in September, as high school examinations will begin on Saturday, September 6, and at four o'clock there will be a general meeting of all teachers with the Superintendent of Schools in the Prince School building.

Mr. E. C. Wixom, Principal of the High School, has spent the summer in post-graduate study at Columbia University and in Dunkirk and Trumansburg, New York. He will return the last week in August, and during the first week in September may be found in his office in the High School building from 8:30 a. m. to 12 noon and 1 p. m. to 5 p. m.

The office of the Superintendent of Schools in the Prince School building is open every day as usual from 8 a. m. to 5 p. m. except on Saturday, when the hour is from 9 a. m. to 12 noon.

It was hoped to get enough to provide as many more seats as at present but the fans are slow at coming around although they seem to enjoy the seats very much, as it is hard to get one after three o'clock of the days of the games.

G. T. DAVIDSON.

Captain and Mrs. D. E. Howard of Fairview avenue, Arlington, quietly observed their 35th wedding anniversary Sunday. Mr. and Mrs. Howard are former residents of Winchester, but are now living with their son in Arlington. Mr. Howard is the well known custodian of Lyceum Building this town. Mrs. Howard is not enjoying good health, and for that reason there was no public celebration of the event.

WANTED—LOCATION FOR A WATERING TROUGH.

Any person knowing of a location on Cambridge street that will meet with the approval of the abutments are kindly asked to communicate with the Board of Selectmen.

It appears that no one wants a trough in front of their premises but the horses and even they are not saying much aloud. For a great many years horses used to procure liquid refreshment at the corner of High and Cambridge streets, and the place was always a mud puddle and full of holes made in the soft earth by the wheels of heavy vehicles. There is no question but what a drinking place was needed, as every horse that passed stuck its nose into the cooling water and filled up on the same. Again, too, conditions were bad for the horses as no one in particular kept the trough clean, and the consequence might be a case of glanders or some other contagious horse disease.

Some years ago the State Highway Commission took over Cambridge street for a state highway and rebuilt it, when the watering trough disappeared. About this time Mr. Oren C. Sanborn erected his handsome residence on the large tract of land that took in the corner of Cambridge and High streets, and now with the beautifully laid out grounds, it has become the show place of Winchester. Evidently this was no place for the old conditions—they would be damaging and also discouraging to improvements, and therefore it was no surprise to learn that Mr. Sanborn was opposed to a trough nearly in front of his estate and close to his driveway.

Agitation by lovers of horses for a watering place has been going on for several years, but the selection of a location has been a puzzle to the Selectmen. It was proposed to place it in the triangle at the corner of Cambridge street and Everett avenue. The mere suggestion brought forth many protests. Then there was a lull; more agitation for the trough, and further consideration by the Selectmen, with considerable backing and filling by the Board—first the Everett avenue location, then the High street site, and others—they hardly knew what disposition to make of the vexatious question. Finally the old location at the corner of Cambridge and High streets was fixed upon. Mr. Sanborn went before the Board and protested, but the Selectmen would not change their decision. Cambridge street being a State Highway, Mr. Sanborn then appealed to the State Highway Commission and his objection to having the trough in front of his estate was sustained, and therefore it will not go there. And who shall say that Mr. Sanborn was not right in objecting to a nuisance at his front gateway. In the meantime the Selectmen are looking for a location that will not meet with objection from abutments.

REAL ESTATE NEWS.

Mrs. M. G. Reynolds, formerly of this town and now of Old Orchard, has sublet the house No. 432 Main street, owned by Mrs. Charles Hall of Winchester, to Mr. Ralph Gilbert, vice-president of the Bowker Insecticide Company of Boston, Mass.

Mr. Sherwood H. Hall of Brookline has leased the estate No. 60 Lloyd street, corner Mystic Valley Parkway, from Addison R. Pike pending the completion of his residence on Glen road.

Mr. Walter Parsons of New Portland, Me., has leased the suite No. 7 Park avenue, from George C. Ogden. Final papers have gone to record conveying the estate of Leonard H. Spaulding, No. 27 Everett avenue, comprising modern house of 12 rooms, 2 baths; garage and about 28,000 feet of land, to Mrs. Irving S. Palmer of this town, who will make this her residence as soon as alterations have been completed.

Final papers have gone to record conveying the property No. 32 Calmet road, in the name of Walter S. Crane of Dedham, Mass., comprising modern house of 10 rooms, 2 baths; double garage and about 14,000 square feet of land to Martha E. McGreene of Roxbury, Mass., who will shortly make this her residence.

The above transactions were negotiated by the Edward T. Harrington Company.

FORTY YEARS IN THE WATER DEPARTMENT.

On the 28th day of the present month, if he lives to that date, and it is pretty certain that he will, Mr. William T. Dotten will have completed forty years of continuous service in the water department. He is now the superintendent and has been for many years, rising to that position through faithful and conscientious attention to work. It was on August 28, 1873, when Mr. Dotten, then a young man, went to work for the department.

In recognition of this event the members of the Water Board, Monday evening, voted to give him a day off, care free, and not to be bothered by emergency calls. It is about ten years ago since he took his last vacation, and even then it was one of sorrow, his eldest son passing away. Of course he could have taken vacations each year, and the Board would readily have granted them, but he preferred to be on hand watching out for the "unexpected" that might but did not happen. May he have an enjoyable anniversary.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

At Asbury Grove on Labor Day the Epworth League will hold full sway. Enthusiasm will run high and not one minute will be dry. So come along with goodly cheer to the first convention of the year. We will leave on the 7:45 a. m. car from the centre; fare for round trip, 60 cents.

WHITNEY MACHINE COMPANY.

Now Running at Full Capacity in New Quarters.

What may well be considered one of the most modern and up-to-date manufacturing establishments making tanners' machinery is the new factory of the Whitney Machine Company of Winchester, Mass. This firm is now installed and running at full capacity in their new plant, occupying four floors in all. The first floor, or basement, is used for the manufacturing of heavy parts, has a concrete floor, and is well lighted. On the second floor are the general offices, all equipped with up-to-date appliances. The interior woodwork in the offices is finished in the natural wood, with dark green stain, being restful to the eye, and presenting a cool and pleasant appearance to the visitor who enters on a hot and sunny summer day, as well as an atmosphere that is at once comfortable and homelike. Visiting tanners who are in Boston from time to time will find a visit to Winchester pleasant, and would enjoy visiting the Whitney Machine Company's factory.

Other floors are devoted to the assembling of their machines, also the pattern-making department and the storage of parts. The business of the Whitney Machine Company was established in 1844 by Joel Whitney and developed into one of the leading industries of Winchester, as well as one of the largest firms manufacturing tanning machinery in this country. The firm is always on the alert to improve their machines and have many new features to offer the trade. Their "New Model" fleshing, unhairing and putting-out machines embody many new ideas. Another improvement is their new "Automatic Bed Roll Relief Device" for fleshing heavy sides, which is something entirely new in this line of work. They also handle a patented rubber roll, said to be distinctly different from any other roll on the market. Their "Type No. 2" putting-out machine for skins and sides is a new and improved machine which has just been perfected after years of careful study and experiment.

The business has remained, since its beginning in 1844, entirely in the hands of the Whitney family. Robert F. Whitney, present manager of the business is a grandson of Joel Whitney, the founder, and son of Arthur E. Whitney, who is senior member of the firm and inventor of the roll type of leather-working machine and other important devices.

Unlike some lines of business handed down from generation to generation, the business of the Whitney Machine Company has grown steadily since its inception. Today it has reached the highest point ever attained in its development, occupying and owning a plant of which Winchester is justly proud and doing a large business throughout the United States and among leading leather manufacturers in Canada, Australia, South America and other countries.

Credit for this recent rapid development must justly be given to the enterprise and energy of Robert F. Whitney, who has been manager for the past several years. The new building, with its entire equipment, plans, electric lighting and power, elevator, offices and all facilities was erected along plans laid down by Robert Whitney, and the execution of these plans resulted in the present plant, which is considered a model factory in every way. J. A. Wheeler, Jr., their leading salesman, is an expert in the line of tanning machinery and covers the trade in the United States and Canada, where he has been very successful with the Whitney machines. Robert F. Whitney's time is almost entirely taken up in the executive end of the business, wherein he is ably assisted by Walter C. Goddard. Business trips of especial importance sometimes call Robert Whitney away from home. He is well known and highly esteemed in Winchester and vicinity, as one of the city's leading and most progressive business men. (Hide and Leather.)

WINCHESTER VS. WOBURN.

The Woburn Times has the following to say in regard to the coming game between Winchester and All-Woburn on Manchester Field Saturday afternoon:

All roads will lead to Winchester next Saturday when the first game of a series will be played between Manager George LeDuc's Winchester team and Harold McDonald's All-Woburns. After considerable engineering on the part of both managers, without making any embarrassing concessions, the game was arranged.

It is a game well calculated to please the baseball public as both teams have reached a standard that is sufficient guarantee of a good game. Winchester has maintained the fine standard it has for the past few years, and has defeated some of the fastest semi-pro teams in the state. The status of the All-Woburn team is widely known. Suffice it to say that if the Winchester team can annex an All-Woburn scalp it will do what many others have failed to do this year. The game will be called at 3:30 o'clock.

SUMMER REPAIRS IN SCHOOL BUILDINGS.

High School.

New telephones throughout to replace those installed when the building was erected. These have been out of order except for a few weeks when they were first used, and could not be repaired. Mr. Sanderson has supplied and placed new Western Electric instruments.

The defective electrical wiring has been thoroughly repaired by Mr. Sanderson in accordance with the directions of Mr. R. E. Simonds, Fire Inspector, and Mr. Foster, special inspector for the New England Insurance Exchange, as follows:

1. The transformers now situated in the basement, removed to the street and three new wire secondaries brought into the building.

2. New meter board with proper cutouts, one for lighting meter and one for power meter. Lighting wiring changed to the three wire system.

3. Cutouts in attic and panel boards in air shaft enclosed in approved cabinets, constructed in accordance with the requirements of the National Electric Code. Circuit wires in air shafts enclosed in approved flexible tubing.

4. The shafts stopped at top and bottom with material equal in thickness to present floor.

5. All joints in wiring soldered and covered with approved tape.

6. For the wires in attic arranged proper separation where crossing pipes and other wires.

7. Wires passing through brick wall in attic rearranged.

Twenty-three steel lockers made by the Manufacturing and Equipment Co., of Framingham, of which Mr. S. D. Leland, formerly of Winchester, is president, have been placed in the boys' dressing room as the beginning of a full equipment which will doubtless not be completed for some years.

GRATIFYING TO MR. PRIME.

Cousin Island, Maine,

August 16, 1913.

Dear Mr. Wilson—I understand that nomination papers have been filed with the Secretary of the Commonwealth by Republicans of Winchester and West Medford again placing me in nomination for the office of representative from our district.

It is particularly gratifying to me that among those who volunteered this service in my behalf are found the names of several gentlemen who did not support me in the primaries last year.

Very truly yours,
W. F. PRIME.

SELECTMEN'S MEETING.

Warrant for Primaries Approved—Polls Open from 5:45 a. m. to 2 p. m.

The Board met at 7:30 p. m., present Messrs. Daly, Davidson, Pike and Jewett.

Mr. Pike submitted the proposed warrant for the primaries to be held September 23, which was approved; polls to be open from 5:45 a. m. to 2 p. m.

Joseph D. Mawn, 44 Canal street, was appointed teller at elections for the period ending March 31, 1914.

Dr. Allen, Secretary and Agent for the Board of Health, and others, were present and the complaint against a licensed hawk and peddler for violation of a Town By-Law by casting refuse into the streets was gone into at length and after discussion by the Board it was:

VOTED, That the Board having been satisfied that the licensee has violated a Town By-Law by depositing decayed vegetables and other rubbish in the streets, it is hereby ORDERED that he be notified that any repetition of the offense will be considered cause for revoking his license as hawk and peddler of fruits and vegetables.

An application was received signed by two voters as required by law, asking that James V. Haley, 31 Canal street, be appointed a measurer of leather under the provisions of Chapter 502 of the acts of 1913. A certificate was also presented from the State Commissioner of Weights and Measures and Mr. Haley was appointed.

A request was received to divide the sidewalk assessment on two lots on Bacon street now in the hands of the Collector of Taxes, and the Clerk was instructed to reply that it was inadvisable to separate two properties in this way and the request was declined for that reason.

ORDERED, That Patrick Kennedy, a laborer in the Highway Department, is hereby retired under the provisions of Chapter 503, Acts of 1912, his retirement to date from July 21, 1913, the amount to be paid him as a pension under the provisions of said Act to be fixed at the next meeting of this Board.

A letter was received from Schuyler F. Herron, Secretary School Committee, stating that the Committee would be glad to have a driveway constructed at the rear of the Wadleigh Grammar School across the proposed granolithic sidewalk on Myrtle street and would pay the cost of the apron for the same, and the Superintendent of Streets was notified to construct the apron as described and charge the same to the School Department.

A petition with plans was filed by the Bay State Street Railway Company asking that the location of its tracks in Main street at Symmes Corner and the Medford Line and from Clark street to Richardson street be extended, altered and re-located in accordance with the plans, and a hearing on the same was ordered to be held September 5 at 8 p. m., notice thereof to be published in the Star of August 22 and 29.

A complaint as to the condition of the sidewalk on Linden street in front of numbers 13 and 15 was received and referred to the Committee on Ways and Bridges.

A request was received for a permit to occupy the sidewalk and a portion of the street at the corner of Church and Vine streets for the purpose of depositing material to be used in the erection of the Hovey and Lane building, and the Clerk was instructed to arrange an appointment for the Committee on Ways and Bridges.

A report was received from the Town Counsel concerning the phraseology of grants for pole locations and accepted, and the Clerk was instructed to write the New England Telephone & Telegraph Company notifying them that this Board objects to that part of their printed form of petition for pole locations which reads "together with such sustaining or protecting fixtures as the business of each of your petitioners may require" and requesting that in future petitions this phrase be omitted, and if any of the fixtures referred to by this general clause are necessary that they be specifically described.

A letter was received from the purchaser of a certain parcel of land on the south-westerly side of Cedar street and on which the Town has placed a drain for the running off of surface water from adjoining streets that the use of her land must cease or the Town would be liable for damages resulting therefrom. Referred to the Town Engineer for report.

A letter was received referring to the condition of the sidewalk on the north side of Mystic avenue and the Clerk was instructed to reply that a granolithic sidewalk was to be laid there this year.

A letter was received through the Town Engineer asking for price on sewer pipe to be used on land on Highland avenue and the Clerk was instructed to reply that it was against the policy of the Town to sell supplies.

A letter was received from the Metropolitan Water and Sewerage Board stating that they were about to undertake the excavation of a test pit on the railroad property at the westerly end of Irving street and asking the use of the street for a short time for the storage of supplies and surplus earth and the Clerk was instructed to reply that the Board would be glad to co-operate as far as it could and that the exact location for the space desired would be given by the Superintendent of Streets.

Adjourned at 11:10.

FRANK R. MILLER,

Clerk of the Board.

We have not seen many favorable comments in papers in this vicinity on Winchester's reduced tax rate. Is this because they are afraid some of their people may come here to live?

COMING EVENTS.

Aug. 23, Saturday. Band concert on Manchester Field by Fifth Regiment Band at 3:30.

Aug. 24, Saturday. Base ball on Manchester Field at 3:30. Winchester vs. All-Woburn.

FRESH FISH.

On next Wednesday, August 27, if early risers notice a man clad in old garments with a bundle under his arm who seems to be in a hurry, do not phone for the police, because that man is going on the Royal Arcanum fishing trip. As the car is scheduled to leave Winchester square at 4 a. m., he has had to wake up himself (as his wife refuses to open her eyes at such an hour) and after falling over the cat, finally secures some bread which he says he "shed" and manufactured into sandwiches (because this man has been down on the "Letter D" before and knows what an appetite the water gives him) he finds he has just time to grab his hat and coat and run to the center. This is not a fable as the writer has been through the above experience, and perhaps will go through the same experience this year. At any rate he is going fishing and so are a lot more of Winchester's citizens.

The committee wishes it understood that any respectable person desiring to fish will be welcome whether he is an Arcanumite or not. The car will leave the square at 4 a. m. with genial "Tim Green" and Skidmore as crew. Any one desiring a feed can be accommodated at Swampscott as the committee has made the necessary arrangements. It will not be necessary to take your lines with you as lines, bait, chowder and coffee are furnished by the boat and "oh, my, Oscar's fish chowder is nice." As this is the last Wednesday the stores will close, it is hoped that some of the clerks and store-keepers will close their holidays by taking advantage of this excellent opportunity to go fishing. Further information can be secured from Mr. Schurman, the electrician, on Railroad avenue.

SATURDAY'S GAME TO BE A GREAT CONTEST.

On Saturday, August 23, commences the series of the year, as it seems. No baseball season is complete without a game with our greatest rivals, the All-Woburns. We have arranged to open here on our home grounds. The "fans" of both Woburn and Winchester look forward to these games and while the management is always willing to furnish the best to be had at all times, we feel as though every one who attends this series should contribute, as the Woburn team is the most expensive we have had this season. This game alone will stand us over $75.00, and if anyone has got the least bit of sporting blood in his veins he will give at least 15 cents or as much more as his generosity prompts him to give. The management of the Winchester team is not in the game for the "money" there is in it but thinks they are at least entitled to their expenses for winning the game. "Hot air" is all right but it won't run a ball team, and 15 cents or a quarter won't bankrupt anyone once a week. Everyone make arrangements to see the game. There will be extra seats placed along the third and first base sides, but people desiring seats should get down early, as the largest crowd of the year will be on hand.

ARGUMENT FOR ANTI-SUFFRAGE.

To the Editor of the "Star":—In your paper of August 15, is an article showing either such gross misrepresentation or such inexcusable ignorance in regard to anti-suffragists as to strengthen the opposition, already so great, against woman-suffrage.

One of the arguments of suffragists has been that women had a finer sense of justice and honor than men, and would "purify" politics if they were in the electorate. No worse "mud-slinging" was ever indulged in by men than what is found in this article in last week's "Star", signed by a woman.

Anti-suffragists ought to be grateful for this argument.

BAND CONCERT.

The Fifth Regiment Infantry Band, M. V. M., will give the concert on Manchester Field, Saturday afternoon at 3:30, Robert C. Mauser, bandmaster. The program will be as follows: March "Arcandah" Thompson. Overture "Bohemian Girl" Balfe. Waltz "Septembre" Godin. Duett for Cornets.

"Kindred Souls" Filenberg. Mr. Thomas I. Foxwell, Mr. Ralph E. Beverly.

Popular Medley "Good-by Boys" Von Tilzer. Selection from Offenbach's Operas "Offenbachiana" Offenbach.

Baritone Solo "Polka Caprice" Simon. Mr. William J. Lund.

In the Shadows Finck. Songs of Scotland Arr. Lampe. March "Waldmere" Losey.

There is, however, one class of citizens on whom taxes fall directly. The man who owns his own house and lives in it, has no one else on whom he can place the tax. He is the man who should be most anxious to see that he gets value received for the money he pays out—[Somerville Journal].

Mr. Edward L. Burwell and family have vacated their house on Forbes street and left town.

GRADE CROSSING PERILS.

No Protective Devices Exempt the Automobilist from Responsibility.

Editor of the STAR:

Dear Sir:—We occasionally have considerable grade crossing agitation. Personally, I believe that the majority of the accidents could be avoided, if the public would exercise more care in crossing the tracks.

Now, in case you want a real good article to publish on the subject, I enclose herewith one taken from the New York "Sun" of yesterday, and I commend your careful consideration to the letter of Mr. Woodbridge.

Subscriber.

August 11, 1913.

To the Editor of The Sun:

Sir—After the accident at Long Beach on August 3, I received a letter from Mr. Francis Woodbridge of New York City. The letter contains so much good advice and excellent suggestion that I have asked Mr. Woodbridge for permission to send it to the newspapers for publication, and he has consented. I enclose a copy of the letter, and believe that if you will publish it the result will be of great benefit. I know that you want to be fair and do all you possibly can to educate the public as well as the railroads in the necessity of care to minimize the great dangers which exist at all grade crossings, whether they are or are not protected with gates and watchmen.

Ralph Peters,

President, Long Island Railroad Company.
New York, August 8.

Part of Mr. Woodbridge's letter follows:

Is there no way in which the true nature of the grade crossing problem can be brought home to the people at large? There is a strange injustice in the public attitude after each conspicuous grade crossing accident. When an automobilist runs down a horse drawn vehicle or a pedestrian it is instantly assumed that the automobilist was careless and at fault; but when that same automobilist runs into a train it is taken for granted that he was absolutely innocent and that the railroad must have been at fault.

Grade crossings, however guarded and protected, are and must always be dangerous, and no matter what efforts may be made by a railroad, no person except infants and incompetents, who should be kept away from railroads, can cross a grade crossing without assuming some risk. No automobilist can trust either to gates or to a flagman without assuming the risks of the fallibility of human judgment and action. Bells and other automatic signals are subject to the defects of all mechanical apparatus, and the man who trusts to a mechanical signal assumes the risk of mechanical defects; and no mechanically perfect machine has yet been devised. It is quite possible that the so-called protecting of crossings other than those where many trains are constantly passing may encourage carelessness and lead to accident through encouraging the automobilist to shift responsibility from himself to the gateman or flagman or mechanical warning.

There is only one safe rule with respect to a grade crossing, and that is unfailingly to treat it as dangerous and unfailingly to change speed on approaching a crossing, however clear it may be. The automobilist who always and invariably, whatever may be the condition, slows up for the railroad crossing, makes the habit of care instinctive and will not be the victim of an accident. It is obviously the duty of a railroad so to mark its crossings with warnings that an approaching automobilist will have ample notice that a crossing is at hand. Beyond that the duty of avoiding accidents rests primarily upon the automobilist, because no man, knowing that there is a crossing, should ever attempt to pass until he knows that there is no danger. No person returning from Long Beach should ever meet with an accident, because on the way down he has discovered and been warned of the crossings. If somebody broke a bottle in the middle of the Long Beach road the great majority of the automobilists who pass it on the way down would bear it in mind and seek to avoid it on the way back, and the same thing is true of grade crossings.

I am moved to write you largely by the fact that within the past two or three weeks on no less than four occasions when I have stopped to permit an approaching train to pass, the driver of another automobile has crossed in front of the approaching train after I was at rest, evidently considering the time gained as overbalancing the risk assumed.

May I suggest that the Long Island railroad would be relieved of much responsibility and many accidents would be avoided if it could obtain the right to place at the roadside at a fixed distance, say 100 or 150 feet from the track, a characteristic and distinctive sign which would fall within the range of the lights of any automobile travelling in its proper place on the right hand side of the road? I believe that the constitutionality of a statute permitting the railroads to invade the property of others for such a purpose would be justified under the police power. If such marks were installed and automobilists were required to reduce speed between them and the railroad track there would be few if any accidents.

THE DISTRICT ATTORNEY CONTEST.

It looks as though District Attorney John J. Higgins will have no opposition in his own party at the primaries this fall. The decision of Representative Nathan A. Tufts of Waltham to seek another term on Beacon Hill leaves Higgins alone in the field for the Republican nomination. Second assistant district attorney Nelson P. Brown of Everett was urged to run but has declined to enter the contest.

On the Democratic side of the fence attorney William J. Corcoran of Cambridge is the only man who has papers out. Attorney William R. Scharton who represented "Dakota Dan" in the famous Russell will case has not yet entered the race, although at the close of the celebrated will case he stated that he was going to run.

James J. Irwin of Everett who ran against Higgins three years ago has been endorsed as a candidate by Everett Democrats.

A committee of prominent county Democrats interviewed the Democratic State Chairman, "Tom" Riley of Malden and asked him to run but "Tom" is after bigger game and refused to bite. The same committee called on ex-mayor John J. Shaughnessy of Marlboro but he declined the honor owing to business reasons.

The Progressives have attorney Philip M. Clark of Cambridge as their candidate. With three aspirants for the office, the political pot in Middlesex County will soon start to boil with a vengeance.

WOULD LIMIT USE OF AUTO HORNS.

Street Commissioner James A. Gallivan of Boston, after a ten day trip investigating the traffic regulations of Chicago, Washington and New York, advocates a law prohibiting the use of auto horns except as warnings of danger.

"There is a rule in Washington," said Commissioner Gallivan, "which does much to abate the noise nuisance which is the source of much complaint in Boston. This rule provides that no person shall use a horn or other signal except to give warning to drivers of other vehicles or to pedestrians."

"From my talks with officials there I learned that accidents are less common than in Boston where, by statute requirements, horns must be sounded at every street intersection."

Similar restrictions as to the use of automobile warning signals are now in force in Chicago, Cincinnati, Newark, Jersey City, Sioux City, St. Louis, Los Angeles, Seattle, San Diego, Memphis, Louisville, Atlanta, Denver, St. Paul, Philadelphia, Des Moines, Dubuque and Portland.

The states of Connecticut and California have but recently passed laws to the same effect.

In all cases the use of an adequate and necessarily powerful signal is required. The same restriction as to its use is made in order to emphasize its meaning when it is actually necessary and to prevent its sound becoming so common as to attract no attention.

Editor Hoag Confesses

"For many years, as Editor and Proprietor of the Pine Plains, N. Y., Herald, I have advertised Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy. While I enjoyed not only the business relationship but the personal friendship of Dr. Kennedy, I have never, until now, paid him a long standing obligation. For many years, as my friends so well know, I suffered excruciating pains from rheumatism. Many were the nights when it was impossible to sleep. Without resort, a bottle of Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, just as thousands of others had done before, and like them I found permanent relief. Favorite Remedy has stood the test of time and I believe it is the best medicine in existence for effectually expelling the cause of rheumatism—uric acid. My regret is that I have neglected to make this frank confession long ago. It makes my kidneys do their work properly, tones up the liver and makes one feel that life is worth living. I publicly and earnestly advise all my friends who are suffering from troubles that arise from unhealthy kidneys and liver, to get a bottle of Favorite Remedy at once. There is no use in putting it off as I did. S. T. HOAG, Editor.

During rush hours the brute is in his element at Sullivan square. Women stand no chance, being jostled to one side regardless of age or condition. It is a disgraceful state of affairs, and the railroads are not entirely free from blame.

The discovery of a congressman that under the new parcel post rate for the first and second zones a package can be re-shipped four times under the short-zone rates at a total cost much less than the long-distance charges, would go to show that the long-distance rates ought also to be changed.

One thing that can be said for the American Express Company,—it always settled its damage cases quickly and satisfactorily. Wonder if the postoffice department will do the same in the case of damaged or lost parcels, or if it will resort to the tiring-out process so familiar to persons who lost packages under the old system.

The Light Board of Reading's municipally owned lighting plans has asked for $23,500 to bring the plant up to date. Trouble with these plants is there is no sinking fund and no account taken of depreciation, for if these were provided for the community would be forced to pay more for their lights. Now taxes have to make up the deficit.

It is pleasing to notice that the School Board is having the work on the school buildings done by Winchester business men. This is right, and is in striking contrast to the statement made by a selectman, and twice repeated, that the business men of the town were not and should not be considered as factors in town work or supplies.

Ambassador Wilson is the best informed man in the United States on the condition of affairs in Mexico, and when the President sent for him to get his views on Mexican affairs, he would not listen to any of his suggestions—simply threw him down, and did as he had decided to do in the first place. As usual, it is the same old story of getting expert advice, throwing it away, and then acting on your own ideas.

All who attend the ball games on Manchester Field and view the contests from the benches are greatly indebted to Selectman Davidson who had the benches built. They cost $50, and it was hoped that the lovers of the game would reimburse him for the money he paid out. This has been done to a certain extent, but there yet remains a deficit of about $20. Mr. Davidson should not be allowed to suffer this loss. If all who attend the games would only contribute, then there would be no difficulty in reimbursing him, and would also help out on the expenses of the game.

EDWARD E. ELDER.

Edward E. Elder, who has been named by the Progressives as candidate for Senator in the Sixth Middlesex District, is a resident of Medford and has been City Solicitor for the past seven years—a long period of service than that of any predecessor. At the time of his appointment by former Mayor Brewer he was the youngest City Solicitor in the country.

Mr. Elder was born in Cambridge in 1879 where he received his early education, later entering Harvard and graduating with honors in the class of '99, and with honors from Harvard Law School, class of '02. He has been a practicing lawyer for eleven years and is a member of the firm of Elder, Brackett & Hallett, 89 State Street, Boston. He is a member of the Boston Bar Association, Massachusetts Bar Association, Massachusetts Association of City Solicitors and Town Counselors, the Medford Savings Bank Corporation, the Medford Club, Mt. Hermon Lodge, F. A. M., and the Medford Board of Trade, in the work of which he is active. The Sixth Middlesex Senatorial District comprises the cities of Medford and Woburn and towns of Arlington, Winchester, Stoneham and Wakefield. District now represented by William B. Fay, of Medford, Republican.

Mr. and Mrs. George W. Payne have returned from Ipswich, Mass.

ASK FOR ELECTION OFFICERS.

The following letter has been sent to the Selectmen:

Mr. William J. Daly, Chairman Selectmen,

Dear Sir:—I wish to call your attention to the fact that the Progressive party, although one of the three great contesting parties, has no election officers to represent its members at the polls during the primary election and on election day.

I respectfully urge that the Selectmen by virtue of Chapter 235, Sections 226 and 227 of the Revised Statutes, remedy this by giving the Progressive party the recognition to which its vote entitles it, and because, in as much as the Republican candidate for Governor last year is now a Progressive, and the Democratic candidate for Governor is now a Republican, that we, the Progressive party are practically the majority party with the only consistent candidate.

If you will kindly give this matter your attention you will greatly oblige, Very respectfully,
ANDREW J. SOLIS,
Chairman Progressive Town Committee.

POLITICAL NOTE.

Rep. Dean to be Candidate for State Senator.

Rep. Charles A. Dean has decided to run for the state senate in the sixth senatorial district. The present senator is William B. Fay of Medford and a few days ago Edward E. Elder, also of Medford, was announced as the Progressive candidate for this district.

Last year Charles S. Young of Wakefield, Democratic candidate, came within 341 votes of defeating Senator Fay. Only the heavy vote in Medford, Mr. Fay's home city, turned the tide to him, for the only other town Mr. Fay carried was Arlington, by 139 votes. Of course Mr. Zeublin carried Winchester, his home town, where he is popular, but this will not probably be the case this year as he will not be a candidate.

The vote in detail was as follows:

	Young	Fay	Zeublin
Wakefield	903	417	648
Stoneham	452	439	418
Woburn	1151	835	483
Arlington	592	731	563
Winchester	347	528	589
Medford	846	1682	1192
Totals	4291	4632	3893
Fay's plurality	341

PASQUALE POLLITANO RUN DOWN BY AUTO.

An automobile owned by Charles Q. Pierce, 223 Mt. Auburn street, Watertown, struck and seriously injured Pasquale Pollitano, 37 years old, of 31 Cedar street, near the corner of Myopia road and Cambridge street last Saturday afternoon.

Pollitano was coming down Myopia road on his bicycle when the accident happened.

The automobile, the police report, was driven by Alvan C. Shanton, and in it were his son, Roy Shanton, Mr. Pierce, the owner of the car, and Mrs. Emma Kelly of Winchester, his wife's nurse. They were all unhurt.

Pollitano was taken to the Winchester Hospital and his name placed on the dangerous list. The auto was going toward Arlington and the injured man coming down the hill did not see it, with the result of a head on collision. He has taken care of the estates on the hill for many years, owns his house on Cedar street and is a hard working and industrious man.

The doctors held little hope for his recovery and Sunday morning he had weakened to such an alarming degree that Dr. A. L. Brown, who had been attending him, decided that transfusion of blood was necessary, and he accepted the offer of John Pollitano, 48, East Boston, a first cousin of the injured man, to undergo the ordeal. Nearly half a pint of blood was taken from the veins of John Pollitano and later injected in the veins of the injured man.

Immediately after the transfusion, Pollitano began to improve and before evening was able to take light food through the mouth and every hope is held for his recovery.

Word received from the hospital just before going to press, is that Mr. Pollitano is getting along finely, and as far as the attendants can see at the present time, he will recover.

WISCONSIN PUTS BAN ON "HONK" HORNS.

Milwaukee Wis., Aug. 20.
The new Wisconsin automobile law which has just gone into effect provides that every automobile shall be equipped with a signal device capable of producing an abrupt sound sufficiently loud to serve as an adequate warning of danger.

The following statement regarding this law has been issued by its author, President James T. Drought of the Wisconsin State Automobile Association:

"This law was enacted not only in the interests of automobile owners, but in the interests of pedestrians, and users of other vehicles, who have a right to be seasonably and sufficiently warned of the approach of automobiles."

"With the din of noisy traffic on city streets and in passing other automobiles proceeding in the same direction, many hand bulb horns are entirely ineffective, because they cannot be heard. With the present statute in force I am of the opinion that many if not all hand bulb horns in use are in direct violation of the law. In cases of collisions and resulting damage suits, the question of whether the automobile was equipped with a lawful signaling device which was used seasonably, may establish the liability of the automobile driver or materially affect the size of the verdict."

"I believe the time is not far distant when all automobile liability insurance companies will compel policy holders to discard the hand bulb horn in favor of something more effective, as a matter of self protection."

AN ANTI-SUFFRAGIST CREED.

(Adapted from an article by the late Octavia Hill, the noted English philanthropist.)

I believe that men and women help one another because they are different, have different gifts and different spheres—and that the world is made on the principle of mutual help.

I believe that a serious loss to our country would arise if the women entered into the arena of party struggle and political life. So far from their raising the standard, I believe they would lose the power of helping to keep it up by their influence on the men who know and respect them.

I believe that political power would militate against their usefulness in the large field of public work in which so many are now doing noble and helpful service.

I believe this service far more valuable than any voting power would possibly be. You can double the number of voters and achieve nothing, but you have used up, in achieving nothing, whatever thought and time your women voters have given to such duties.

I believe that if women spend their time and heart and thought in the care of the sick, the old, the young and the erring; if they seek for and respect the out-of-sight, silent work which really achieves something, a great blessing is conferred on our country.

I believe there is enough of struggle for place and power, enough of watching what is popular and will win votes, enough of effort to secure majorities. If woman would temper this wild struggle let her seek to do her own work steadily and earnestly, looking rather to the out-of-sight, neglected sphere, and she will, to my mind, be filling the place to which by God's appointment she is called.

I believe that there are thousands of silent women who agree with me in earnestly hoping no Woman Suffrage measure will pass.

GREATEST CITY OF THE WORLD.

An Arcanumite Writes Local Council of Scenes in London

July 20th, 1913.
To Aberjona Council 1002, Royal Arcanum, Winchester, Mass., U. S. A.

Dear Brothers:—Before leaving for London, brother Heath made me promise to write to the Council while away. Mindful of this promise, I send you greetings and the hope that you are all in good health and prospering. At 78, I believe I am the oldest member of the Council, at all events, feel sure that I have been a member of the Royal Arcanum for a longer period being admitted 31 years ago. I have enjoyed attending the meetings of the Council, but must plead guilty of not attending regularly of late years, but seriously, was the writer ever known to be absent from the Banquet Room, when there was to be "a spread" and a good time generally? My son, who resides in London, also is a member of Aberjona Council. He was made a member of the Royal Arcanum at the age of twenty-one, the right age for a young man to join if his dus are to be considered.

At this great distance, I hardly know what to write of interest but will venture to write a little regarding the greatest city in the world. London contains a population of over 7½ millions. It is divided into 28 boroughs, each borough has its mayor annually elected with aldermen and councillors, varying in numbers, according to the population. These bodies regulate matters of purely local concern, such as street maintenance, lighting, public health, etc.

London contains 3,000 miles of streets, hundreds of miles of subways or tubes, 4,000 motor buses, 8,000 pay taxi cabs and tram cars, and they are driven through the streets at reckless speed. Hundreds are killed outright and thousands are injured every year. 16,000 police patrol the streets. There are 1,008 sub post offices in London beside the general Post Office.

There are many historic places of interest in and around London. I will refer briefly to but a few of them.

The Bank of England, a one story building, covers an area of 4 acres. It contains no windows, but is lighted from the inside courts. This is to prevent invasion and robbery. The bank at night is guarded by a detachment of the Royal Guards and the Police, as the vaults contain usually about 20 million pounds of gold and silver, or nearly one hundred million dollars in American money. Over 1,000 clerks, porters and others are employed by the Bank. The four acres alone, without the building, is valued at 13 million pounds or over 64 million dollars or about $240 per square inch.

The Houses of Parliament cover 8 acres, is 960 feet long, and contains 1100 apartments, 11 courts and 125 stairways. There are nearly 600 members of Parliament. London is represented by 60 members.

Westminster Abbey, according to tradition, the first church built upon this site was erected between the years of 605 and 610 by Siebert, King of the East Saxons, and was consecrated by St. Peter himself. For hundreds of years, the Abbey was the resting place of Kings and Queens only. In later generations, England's great among them, statesmen, warriors, orators and men of letters, all in fact that the nation delighted to honour are buried here. It contains a block of sandstone tradition declares to be the identical stone upon which Jacob pillored his head at Bethel. Upon this stone, the kings of Scotland were crowned for many centuries, and it has served the same purpose for every English monarch from the time of Edward 1st to the present day. This stone is attached to the coronation chair by clamps of iron.

The Tower of London. Tradition has it that a fortress stood here in Roman times. In the year 1078, William the Conqueror built the great White Tower. The Tower was built for three purposes, for a fortress, a palace and a prison. Henry 6th spent many unhappy years in the Tower, more often as a prisoner than as a King. Here King Edward 5th and his brother the Duke of York were murdered at the instigation of Gloucester, afterwards Richard 3rd. The writer, when here three years ago, stood on the spot where Anne Boleyn, Lady Jane Grey and many others were beheaded centuries ago.

Hampton Court Palace, just outside of busy London was built by Cardinal Wolsey, who afterwards presented it to King Henry 8th, and is said to be the largest, and in many respects, the finest of all the Royal Palaces of England. This palace contains nearly 1,000 apartments; 800 of them are occupied by aristocratic pensioners of the Crown, and other privileged persons. The other apartments are open to the Public, but are closed for the present as it was thought to be unwise to admit the public owing to the menacing attitude of the suffragettes, who are unwittingly injuring their cause by their insane crusade in Great Britain. The Palace contains many ancient paintings of Royalty and some of the furniture used by former kings and queens still remains. The Park and gardens contain 600 acres. Rare flowers, fountains, statues, etc., adorn the grounds. In the park are trees said to be 200 years old; an immense oak said to be 1000 years old still stands. The grape vine planted in 1768, after periods of comparative poverty again yields abundantly and supplies the Royal table.

No American visiting London should go away without spending at least one day at the British Museum. It would take years to examine everything in that immense building, covering acres. The Museum originated in 1753 with the purchase of the library and collection of Sir Hans Sloane. This was accomplished by funds derived from a public lottery. Many private libraries and collections of natural objects, coins and antiquities were added, especially the magnificent library of 60,000 volumes acquired by King George 3rd. Accessions are being made to the Museum to the present day. The library department alone contains over 4 million volumes, requiring over 48 miles of shelving. There are galleries of paintings, many of them are from the old masters, also galleries of sculpture. At the Roman gallery are the busts of Julius Caesar, Nero and other worthies and un-worthies, familiar to us by name from childhood. There also is a gallery of mummies that existed thousands of years B. C. and they are beautiful! The famous Portland vase can be seen here. This vase is the property of the Duke of Portland. It was found in an ancient tomb at Rome 200 years ago. A golden cup made in the 14th century, also is on exhibition. This cup was recently purchased by the British Museum for $8,000, nearly $40,000.

I realize that I am trespassing on time, so will close with good wishes for you all.

Yours in M. V. C.
H. M. MORSE.

Mr. Francis C. Wilson, a Winchester boy and a son of Mr. John T. Wilson of this town, has been elected president of the New Mexico Bar Association at Raton, N. M. His many friends in Winchester will be glad to hear of his success.

LAST SATURDAY'S GAME.

Saturday, August 16th, Winchester won from Miah Murray's White Bears, making the fifth straight victory since Tift started pitching for the team. It was simply a case of one, two, three, except in one inning, when with men on second and third Tift got the last man on strikes. The White Bears had Paul Benson, a young twirler with plenty of speed and a good "spitter", but wild as a hawk. He held the home team to six singles but they all came at the right time. Badger was back in the Winchester lineup and will strengthen the team in the field and on the base. Morrissey played the best outfield he has shown this season and it looks as though he is in his proper place now. The only feature of the game was in the ninth, when Roche retired the side on three flies.

The Easy Summer Meal

Has Grape-Nuts as its foundation.

Ideal these hot days because Grape-Nuts food requires no cooking, and is at the same time a perfectly balanced food.

Try a hot weather breakfast of Fresh fruit,

Grape-Nuts and cream,
A soft-boiled egg or two,
Slice of crisp toast,
Cup of Instant Postum in place of Coffee.

Such a meal starts the day right, keeps the blood cool and the body and brain well nourished.

Compare the cool, contented Grape-Nuts-fed man or woman with your meat-fed neighbor who is sweltering and miserable.

Grape-Nuts is fully cooked at the factory—ready to serve from the package. The cooking is done on scientific principles, so that the starch of the grain is transformed and ready for quick digestion.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

The sixth season of the Castle Square Theatre under the management of John Craig will begin next Friday evening, August 29th. The play will be the famous comedy, "London Assurance," which ever since its production many years ago has been one of the favorites of the American stage. Its author is Dion Boucicault, famous both as an actor and playwright. It is brimful of action and life and gay with witty dialogue and its lively plot involving the adventures of Lady Gay Spanker, of Charles Courtley and of a dozen other actors, is entertaining in the extreme. It is no wonder that "London Assurance" has lived on the stage so long, and its revival at the Castle Square will be especially welcome.

Mr. Craig will himself appear as Charles Courtley, with William P. Carleton as Dazzle and Miss Doris Olson as Lady Gay Spanker, while in the other leading roles will be seen Walter Walker, Donald Meek, Frederick Ormonde, Carney Christie, Al Roberts and Florence Shirley.

Mr. Craig is planning a popular season, among the plays to follow being "Under Two Flags," "The Ninety and Nine," "Baby Mine," "The Thief," "The Girl of the Golden West," "Excuse Me," and "We the People."

ANDREW LYNCH.

Andrew Lynch, aged 75 years, died at his home on Mystic avenue, Monday night, after an illness of about three months. He suffered a general decline from old age and failed rapidly away.

Mr. Lynch was born in Ireland but lived in Winchester for a great many years. He was employed on the Boston and Maine railroad as a track repairer. His wife died more than 20 years ago.

He is survived by six children, Mrs. Thomas Mulhearn of Buck street, Woburn, Andrew and Thomas Lynch of Winchester, Edward Lynch of lower Main street, Woburn, and Michael Lynch of Walnut street, Woburn. Funeral services were held at St. Mary's church, Thursday morning.

Its purpose is to heat the kitchen and heat the water for domestic purposes at such times as it is desirable to maintain some coal fire for heating purposes.

Many of our consumers are installing this heater, saying that it overcomes all other objections to using a gas range exclusively.

Ask for our representative to call and explain the many good points of this heater which space forbids us to tell here.

EQUAL SUFFRAGE

DEPARTMENT.

Conducted by Winchester League.

The Conference of the National Council of Women Voters held last week in Washington, D. C., represented 4,000,000 women who are now allowed to vote. Their object in calling the Conference is to educate women voters in the exercise of citizenship, to secure equal suffrage legislation in states where women are still debarred, and especially, just now, to urge the immediate passage by Congress of the equal suffrage constitutional amendment which is now before it. One of the measures urged to this end is the appointment of a Suffrage Committee in the House, similar to that in the Senate. Jane Addams was the logical representative from the youngest equal suffrage state, and the Conference has drawn together a large number of notable women.

The Council was organized in January 1911, and shows the remarkable progress that has been made in two and a half years. In 1911 they represented 400,000 women voting in five states—now they represent 4,000,000 women voting in ten states! A truly wonderful change, which evinces the wide-spread demand for justice and equality.

The recent measure passed by the Municipal Council of Paris shows the same advance. We quote from the Independent:—"This law is another attack upon liberty and religion. It will either be futile or productive of disastrous consequences."

"This law is useless, and what is more, it is dangerous from the point of view of morality."

"It will turn out household horrors. I cannot consent to see my country made ridiculous in the eyes of the world."

And what was the law that excited these awful apprehensions? Merely a bill brought before the French parliament in 1880 for the opening of high schools for girls. The quotations are from the speeches of the opposition, Baron de Ravignan, Count Desbassyns and M. Keller, respectively. Today there are fifty high schools and seventy-eight colleges for girls in France, and one thousand women students in the Universities, and none of the disastrous consequences anticipated have become manifest. Even in France feminism advances.

We hope that some of the statements we hear nowadays about the necessity of limiting the opportunities of women will sound just as antiquated and funny to the next generation as these do to the present.

Such was the French sentiment in 1880. The N. Y. Tribune of August 13, 1913, confirms the report that municipal franchise has been granted to the women of Paris.

The Marquis of Fontenay writes:—"The Municipal Council of Paris has, by unanimous vote accorded municipal franchise to women, who will henceforth be qualified to take part in the election of the city fathers."

In view of this tremendous advance, it is difficult to believe that there is a body of women really trying to stop this world-wide wave of progress toward justice and equal opportunity for half the human race!

ATTEMPT AT SUICIDE.

The watchfulness of Patrolman Albert L. Kenyon of the Metropolitan Park Police prevented Mrs. Manchester Bearer, 40 years old, of Boston avenue, West Medford, from committing suicide early last Saturday morning in lower Mystic Lake.

Shortly after 3, while he was making his rounds near the Winchester line in the Medford District, on a motorcycle he saw a woman walking in the water of the pond. At that time of the morning the appearance of a woman in that place seemed strange so he decided to follow her. In a few minutes he lost sight of her as she dodged into some underbrush, and the next minute he heard a splash.

Patrolman Kenyon knew what that meant, so he rushed through the brush and into the lake, where the woman was trying to make her way out into deep water. At the spot where she jumped in the water is four feet deep, but it gradually shelves out to a much greater depth.

He rushed into the water and grabbed her before she got out over her head, but even then he had a struggle with her in the dark to try to get her ashore.

She pleaded with him to allow her to end her life, as she said she was unhappy. The policeman finally got her ashore and sent in a call for the Winchester ambulance and officers Kelly and Harrold responded. When this came she was taken to the Police Station.

The police learned her identity which she refused at first to reveal, and her husband was notified. He called shortly afterwards and took her home in a motor car. It was said by her husband that the woman was suffering from a nervous breakdown and she got up and dressed about 3 and left her home undisturbed.

INHERITANCE TAX PAID TO COMMONWEALTH

Estates are obliged to pay to the treasury of the Commonwealth the following amounts in inheritance taxes:

Children pay nothing unless the estate is over $10,000. From that amount up to $50,000 they pay a tax of one per cent; from $50,000 to $250,000 they pay two per cent; from $250,000 to $1,000,000 three per cent, and over $1,000,000 four per cent.

Grandchildren pay one per cent between $1000 and $50,000 and from there on the same rate as children.

Brothers, sisters, nieces and nephews pay two per cent on estates of from $1000 to $10,000; three per cent on sums from $10,000 to $25,000; five per cent on sums from $25,000 to $50,000; six per cent on sums from $50,000 to $250,000; seven per cent on sums from $250,000 to $1,000,000, and eight per cent on all amounts over $1,000,000.

More distant relatives or friends have to pay on a still higher graduated scale on small bequests as follows: Five per cent up to $50,000; six per cent to $250,000; and then at the same rate as brothers and sisters.

B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE.

Director Moore, the famous star of the M. Cohan's "Forty-five Minutes From Broadway," "The Talk of the Town," "The Happiest Night of My Life," and numerous other musical comedies, will make his first Boston vaudeville appearance in years at B. F. Keith's Theatre the week of August 25th, assisted by Emma Leffell and Company in a grand revival of his famous travesty, "Change Your Act or Back to the Woods." As the original "Kid Burns" in "Forty-five Minutes From Broadway," Mr. Moore is known the country over. This great comedy will be surrounded by a splendid all star vaudeville bill. Ben Deely and his company, including Marie Wayne will present the uproariously funny farce, "The New Bell Boy," while a great European novelty is promised in the Three Bartos, an acrobatic turn that is said to surpass anything of its kind ever seen in this country. Other big features will be Goldrick, Moore & Klaiss in a novel conceit, "Camping," Tom Mosher & Co. in a new comedy, "Doc O'Neil," the merry wax; Rae Eleanor Ball, the violin virtuoso; Roser's Aerial Dogs in a canine offering; and Billy and Edith Adams, "That Effervescent Pair," in songs and dances. The Pathe Weekly will present its customary series of motion picture news items culled from all over the world.

BROOKLYN TABERNACLE

THE MANNA FROM HEAVEN. Exodus 16:1-15—Aug. 24. Jesus said unto them, I am the Bread of Life.—John 6:35.

REALIZING both their deliverance from bondage and the Divine providence exercised in their behalf in the overthrow of the Egyptian army, the Israelites were joyful. Moses composed a beautiful poem, which the men chanted after him. The women, under the leadership of Miriam, Moses' sister, took their timbrels, or tambourines, and danced in a chorus, their bodies swaying and their feet moving rhythmically in a dance.

Singing songs of praise constitutes one of the most profitable methods of worship. But surely they are acceptable to God only as they truly represent the heart sentiments. We fear, alas, that many hymns, like many prayers, never go higher than the heads of the officers; indeed, we have sometimes feared that careless, irreverent singing might really be resented by the Lord as profanity—taking His holy name in vain. If so, the results would be the very reverse of a blessing, in proportion as the singer comprehended the unpleasure of his course.

Gathering manna.

Bitter Waters, Then an Oasis.

The journey toward the Land of Promise began. At length, they came to an oasis, where there was an abundance of bitter, or brackish, water. The disappointment was great. The people murmured against Moses for bringing them from the land of plenty to die in the wilderness.

The Lord's Wisdom guided Moses to a certain kind of tree, which, put into the water, made it sweet and palatable. Moses explained that in murmuring against him they really murmured against God; for he was merely God's agent. A further journey brought them to Elim, a delightful spot, where they were refreshed.

The Scriptures explain that God had a special purpose in this leading of Natural Israel. He was teaching them helpful lessons which, rightly received, would prepare them, through faith and obedience, for Canaan.

The lesson to Spiritual Israel is still more important. If Natural Israel needed heart development and faith as a preparation for the earthly Canaan, how much more do Spiritual Israelites require for the Heavenly Canaan! Can we wonder that God permits trials of faith and patience—"bitter waters"? Any saint of God may have tears in the trying experiences of the narrow way, but none is excusable for murmuring.

"It Is What?"—It Is Manna.

When the Israelites murmured against God and Moses, His mouthpiece and servant, it was because of insufficient faith. Those who truly believed in the Providence which had preserved them from the plagues of Egypt, and had brought them through the Red Sea, would reason that God would not leave them to starve in the wilderness. But the majority evidently murmured through unbelief.

So it is today. As St. Paul declares, "All men have not faith." We do not blame them for this. Evidently birth, early training and larger experiences give some a great advantage, so far as this Age is concerned; for God has ordained that the Message now is for those who have the ear of faith. Whoever has the hearing ear and can exercise faith has a blessed opportunity of making his calling and election sure under the call of the Gospel Age.

We thank God that His Word teaches of a coming Age, wherein Messiah will bless with precious opportunities those not having the hearing ear and responsive heart in this Age, and that in the Millennial Age all blind eyes shall be opened and all deaf ears unstopped.

That night God sent a great quantity of quail. One account of this wonderful supply has been criticized by some agnostics who thought it to mean that quail covered the ground to the depth of nearly five feet. The explanation is that quail, flying across the Gulf of Suez, in weary flocks, fell close to the ground and thus were easily captured.

Next morning the ground was covered with whitish particles, a little larger than mustard seed and tasting like honey wafers. This was to be their daily supply. It required gathering and preparation; and this gave them employment, without which they would have been unhappy.

Jesus declared that the manna given in the wilderness typified Himself, the true Bread. As Natural Israel would have perished without food, so Spiritual Israel would not have sufficient strength for the journey without Heavenly Food. Jesus gave Himself the title of The Truth. Whoever therefore eats of this Bread from Heaven partakes of the Truth. Only by partaking largely, daily, of our Lord's merits and His gracious arrangements for us can we become strong in Him, and enter the spiritual Canaan.—John 17:17.

INTEREST IN EDISON FARM WORLD WIDE

The farm of Edison Light and Power, which is now located at the corner of Main and East streets, Walpole, where it can be reached easily by automobilists, or by those who wish to take the cars of the Norfolk and Bristol Street Railway, is proving a great source of attraction to the tourists from all over the world who are visiting Boston nowadays. Within the last two or three days among those who have registered have been:

Reverend A. Murphy, a catholic priest, who is engaged in religious work at Liang Yang Fu, China, and who was accompanied by a party composed of John F. Pierce and J. H. Myrick of East Boston and Jacob Turner of Milton. Reverend Father Murphy has long been in the missionary field and speaks fourteen languages. He expressed his great interest in the exhibit at the Farm.

Other parties included Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Leahy of San Francisco, accompanied by Miss Margaret Deering of Boston.

Another party included Miss Rebecca F. Adams of Chicago, Illinois.

The Street Railway cars reach the Edison Farm in Walpole, connecting from Norwood, East Walpole Foxboro and Mansfield.

The Farm is open from 9 a. m. until 9 p. m. every week day. It is an interesting sight to see the milking done by electricity very evening at 7.45.

A SOLUTION

An unusual sort of a will, that may solve the problem of keeping the children on the farm, at least in this one instance, was recently admitted to probate and was that of Samuel G. Chestnut, a farmer, of Porter, New York state. The will provides, among other things that the children, three sons and a daughter, must remain on the farm and work it. Salaries for all are fixed in the will. William Chestnut is to have $35 a month and 30 per cent of the farm profits at the end of each year. Albert J. Chestnut will be paid $25 a month and 20 per cent of the profits each year. Samuel Chestnut, a minor, will receive $15 a month and 10 per cent of the farm profits, but when he reaches the age of 21 years his salary and percentage of profits will be the same as his brother Albert's. Marion Chestnut, a daughter, is given $10 a month and 7 per cent of the profits. At the death of the widow the entire estate is to be equally divided among the children.

A few more such wills as this might be the means of keeping up the old farm by instilling in the youngsters a desire to make something of the "chance" left by the parents.

MESSIAH'S KINGDOM.

The Glorious Day of Divine Favor is Nearing.

The period in which sin is permitted has been a dark night to humanity, never to be forgotten; but the glorious day of righteousness and divine favor is soon to be ushered in by Messiah. He, as the SUN OF RIGHTEOUSNESS, shall arise and shine fully and clearly into and upon all, bringing healing and blessing, which will more than counterbalance the dreadful night of weeping, sighing, pain, sickness and death, in which the groaning creation has been so long. WHAT, WHEN AND HOW TO EAT

Overeating in Holiday Seasons Booms the Coffin Maker's Business.

By EUGENE CHRISTIAN, F. S. D.

Copyright, 1913, by American Press Association.

I WAS going into New York not long ago on a Pullman sleeper and shared a section with a gentleman whom I took to be a shrewd business man. We dropped into conversation. Politics, religion and invention were all touched upon with no particular enthusiasm. But when the business outlook and conditions of the country were reached my friend waxed warm with interest.

In reply to my query about business he said it was very dull, all of which I knew. But just to keep things going I asked at what time of the year he found business best. "Well," said he, "my business is very good in midsummer and just after Thanksgiving, but we are literally snowed under with orders just after Christmas and New Year's." And the gentleman gazed out of the window and drummed on the sill with his fingers.

This sounded queer. I had been in business a long time and couldn't think of anything that would be lively in midsummer, when everything was dull, and booming just after Christmas and New Year's, when nearly all business was at a standstill. And why just after Thanksgiving? What was it that happened on these particular dates that made this fellow's business boom? I was puzzled and looked it, and this shrewd business man seemed to enjoy my perplexity. I could stand it no longer, so I asked suavely: "What is your business?"

"The coffin business," was his blunt reply.

I suspected the truth at once, but decided to inquire. "Why," I asked, "is the coffin business so good at these several seasons of the year?"

"People eat themselves to death," answered the gentleman, with a rising inflection on the death.

"Yes, sir; I represent the largest casket concern in the world, and we can calculate it almost to a man," continued the boxmaker. "We know just about how many people are going to succumb on these dates, and we make up boxes and have 'em ready. They always come after 'em."

The Cause of Fermentation.

The great amount of sickness and deaths that always follow our feasting season is due almost wholly to the quantity and quality of food the people eat. Excessive drinking contributes something to the death roll on these dates, but nothing to compare with intemperance in eating.

Liquids, even intoxicants, while very injurious, pass from the body easily and seldom cause any form of congestion, which is the true source of nearly all disease.

Food taken in excess of the amount the body can use must be disposed of in some form. If it congests in the stomach or intestines it undergoes a process of fermentation and decomposition. The poisons generated by this decomposition process pass into the circulation and manifest themselves in over twenty diseases. I will illustrate by taking a simple case of fermentation, usually called sour stomach, technically called hyperchlorhydria.

This condition is caused by overeating or by taking the wrong combinations of food, such as acid fruits, sweets, coffee and white bread or cereal starch together at the same meal.

When food ferments in the stomach it causes an excess of hydrochloric acid. This causes the food to leave the stomach too quickly. The food passing from the stomach supercharged with acid irritates the intestines and undergoes further fermentation producing intestinal gas and usually congestion (constipation). The gas accumulates in the transverse colon, which becomes greatly distended and interferes with both the arterial and venal blood flow into and out of the lungs and into and out of the heart. This causes vertigo, dizziness and sometimes complete heart failure and death.

When We Lose Our Grip.

The mucous lining of both the stomach and intestines becomes irritated from contact with the acid, and the millions of little nerve fibers leading out from these organs to every part of the body become irritated also. This produces what we call nervousness. We suffer from restlessness, insomnia and inability to concentrate our thoughts. We lose our grip on things.

The stomach and brain bear the same relation to each other that a balloon bears to a basket. The brain or the mental faculties are therefore the first to suffer in cases of hyperacidity.

Our thoughts are very apt to be gloomy and melancholy under these conditions. People often anticipate trouble, imagine they are going insane and feel that they are going to be ostracized or divorced from all they love and sometimes take their own lives while laboring under one of these fits of melancholia.

Millions of people suffer from these conditions, the primary cause of which is hyperchlorhydria (fermentation), because they do not know enough to change their diet.

The Farmer Knows How to Feed Horses, but Not How to Feed Himself.

A horse that is fed too much corn will have blind staggers. This means that his food is fermenting and causing large quantities of gas. The swollen intestines press against the arteries leading into the heart and lungs, and he suffers, just as people do, part of the time from not enough blood flowing into the heart and then from too much when it spurts through. Both the impoverished supply and the arterial overflow produce the same general effects. Any farmer knows that the horse's diet must be changed. The remedy is green stuff in summer and bran mash in winter.

Liquor, beer, coffee, tea and tobacco cause too much acid, because the active principle or poisonous part of all these things is chemically called alkaloid, and the only way nature can neutralize or fight an alkaloid is with an acid; therefore she pours into the stomach a larger quantity of acid to protect us from suicide.

Different Foods at Different Seasons of the Year.

Correct eating means simple eating, only a few things at a meal. Food should be selected, first, according to one's age; second, according to the work or occupation and, third, according to the climate—that is, whether it is winter, summer, spring or fall.

A young or growing person can eat a great deal of sweets and starch foods, such as cereals, sugars, sirups, etc., while a person of middle age needs very few of these, and the older one gets the less starches and sweets are required.

A laboring man can eat and digest a large quantity of heavy proteid foods, such as meat, beans, milk, eggs, cheese, etc., while a man working at a desk or performing sedentary labor should use but few of these.

I do not believe in eating meat, and I maintain perfect health without it. But those who can digest and enjoy it and eliminate the poisons it contains I would not instruct against it. I would instruct them, however, that meat contains only two elements of nutrition—viz, fat and protein—and that they can get their fats in butter, cream, olive oil and nuts, and they can get their proteids in milk, eggs, beans and whole wheat in a much cheaper, more healthful, cleanly and better form.

I would also remind them that meat contains only 10 per cent fat, 20 per cent protein and 70 per cent water, and I do not think it advisable or economical to pay 70 cents for water in every dollar's worth of meat, especially in view of the fact that the water in meat is laden with urea and uric acid and other decomposition poisons.

We bestow much thought upon our house furnishings. We select with great care the fabric from which our clothes are made and the style and cut of each garment. Surely we should give as much thought to the things that make our blood and brain.

Building Up the Body.

If an architect should throw his building material together with no more thought than the average person bestows upon his food he would have merely a pile of debris, but by selecting, combining and proportioning his material with thought and care he builds up a strong, useful and beautiful structure.

So it is with our food. Food is to the human body what brick, iron, stone and timber are to a building. If it is selected, combined and proportioned correctly it will build up a strong, healthy, beautiful body. Furthermore, if an architect should put one crew of men to constructing a building and another smaller crew to tearing it down he would be considered insane. This, however, is just what we do when we take into our body good pure food and follow it with liquor, coffee and tobacco.

The following are a few simple rules which if observed would do a great deal to remove the primary cause of fermentation and the long train of ills that follow this disorder:

Eliminate coffee, tobacco and all intoxicating drinks.

Take very little meat and white bread (none is better).

The union of cereal starch and uric acid in meat makes rheumatism.

Omit sweets for breakfast and acid fruits with meals.

Take an abundance of fresh vegetables.

Drink an abundance of pure water with your meals.

Take an abundance of fresh air day and night.

Take your cereals whole, before they have been milled. Boil them until the grains burst open. This is the best form in which cereal products can be taken.

Evils of Modern Milling.

Keep the bowels active by the liberal use of plain wheat bran cooked and eaten with every meal. Wheat bran is rich in mineral salts, iron, protein and phosphates. It harmonizes chemically with all other foods. Its constant use will remove the cause of constipation, and therefore prevent fermentation, intestinal gas and consequent auto-intoxication (self poisoning).

Modern milling methods and cookery have taken nearly all of the coarse fiber out of our foods. This coarse stuff, called cellulose, is absolutely necessary to good stomach and intestinal digestion. Plain wheat bran puts back into the diet what supercivilized methods have taken out of it.

The health question is very largely the food question in its various forms, and the food question can be solved by any ordinary person if he will devote as much time to selecting, combining and proportioning his food as he does to his ordinary social affairs.

DODSON'S RESTAURANT.

Mrs. Dodson, who has been for years so successful in the restaurant business in Winchester, has succeeded to the ownership of the restaurant on Main street, corner of Park street. She has had the large dining room thoroughly overhauled, painted, refurnished, etc., and is serving as good a menu at popular prices as can be had in this section. Her many former customers will be pleased to know of her return to Winchester.

KEEPING THE TABLE SUPPLIED

How New England Gets Strawberries
In February and Melons in May.
What the Railroads Have Done to Accomplish This.

STRAWBERRIES in March, melons in May! Today this is the boast of no modern Lucullus, but the privilege of the many. You may even eat fresh strawberries away up in northern New England in February. Today the New Englander can cut his cantaloupe and eat fresh vegetables with snow still on the ground. New potatoes when his own are being planted are to him no longer a dream. Fresh peaches on his table when his own trees are just through blossoming excite about as much curiosity in him as the bride's bouquet of roses in January. No longer does that strawberry patch out in his own garden mean his first taste of the luscious fruit in June or July. It used to be so many years ago, but nowadays he has probably eaten quarts of berries long before his own have ripened.

All this has been brought about not by some agricultural wizard's work in our gardens, not by our meteorologists' work in studying the weather, but by the railroads. It is the result solely of the perfecting of our modern methods of transportation, the bringing up of our main steel highways of commerce to a standard not surpassed anywhere else in the world, enabling the traffic men and operating experts to work out fast freight schedules that today the New England table is but forty hours from southern farms.

There is no faster freight service in the world than that which carries strawberries to the New England table from the southland in two days. There is no such terminal yard anywhere as the great yard or yards at South Boston of the New York, New Haven and Hartford, where this fruit and early vegetables are received, bought and sold and distributed. As many as 300 carloads of strawberries are sometimes received there in a single day, and so quickly are they handled that one hour after they have entered the yard they are either being unloaded or are being sent out again to Portland or places even farther north, where they can be eaten the next morning.

The celerity with which this most perishable of perishable freight is handled from the time it is put in the freight car in Florida, Georgia or Virginia until it has reached the marketmen scattered all over New England is probably not exceeded anywhere in this country. It represents years of study, of painstaking work over railroad schedules, of the most effective co-operation between the railroads and of the most scientific management so far as it relates to this phase of the railroad problem. It has created a new business in New England, a business that practically did not exist twenty years ago. It has made new markets and a new industry for many; has wiped out the enormous advantage which Philadelphia and New York once seemed to have over Boston and New England in this matter of table delicacies and the handling of the early southern produce.

In the business world time is counted by the business day. In the produce business it is counted by the market day, and the market day begins and ends practically between 6 and 7 a. m. Thanks to a development of a fast freight service for this kind of produce, Boston's market day is now the same as New York's, and Portland, Me., is but one market day later than Philadelphia. Today a carload of strawberries can make the journey between Norfolk and Boston in just thirty-six hours and a half.

Perishable freight is the bane of the railroad man's existence. He sometimes loses more sleep over it than he does over passengers. It involves problems not met with in most kinds of freight. It must be delivered in the quickest time possible, and in this connection the railroad, like the shipper and the commission men, must always reckon on the market day. The loss of one market day on perishable freight like strawberries often means the loss of the entire shipment. The failure of a railroad's freight schedule to insure delivery of this kind of freight for a certain market day may mean the loss to that railroad of this entire business; to the commission men and marketmen it means so much less business to get returns from. On the other hand, the ability of the time table experts and the traffic men to knock off half an hour even on the running time of a freight train may mean to the road thousands of dollars of new business and for the commission men may open up a brand new line of trade. For years men have worked over these freight train schedules trying to lop off precious minutes of time in the yards, in the stops en route and in the delivery. Always their aim has been in the case of New England to get table luxuries, such as early strawberries, melons and peaches, into Boston by the second market day.

There is no more perishable produce than strawberries, and next to them comes fish. The New England railroads must bring the first into New England and carry the second out. In the case of berries it is absolutely essential that they be consumed within seventy-two hours from the time they are picked for them to command a price that will make the business worth while. When one considers that these early berries are picked in Virginia and points farther south the problem confronting the New England railroads in getting them on the New Englander's table within this limit of seventy-two hours is thus seen to be a big one. If a carload of strawberries consigned to a New England produce merchant misses a market day at the South Boston yard it means usually a depreciation of at least 5 cents on every box; on melons it means probably a cent apiece. That may not seem much, but in the aggregate it is enough frequently to wipe out the profit on an entire shipment.

In order to make a market day with this kind of freight, the railroad must get it into Boston, say, between the hours of 2 a. m. and 6 a. m. The market day begins promptly at 6 a. m. That is the hour when the big bell rings out in the perishable freight yard and there begins a scene of activity among the marketmen. When this bell rings the cars must be ready to open so that their contents can be inspected and sampled and the fruit or vegetables sold right as they stand in the car. Ten minutes after this bell rings the contents of the train may be on the way to the market.

This hour of 6 a. m., then, is the goal upon which the eye of the operating man and the traffic man in the railroad organization is fixed. It is the hour they must make, not one day, but every day, or lose the business. Down in Virginia, through Maryland and Delaware a freight train loaded with the luscious early berries of southern plantations, the first to feel the vitalizing effect of the spring sunshine, may be rushing through the night toward this goal with the speed of a passenger train. The engineer has this goal in mind, the yardmen along the route have it in mind, and up in the railroad offices the operating men have it in mind too. Like the man with the ball in the football game, these men are all working to put the train with its produce over the goal line before the big bell in the Boston yard rings out as a signal for the market men that another market day has begun.

New England has not always enjoyed the privilege of having strawberries in February or even melons in May. It was not many years ago that the average householder had to rely chiefly on his local fruits and vegetables. He waited until July for his strawberries. His melons and peaches he got later. Vegetables out of season were rare. This was when New England, by the then means of transportation, was many market days away from the south. These were the days of intensive railroads, as Mr. Brandeis would probably call them, short railroads connecting with one another, but operated separately and involving many transfer points. When freight has to go over several railroads operated on the intensive principle it is bound to suffer delays. Between Boston and New York there were the New Haven, the old Stonington road and the Boston and Providence, over which such freight had to travel.

Even in the early days of consolidation there was still much time consumed because the old freight transfer points were retained. Boston and northern New England were not entirely without early produce, but owing to the slow schedules and delays the business was a hazardous one for commission men. In these days the bulk of the southern fruit and vegetables was put on a boat at Norfolk and rushed by sea to Boston. Some of it went by rail to New York and thence by the old Stonington line to Boston. The sea was able to afford the better service for the most part. The boats from Norfolk made the third market day and sometimes not that. The Stonington line made possible a noon delivery on the second day, but while this enabled some large consumers, such as hotels, in Boston to serve fresh fruit at the dinner hour the general consumer had to wait until the third day, while the depreciation went on.

FEBRUARY STRAWBERRIES IN NEW ENGLAND.

In 1896 the first fast freight service was inaugurated, but it was not all that it ought to be until about four years ago.

At that time the New Haven road's officials got together with those of the Pennsylvania and decided to work out a schedule which would land the stuff from the southern farms in Boston in ample time for the second market day, counting from the time of its shipment. It was to be a schedule which would stand up under heavy service and be such as to warrant the commission men to increase their orders. The Pennsylvania put on several new trains, and a quick transfer was arranged for around New York.

In all about five trains are now required in the busy season to bring this produce from the south. The cars are picked up all over Virginia and even south of there and most of them are collected at Norfolk. There the Pennsylvania makes up a train, known as B 10, in one or more sections, and starts it north at noon. This train reaches the Jersey City yards of the Pennsylvania at 10 a. m. the next day. There it is broken up and the cars rushed to the New Haven transfer flats, which are taken around the East river and through Hell Gate by the most powerful tugs in New York harbor. In the great Harlem river yards it is "classified" again. It starts on its way to Boston at 3 p. m., making stops at New Haven, Providence, Mansfield and Readville to drop off cars. The old arriving time of this train was 2:30 a. m. in Boston, but thirty minutes have been cut off this in the last year. Frequently it comes into the South Boston yard at 1:30 a. m. Thirty-five cars is about the limit of a freight train. When 250 carloads of berries alone are coming up from the south in one day obviously this train can't take them all, though it runs in several sections. For the later sections of the Pennsylvania road's train bringing up the berries the New Haven has still a faster train ready. This train leaves the Harlem river yards at 7:25 p. m. and gets to Boston at 4 a. m. It also makes stops on the way where cars have to be dropped for midway points. All this takes time, so that the speed between these stops must of necessity be that of a fast passenger train.

These are the two great berry express trains of New England. With the Pennsylvania's trains they form the route over which daily passes the out of season fruit to which we are now so accustomed.

Though this stream of farm produce runs practically all of the year, it is subject to many changes. When February's snows cover New England the stream begins to trickle and then runs with the first strawberries ripened by the warmer sunshine of the south. Larger and larger it grows and now the stream takes on a touch of green along with the red. Green peas and spinach and the early greens are flowing northward, first a few cars, then more, then fifty, a hundred, and finally sometimes as high as 300 cars a day of strawberries alone when the crest is reached in early June. The berries give way to melons and more vegetables, then to peaches, potatoes and onions, and so it goes until all New England's own crops are ready for the reaping.

The amount of perishable freight borne northward to New England and distributed from Boston has grown enormously since the railroad men perfected this schedule. In 1902 there were handled in yard No. 1, in the South Boston terminal, 4,933 cars of perishable freight. In 1908 it had grown to 9,500, in 1908 to 7,808, and last year it totaled 8,881. Here are some of the figures:

	1902	1908
Berries	228	1,322
Cantaloupes	22	32
Watermelons	42	57
Peaches	44	61
Spinach	15	25
Tomatoes	134	37
Potatoes	644	1,552
Pineapples	28	202

It is this stream, rising and falling with the weather conditions, which feeds the summer resorts and has enabled New England's famous hotels to cater to the finest trade and made them independent of local truck farms. It has also greatly increased the number of Boston's commission houses.

The speed with which this stream flows northward is equaled by the celerity with which it is handled in the South Boston yard, the great distributing reservoir into which it pours its tons of produce. There are seven yards and thirteen freight houses making up the Boston terminal, and in and out of it run 1,800 cars a day, of which this perishable freight forms only a part.

As soon as one of the fast express freight trains reaches the yard in the early hours of the morning the cars are marked showing what yard they are intended for, this depending upon the firms to which they are consigned. Then the switch engines get busy. It takes an average of twenty minutes to mark the cars. They have so reduced the time of switching or classification, as it is called, that in thirty minutes every car in a forty car train will have been put in its proper yard and place. On an average it is just one hour from the time the big Pacific locomotive lands its train of fruit in the terminal that the cars are ready to have their seals broken. That is when it is ready to be sold by the marketmen, though the sales do not begin till the bell rings at 6 a. m.

There are few other cities where this kind of freight is handled so close to the market. Ten minutes is all that is required in Boston to transfer it to the market from the car. In this terminal, where 4,135 freight cars can be kept at one time, there is sufficient space provided so that teams can back up to 2,100 of these cars.

About 95 per cent of the produce brought into this yard every day remains there or is shipped out by express. The cars destined for Portland and for northern New England begin moving out by noon again, but from Boston a radius of at least twenty-five miles is covered direct. Portland will get its berries in time for breakfast the next morning.

About 75 per cent of New England is affected by this fast freight service perfected by the railroad men. The sea has had to yield this traffic to the line of steel which ties the north to the south. Today the New Englander, even though he lives in Maine, is as certain of fresh strawberries for his table in the spring as he is of his own garden truck in the summer.

When the great Hell Gate bridge and Connecting Railroad joining the New Haven system with the Pennsylvania is completed in New York city this schedule may be shortened even more. This great engineering feat, undertaken by the two roads, will obviate the long water transfer around Manhattan Island. It is only three miles across New York bay from Greenville, where the Pennsylvania's trains roll in from the south, to Bay Ridge, where the cars will again take the rails bound for Boston, and the dangerous and delaying tides of Hell Gate will thus be avoided. While it will not mean the saving of another market day, it will mean that more trains can be handled and may result some day in making Portland's market day the same as Boston's.

The railroad is the great harvester. It gathers the grain in one corner of our country and distributes it in another than man may be fed with the staff of life; but, more than that, it sees that his table is supplied with the good things of the ground though he live amid the snows.

HELP THE CONDUCTOR.

In order to avoid a fight on a Woburn car in Medford last week in which several hilarious young men were engaged, Martin Durant of Woburn attempted to change his seat while the car was in motion. He slipped on the running board and was dragged some distance. His knees were badly bruised and he sustained other injuries.

There is much conductors can do to quell disturbances on a car, but unless those complaining passengers will stand by a conductor in the discharge of what is his duty to both the company and the riding public, to the very finish, they might just as well keep quiet. Passengers invariably refuse to help out the conductor by giving their names. If they would do this then disturbances on the cars would not be so common.

HEATING SYSTEM.

Now is the proper time to consider a warm house for next winter with no gas to kill the flowers. We are the only firm in Winchester that can furnish you with practical heating men of all kinds, for hot air furnaces, steam and hot water work, at a moment's notice for 52 weeks in the year.

We advise attention now to that important feature in your home. Anybody can make a bluff at cleaning your furnace but it takes a practical furnace man to produce results. We have the practical men and would rather serve you now than in the busy season. It being much easier now to get the repairs.

Boys entered the Chapin School-house last Saturday afternoon and getting into the rooms where the summer school supplies were, did much mischief, and also, it is said, carried off some of the articles. Boys were in the building during the forenoon while men were busy painting and putting the building in readiness for the fall term of the school. While there they went to the basement and pushed the bolt of a back door, so that when the men went the boys had easy access to the building in the afternoon, and that was when the mischief was done.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Bond have taken a cottage at Annisquam for the remainder of the summer.

Horace Martin of Sheffield Road has returned from Camp Durrell.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis E. Getty of Wolcott Terrace are spending their vacation in the White Mountains.

Benjamin Nowlands is spending a few days at New London, N. H.

George Willey employed by James Fitzgerald had his right hand severely burnt on Manchester Field last Saturday morning. He had raked the rubbish from the fireworks and had set fire to it. In the pile there was an unexploded bomb which was lighted by the fire and which did the damage.

Carlisle Elliot of Cutting street has taken a position with the Coca Cola Co. He will travel through the Western part of the New England States.

Mrs. Russell Wiggin of Sheffield road has returned from a very pleasant vacation down Maine.

Forbes Getty is at Camp Wildwood, Me., for the summer.

Irene Lord and Elbra Dean have returned for the remainder of the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Nickerson and daughter Carol of Grove street have returned from a motor trip in the White Mountains.

Newsy Paragraphs.

The Symmes Corner section of the town, which has been greatly developed as a residential quarter during the last four years, will be still further improved when the houses now being built there are completed. One of the more recent of these is on Grove street near the Corner, on a lot of land formerly owned by Mr. Albert D. Rogers and sold a year ago last spring through the Edward T. Harrington Company's local office to Mr. Harris M. Richmond of Bruce road. The house is being built by the Burton H. Wiggin Company of Lowell under the supervision of the architect, Mr. Allan E. Boone, who is a life-long resident of this town. The house contains sixteen rooms, is of Colonial design and built of Harvard brick. The work of construction is proceeding slowly in accordance with the wishes of the owner, and the house will not be ready for occupancy before April or May of next year.

Mr. and Mrs. G. Raymond Bancroft are at Orr's Island Maine.

Francis Getty of Wolcott terrace is spending the week at Canton, Mass.

Mr. and Mrs. Allen Wood and son of Cabot street have returned from Belgrade, Me.

Supt. Dotten of the Water and Sewer Department is the possessor of a cane that used to be carried by the late Mr. Andrew Todd, who for some time was Chief of Police of Winchester. The entire police force then consisted of Mr. Todd who was chief and patrolman, and a man of massive build. Times have changed considerably since the days that we used to see him patrolling the town. The pickup was then in the basement of the shop on Vine street now used by the Water Department.

NOVELTY SHOWER.

Winchester Laundry employees Wednesday evening surprised one of their associates Miss Annie Cullen, 211 Main street and showered her with all sorts of novelties, in anticipation of the approaching marriage of the young woman to Mr. Hugh Rooney.

Miss Cullen is well liked among her co-workers and when the plan was first proposed, the young people joined heartily and a decidedly successful surprise was the result. During the evening the natural talent of "those present" made itself evident in the excellent entertainment which followed the shower. Mandolin solos were contributed by Mrs. Ida Coffin and Miss Angie Connolly, vocal selections by Misses Mary Saxon and Elizabeth Mooney and Patrick Rowan; recitations by Misses Jennie Lester and Mary Joyce and accordion selections by Miss Rose McCauley and Patrick Rowan. A splendid collation was served.

The party comprised: Mrs. Ida Coffin, Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Rowan, Misses Mary Joyce, Jennie Lester, Winifred Maguire, Katherine Connolly, Rose McCauley, Katherine Connolly of Winchester, Angie Connolly, Mary Cullen, Lena Tighe, Rose Cullen, Mary Eason, Annie Cullen, Helen Doherty, Margaret Cullen, Catherine McLaughlin, Mrs. Thomas Cullen of Saxonville, and Garrett Cullen.

FORTY YEARS' SERVICE
IN WATER DEPARTMENT.Supt. Dotten Observes Event by a Full Day's Work.

Yesterday, Mr. William T. Dotten, Supt. of the Water Department, rounded out 40 years of continuous service in that department. There was no observance of the event, Mr. Dotten attending to his duties as usual, although he might have had a day off, or longer, had he desired. But a vacation for him has no attractions, he not enjoying what to many is considered such a luxury. He is too busy.

It was in April, 1873, that Mr. Dotten first went to work in Winchester. He had just come from Nova Scotia, a young man full of grit and push. His first work was on a farm owned by Fred L. Marsh at the corner of Wildwood and Cambridge streets. Mr. Marsh died long ago, and the farm succeeded to the Purringtons, who are today tilling the soil on this same farm which is one of the most fertile in this section. Mr. Dotten evidently having enough of farm life in his boyhood days, on the 25th of August of that same year, took a walk to where Winchester was then building its splendid North Reservoir. When he arrived on the scene workmen were busy clearing the basin of a rich growth of trees and underbrush under Mr. Asa Fletcher.

the entire scene being vastly different from what we see it today.

From the time the first water main or service pipe was laid in Winchester up to the present, it has been done under his supervision. He can point out their location in the streets to an inch, also the gates and service shut-offs. For many years after water was introduced the town was poor, the inhabitants numbering but 3200, so that the revenue was small and had to be thinly spread over the new town in which there was so much to be done. During these years of financial stringency, the town could not afford a horse and wagon for the Water Department, so Mr. Dotten had to get along the best he could with a wheelbarrow, and he was often seen going about town with this vehicle loaded with tools or pipe. Later came the horse and wagon.

The foregoing shows what a man can do by a close attention to his duties. From a young man, fresh from the interior of Nova Scotia, whose education when he came here was almost entirely on the farm, he has risen by pluck and perseverance to the trustworthy and important office of Superintendent of the Water Department. And this determination and grit remains with him today—he'll accomplish anything in his line of work if it can be accomplished. Coupled with this is his genial disposition and kindheartedness. But for this latter trait in his makeup he would be worth considerable money today, yet he never expresses regret at this, but only remembers the good he has tried to do.

THE A. C. A. MEET.

Winchester Boat Club Won the Sailing Contest as Usual.

The American Canoe Association held its annual meet this year on the beautiful St. Lawrence river among the Thousand Islands.

The meet opened on August eighth at noon, the cannon was fired and the Canadian, the A. C. A. and the American flags were raised. The meet lasts officially two weeks, but many come early and stay late, some even come as early as May and stay into September.

The races did not begin until the twelfth, which gave the canoeists a chance to get their boats ready. The first day the open canoe sailing race around the Island, which was won by Geo. P. Douglass of N. Y., the relay race, won by Mr. Frothing, Dudley Murphy and Douglass, and the hurry scurry race, won by Eslebon of N. Y. Ned Ginn of Winchester second, were run off.

There were a great many other races, the four most important of which were the decked sailing trophy, the Club race, the open sailing trophy, and the paddling trophy.

The Club race is a sailing race consisting of three or more representatives from each club, sailing for the club. There were about six clubs represented. The Winchester Boat Club team won. There were on the team Mr. H. D. Murphy, Dudley B. Murphy and Mr. Frothing of Boston, who sailed for the club in place of Jim Newman. The prize, which is a flag, will be put in the Club House. The Winchester Boat Club has never been beaten yet in this race.

The Decked sailing Trophy race was won by Ralph Britton, the Canadian challenger, he beating Geo. Douglass by seven minutes, but Douglass protested him on a technicality and was awarded the cup, although Douglass himself was protested for the same thing, and lied out of it.

The Open Trophy was won by Farnum Dorsey, a former resident of Winchester.

The Paddling Trophy was won by Zuk after six months of training. The prizes were awarded by H. D. Murphy, chairman of the regatta committee, and were said by everybody to be the best lot ever selected. The meet closed the following day with firing of the cannon.

Dudley Murphy.

LAST OF UNION SERVICES.

This coming Sunday the last of the Union Services of the Baptist, Methodist and Congregational Churches will be held morning and evening in the Congregational Church. Preaching by the Rev. Edward M. Noyes of Newton Center. Noyes has often been heard in Winchester with great acceptance. His many friends will be glad to greet him this last Sunday of the vacation.

A REMARKABLE CASE.

That is Attracting Attention of Winchester Doctors.

Probably the most remarkable case yet had the Winchester Hospital has yet had is that of Pasquale Pollitano. Two weeks ago, he was taken there with a badly fractured skull received in a head on collision with an automobile on Cambridge street, at the foot of Myopia road. This case is also a remarkable one to the doctors and shows what may be done with severe head injuries provided certain vital centres are not disturbed. At first no one supposed that he had much chance of surviving.

After the accident occurred Pollitano was taken to the hospital and in the meantime several doctors had been summoned. He was immediately placed upon the operating table, when a very bad fracture of the skull was discovered. A loose piece of the skull bone, three inches long and an inch wide at the widest part and triangular shaped, was carefully removed, revealing the brain to the operators which was oozing through the fracture. This was closed as nearly as possible by sutures, but for days every time the dressing was removed some of the brain oozed out. The hole is now gradually closing and the doctors expect that a firm, tough skin covering will form. The use of bone plates to aid in closing the gap was considered but it was decided that the condition of the patient didn't warrant it. A celluloid covering outside the gauze dressing is now being used instead. Since coming to the Hospital he has probably lost at least two tablespoonfuls of brain matter. How much was lost before reaching there is not known.

A great amount of blood was lost which left him dangerously weak, so much so that immediate steps had to be taken to overcome this loss, if possible. Transfusion was decided upon and a cousin willingly consented to part with the necessary amount of blood. A physician from Boston who has recently perfected a new method for transfusion was summoned to perform this interesting operation. Previous to the transfusion Pollitano's pulse was 168 but soon after the injection it dropped to 108. His pulse and temperature are now normal. All of the Winchester physicians who were known to be at home were invited and some seven or eight were present.

For several days the patient was unconscious, hovering between life and death. Finally he opened his eyes and slowly regained consciousness, but for a few days he failed to recognize his wife although he did the doctors. There was also a lack of coordination, his brain, eyes and hands refused to work in conjunction. On being asked to take an article held out to him he would move forward his hand, cautiously watching the article, and then close his hand over it, as he supposed, but he missed it every time by several inches. This after a time passed away and he can now take anything handed to him.

Unless something unforeseen should occur Pollitano will recover and will be discharged from the hospital a well man within a reasonably short time.

The doctors and the attendants at the hospital agree that from the beginning up to the present time this has been a very interesting case. Furthermore it shows the great advances that are being made in surgery, as none of those who saw the condition of the patient believed that he would survive. Again this proves the great benefit of the Winchester Hospital, for if Pollitano had been taken to a Boston Hospital the long journey added to the injury would probably have proved fatal.

HORSE BROKE

THROUGH BRIDGE.

It Was Pronounced Unsafe by Expert Some Years Ago.

A horse belonging to Laraway & Co. broke through the planking of the wooden bridge on Walnut street, Wednesday morning. The horse was severely strained and the harness badly damaged, before the animal was liberated from its predicament. This bridge spans the Aberjona river just below the Whitney mill on Walnut street, and has been in bad condition for a long time. As far back as when Messrs. Richards and Dwinell were on the Board of Selectmen it was in bad condition, but to make sure that this was true these two members of the Board had an expert examine the bridge. He went over it thoroughly, examined the cross timbers and abutments under the bridge, and in his report condemned it as being unsafe.

Probably this bridge would have been rebuilt long ago but for the uncertainty as to what the changes would be when the grade crossing in the square was eliminated and how they would affect the Walnut street bridge. Briefly, the large cross timbers under the bridge are badly rotted, and will require prompt attention if accidents such as happened to Mr. Laraway's horse, or even worse, are to be avoided. The town cannot afford to wait longer.

SELECTMEN'S MEETING.

Progressive Election Officers May be Appointed at Polls Only.

The Board met at 7.30 p. m., all present.

A warrant for the State Primary to be held Tuesday, September 23, 1913, was signed and ordered transmitted to William R. McIntosh acting as Constable for service.

A letter was received from Andrew J. Solis, Chairman of the Progressive Town Committee, calling attention to the fact that the Progressive Party had no election officers to represent it at the polls during the primary election and on election day and urging that the Selectmen by virtue of Chapter 235, Sections 226-227, remedy this by giving the Progressive Party the recognition to which its vote entitled it. The Clerk was instructed to reply that Section 226, Chapter 235, Acts of 1913, doubtless the Act to which Mr. Solis referred, provides for the appointment of election officers in cities; Section 227 for the appointment of election officers in towns divided into voting precincts. The provisions of law relating to the appointment of election officers in towns not divided into voting precincts are found in Sections 235-237 of said Act.

Section 235 provides that "The selectmen shall, before the opening of the polls, appoint two voters as ballot clerks" and "that such ballot clerks shall be so appointed as to represent the two leading political parties as equally as may be" and that additional ballot clerks who may be subsequently appointed "may be appointed from voters not representing either of the two leading parties."

Section 237 provides that the selectmen "shall at least five days before a state or town election appoint voters as tellers" also that "tellers appointed at elections at which official ballots are used shall be so appointed that the election officers making and assisting in the canvass and count of votes shall equally represent the two leading political parties."

In Section 1 of said Act relating to the construction of terms it is provided that "the two leading political parties" shall apply to the political parties which elected the highest and next highest number of members of the General Court at the preceding annual state election." As the Republican and Democratic parties elected the highest number of members of the General Court at the last annual election they are the two leading political parties within the meaning of the Act.

It appears, therefore, that the only election officers who may be legally appointed from other than the Republican and Democratic parties are such additional ballot clerks as the selectmen may appoint after the opening of the polls.

An application was received bearing the endorsement of the Chief of Police and granted for a license as hawker and peddler of fruits and vegetables from Peter J. McHugh, 18 Carter street, Woburn.

The Chief of Police reported that John Coull, licensed common victualler at 578 Main street has sold his business to Mrs. Elsie Dodson who applied for a license as common victualler at that address and whose application was approved and granted.

EFFICIENCY OF THE AUTO CHEMICAL.

Makes a Run of Over Two Miles and Saves Irwin Bros. Barn.

The efficiency of the auto chemical as a subduer of fires never had a better exemplification than it did early Thursday morning. A telephone call came into the central fire station at 2.19 for a fire in the barn of Irwin Bros. on Ridge street, it being discovered by one of the Cox boys who was on his way home from the beach. The distance from the centre to the scene of the fire is two and one half miles, near the Arlington line. It was only a few minutes after receiving the call when the auto arrived at the fire and had a stream playing, thereby saving the barn and the contents, which were composed of a horse, the usual farming tools and 30 tons of loose hay. The fire started in the cellar among a lot of bagging, etc., and the cause is supposed to be spontaneous combustion. The timbers and flooring were badly burned and will have to be replaced; aside from this there was no other damage. A horse tied in his stall had his hair singed, and when the firemen arrived they found him on the floor, having broken his stall rope. He was not otherwise injured.

This is the first time in the history of the fire department that a building in that section was ever saved from fire. There is no water, and before the advent of the auto chemical it took a good half hour for the apparatus to reach there, and then there was nothing the firemen could do but look on. The fire had reached within about five feet of the hay, and had this become ignited nothing could have saved the building. The chemical saved the building, absolutely, and it is the most efficient piece of fire apparatus the town ever had.

Indecision is a bad trait for the operator of an automobile to have. One of this class of operators found himself on the lawn of the Town Hall building Monday night before he had finally made up his mind whether to continue along Washington street or go down Mt. Vernon street. A year or so ago a woman at this same place was undecided. She just missed one of the large elm trees and butted into the brick wall of the Town building. Another case was that of a girl. She was undecided whether she would drive her car over to Church street or go down Main street. She went into the window of the ice cream store. Make up your mind in advance, is a good suggestion to follow.

YOUR AFFAIRS AND MINE.

Even the ordinary citizen here in Winchester and elsewhere has the means conveniently at hand to check the speed maniac who drives his automobile without regard to the safety of persons who may be compelled to travel the roads in humbler vehicles or who are compelled to cross from one side of the street to the other. Much of the trouble is thoughtlessness, though, of course, some is recklessness verging on the criminal. But the ordinary citizen has a remedy.

The Spectator suggests that the number of every offending car be sent to Chief of Police McIntosh. This will cause a record to be made of that machine, and if the offense is at all habitual, will result in a warning which will be much more effective in reaching mere thoughtlessness than more formal proceedings.

"Is the Church of God a Beggar?" is the caption of an article before The Spectator. Rev. Alexander W. Bealer, D. D., is the writer, and what he says is of great interest to every churchman or at least ought to be. Dr. Bealer says that on account of the lukewarmness of those who profess to love God, His church is made to stand before the world as a beggar. The Spectator quotes these extracts from the article in question:

If some disinterested spectator from the planet of Mars could drop down to visit us and could mingle freely among our people it would not be more than a month before he would come to the conclusion that the institution which is called the church of God was the great beggar of the globe. He could not reach any other conclusion if he was a man with a reasoning mind. On the Sabbath day he would see preachers standing in their pulpits begging for money to keep the church from getting so deep in debt that it could never more be extricated. And this plea would be made to men and women who professed to love the church and who were willing to do anything in the world for it if it did not cost them too much money, too much time, or too much pleasure. He would see men who belong to the different churches going out begging money from the other members to be used in paying the preachers so that they could manage to live. And these men and women who had to be begged for money for this purpose professed to love the preachers and to be vitally interested in their welfare. And this visitor could see other men and women going out to beg money to be used in carrying on the work of the church, money designated as mission money. The people who belong to the churches would profess to believe that God wanted them to carry on this work and yet they would have to be begged for the money needed for this purpose. And when the summer time was approaching the visitor from the other planet would see the poorer classes starting up little places in which ice cream was dispensed at five cents a plate, and a scanty plate at that. And he would be told that this was characteristic of those who wanted to make money without too much work. And his surprise would grow when he would see great companies of women, when the building of the church they loved needed repairing, opening up these ice cream resorts on some private lawn to dispense the cooling stuff for money to be used in the work they had in view.

Every member of the church should give to its support, both the rich and the poor. The Spectator longs to see the time come when the people here in Winchester and elsewhere will take as much pride in the property of the churches to which they belong as they take in their own homes, when they will feel an honest pride in the work of the church and will give as they ought to give instead of regarding it as a beggar.

Is there any power in cunning, in shrewd, long-headed, deceptive methods that can for a moment compare with the truth, with absolute integrity? There is no advertisement in the long run that can compare with that which comes from the reputation of always and everywhere telling the exact truth, of being absolutely reliable. Every time a Winchesterite deceives he knows that he has to cover his tracks. He is always on thorns for fear of discovery, for everything in his own nature is trying to betray him; but when he tells the truth, because he is built on the truth plan, he has everybody supporting and backing him. The Winchesterite who is telling the truth and is conscious that he is backed by the eternal principle of Right and Justice, can look the world in the face without wincing. There is victory in his eye, assurance in his very bearing.

Winchester is slow and dead, you say. And business is pretty tart. Tell The Spectator this: In Winchester today
Are you doing a citizen's part?
Are you letting your money and trade depart?
Do the big city stores you beguile?
If this is the case, you're not doing your part
To make Winchester a place worth while.

A lady while at Woburn shopping the other day saw some very fine looking eggs, selling at twenty-five cents the dozen. Her womanly instinct quickly prompted her to purchase two dozen, so placing them safely in her bag she jumped on a car and soon arrived in Winchester. During the trip she must have pushed herself against the bag, for when she opened the package she found all the eggs broken but three. She thought she would make a three-egg cake for supper. So she broke the remaining "hen fruit" but they were so "strong" that—well, you know the rest. Moral: Trade in Winchester.

The following beautiful lines from the pen of Howard L. Wentworth have been sent to The Spectator with the request that he publish them in The Star:

A little patient sacrifice,
A little moisture in the eyes;
When hope within our brother dies,
That is love.
A little sunshine every day,
To cheer some heart on its lonely way,
With kindly deeds and words we say,
That is hope.
Fortitude to bear and wait,
And win the love of those who hate,
Tho' it may come at last too late,
That is patience.
To feel our brother's urgent need
Tolerant both in thought and creed,
Following where the light may lead,
That is charity.
The power to rule o'er self supreme,
To rise inspired by some great dream,
And tune life to a loftier theme,
That is faith.

To know that things must come out right—
That dawn will break the darkest night,
And crown the morn with radiant light,
That is trust.

Don't waste time arguing with a person who knows he can't be wrong.

A Winchesterite who is successful through his own efforts rarely boasts.

Plans for the setting apart of Malden as a separate postoffice, instead of remaining a part of the Boston postal district, are being discussed by Malden merchants, and petitions will probably be circulated asking the postoffice department to take such action. Other places that went into the Boston district because of advantages held out, are said to be contemplating taking the same step as Malden.

Brockton boasts of having as a citizen the greatest man in all the world—that is, the greatest in avoidupolis. His name is Jackson. FRIAR TUCK.

Mr. George K. Nugent has sold his estate located at No. 17 Keawin road, corner of Washington street. The property consists of a 2 1/2 story dwelling containing 13 rooms and two bath-rooms, a garage and five acres of land, the land having frontages on Washington street, Keawin road and Highland avenue. The first story of the building is of field stone and it is one of the most attractive estates in that part of Winchester. The assessed valuation is $11,000. The purchaser is Moses Richmond of Boston. Mr. Nugent has purchased a new three-story and basement brick and stone apartment house at 124 Longwood avenue, Brookline. The first story is of Indiana limestone. There are three suites of nine rooms and two baths each, occupying 7085 square feet of land. The rating is $25,000, and the selling price exceeded that sum. Mr. Nugent, who is now abroad, purchased this property for an investment. The tax value is $25,000, although the purchase price was considerably in excess of the assessment.

Judging by the way Friar Whitfield Tuck's temperature rises whenever the name of Gov. Foss is mentioned these days, the measure of a man's democracy is the virulence of his antipathy to the Old Boy. Whitfield, be it remembered, was the original Bryan man and the most strongly indorsed of all the distinguished and distinguished Democrats who have been deprived of their birthright under the Foss administration. In Tuck's case, the office practically wore itself out seeking the man, but the Old Boy had his blunders on and couldn't see it. The Friar, by the way, still believes in Bryan and Sumner, but there isn't an office in Massachusetts that would tempt him to believe in Foss. He almost had a fit of apoplexy the other day when he asked a friend: "As between Benton and Gardner, who do you think will win the Republican nomination?" and the friend replied: "Foss."—[Truth.]

Keep Your Blood Cool

by Right Kind of Food and Enjoy Hot Weather

It's largely a matter of selecting the hot weather diet with reason.

Summer is Nature's season of activity—seed-time, growing-time, harvest-time—a time of expansion, energy—and Man is influenced to do his part—to put forth greater effort because activity is in the very air.

BUT—caution is necessary to avoid excessive heat from combustion (digestion) of heavy, greasy food, (Nature's way of generating body-heat in winter) in addition to the heat of the summer atmosphere.

Grape-Nuts

is the Ideal Food for hot weather because, being largely predigested (and concentrated) in the making at the factory, it is quickly absorbed, a small quantity affording great endurance with little effort in digesting it.

Grape-Nuts, made of Whole Wheat and Barley, contains all the natural elements of these cereals, including the phosphate of potash grown in the grain for rebuilding waste tissue cells, especially of brain and nerves.

Try for breakfast, lunch or supper:—

A Little Fruit; Saucer of Grape-Nuts and Cream; A Soft Boiled Egg; Slice of Crisp Toast, and a Cup of Postum, hot—or iced with sugar and lemon.

Surprising how cool, yet full of healthy energy and "go" one feels on such a meal no matter what the weather.

TELEPHONE NUMBER 29

If any person desires to vote for Gov. Foss there is no law to prevent writing his name on the ballot.

The absence of people on vacations is very noticeable. Another week and the throngs now at the seashore and mountains will about all be at home.

The primaries will be held September 23, and the polls will be open from 5.45 a. m. to 2 p. m. Keeping the polls open longer would, no doubt, result in more votes.

The Thaw case from the start to the present time has done much to add to the belief that the law does not apply equally to all classes of the people. The time is coming when there will be a reform.

According to the Boston Coal Exchange the price of coal will be boosted again September first to 25 cents a ton more than it was July 1. So by ordering your winter's supply now will be found an opportunity to save money.

Woburn is to become the headquarters of Aviator James McGrath and in all probability, Library park will be the scene of his operations. So if you should see something dropping out of the clouds you will know that it means another addition to the already long list.

Supt. of School Herron believes in keeping in touch with educational matters. This week he is attending the Fourth International Congress of School Hygiene at Buffalo, N.Y., not only as a delegate of the Congress of Massachusetts but also by appointment of the Education Department but also by appointment of Gov. Foss. Winchester schools will therefore derive benefit from this great congress. This honoring of the head of Winchester schools is a pleasing testimony to Mr. Herron's ability and interest in education.

REV. CLARENCE L. BALL.

Was a Universalist Pastor, and Retired to Enter Business.

Rev. Clarence L. Ball of 14 Symmes road, who died at his summer home at Chebeague Island, Casco Bay, Me., last Saturday, was forty-five years old and was a native of Lexington, O. He was a graduate of Harvard, the Boston University Law School and Tufts Divinity School, and began his career as a mission worker in Missouri and Kansas. He founded a monthly publication, the Missouri and Kansas Universalist, while in the West.

He returned East in 1897, and for several years was minister of the Universalist Church in Webster. Mr. Ball then accepted a call to Springfield, when he took charge of the Second and Third Unitarian churches. He was later called to the pastorate of the Church of the Redeemer in Halifax, N. S. In December, 1897, he accepted a call from the Second Unitarian Church in Athol, where he remained three years. He had preached but little since leaving the Athol church, having given up the ministry to enter business life.

Rev. Mr. Ball was an able preacher and had a pleasing personality that made hundreds of friends wherever he went.

He is survived by a wife and two children. The funeral was held at Chebeague, Me., Tuesday, at his late residence.

Two Games That Will Delight The Fans.

Saturday Winchester will play the Brookline A. A. of Brookline. This team is up to the standard of all the teams brought here this season and only last Saturday held the Hvnans team to a 5 to 4 game. A good game is looked for.

On Labor Day morning we go to Woburn and play the second of the three game series. We have secured a good pitcher for the Monday game and as the rest of the team will be the same as last Saturday Woburn will have to go some to beat us. The game starts at 10.30, everybody come up and root for Winchester. In the afternoon we play the third and final game on Manchester Field. Tift will pitch and the game will be called at 3.30 prompt. Probably the largest crowd ever seen on the field will be there.

BOSTON THEATRE.

Having just completed the most sensational trans-continental tour in the history of musical comedies, "Lew Fields' All Star Hanky Panky Co." commemorates the occasion of its third visit to Boston with the celebration of the 100th consecutive week at the Boston Theatre on Monday, Sept. 1st, when this monster organization begins a limited engagement with a special Labor Day matinee.

This jumble of jollification with phenomenal runs of 150 and 200 consecutive nights in New York, Chicago and this city needs no introduction, and that it will be given in this forthcoming Metropolitan engagement for the first time at "Popular Prices" with exactly the same All-Star cast. The prices are only 25, 50, 75c and $1.00. No higher.

There must be some reason why our customers have doubled in number during the past season.

Our foodstuffs are the very best, are handled in a careful and cleanly manner, sold at reasonable prices, and delivered promptly. On these accounts, and because of personal attention given to every customer, they find it unnecessary to purchase in Boston.

We are Winchester agents for all products of Mt. Zircon Spring Water Co.—including Ginger Champagne, natural and sparkling waters.

Sole distributors of SQUAB raised on Glen Road, Winchester.

FISHERMEN HAD FINE TIME.

But They Encounter Heavy Storm, Making Fun For Some.

The Royal Arcanum fishing trip held on Wednesday, August 27 was a huge success in every way, 31 enjoying the trip, especially Ben Edwards. The prizes were divided as follows: Largest edible fish, $5.00, D. C. Allen, 16½ pounds. Most edible fish, $4.00, Frank Taylor and J. F. Webber tied with eight each. First edible fish, $3.00, Maynard Johnson. Mr. F. Taylor also had the honor of having 43 pounds of dressed fish to bring home.

The trip had its humorous as well as exciting moments which should be mentioned here. The earnest endeavors of Ben Edwards to prove that he was a seaman were laughable, also the exciting moments when "Tim" Green begged the captain to conduct him from his perch up forward to the "stairway" so he could go down "cellar".

Shortly after the chowder had been served a terrific thunder shower appeared which was very interesting "for some" as well as exciting. The captain said that he had never seen it blow any harder than it did for 15 minutes and "Tim" Green is also of the same mind. A coasting schooner which appeared to be heading for Maine was about a mile from the fishing party and lost all her sails but one jib. The efforts of the storm were not all used up around Swampscott for when the car had reached a point part way between Lynn and Saugus we encountered a car which had been derailed owing to the gravel which had been washed onto the track for some hundred feet. After considerable delay "Timmie" mapped out a different route and we returned back to Lynn and started all over, eventually arriving in Winchester at 9.40, hungry, tired, but all contented with their day's sport.

N. B. The hardest working man should have been given a prize and next year it is hoped the committee will arrange for one, for no one will deny that Clyde Bell had more bites and less to show for his work than any man on the boat.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

John Craig opened his sixth season at the Castle Square Friday evening. The house was crowded to the doors, and there was a cordial reception for all the players that make up Mr. Craig's famous stock company. The play was Dion Boucicault's brilliant comedy, "London Assurance," and it will be continued through the coming week. In the cast Miss Doris Olsson is introduced to the Boston public as Lady Gay Spanker, and she promises to become an immediate Castle Square favorite. Mr. Craig is playing the role of Charles Courtly, and with William P. Carleton as Dazzle, Donald Meek as Sir Harcourt Courtly, Florence Shirley as Grace Harkaway, and Frederic Ormonde, Carney Christie, Al Roberts and Mabel Colcord in the other parts, Mr. Craig's season is starting off very auspiciously.

Quite an assortment of men's pants for everyday wear, well made and from good material, at $3.00 and $3.50 are carried in stock by Franklin E. Barnes & Co., Main street.

BASE BALL.

Winchester Captures First in Series From All-Woburn.

In the first of the series of great battles between our team and Woburn we came off the victors. The game was played under ideal weather conditions before a crowd of 2000 or 2500 people. To persons looking at the green enclosed field from the lower end it was a perfect picture, and one of the most orderly crowds, considering its size, ever on the field. The police arrangement was perfect and Chief McIntosh had his men placed to advantage should there have been any disorder.

The Woburn crowd cheered until they were hoarse in the first inning, but during the rest of the game were as silent as clams. Of course winning one game does not mean that we are the better team, but from the way the boys came from behind and won out, it looks as though the Woburns will have to put up a better article of ball than they did Saturday to get away with the series.

One of the pleasant features of the game was the presence of Mr. Wallace Goldsmith, the greatest baseball cartoonist in the country, sent out by the Boston Globe to cover the game, and all those who missed the Sunday Globe missed a treat in not seeing the sketches as they were a "scream", and to round out the afternoon fun the Fifth Regiment Band furnished a concert during the game. The only wonder is that more of the citizens at large do not come down and see what enjoyment is furnished every Saturday. To the young and old who attend the games, nine out of ten that know baseball say they prefer to stay in town Saturday and witness their own team play ball, as the game now furnished by the team could hardly be bettered.

Now for the game. In the first inning Woburn scored two runs through a combination of hits and poor judgment of the Winchester players in handling the ball. After that Tift tightened up amazingly and not a man saw third base again during the game. Two hits were made off Tift in the first and a double by Jones in the sixth were the total for the afternoon. Tift got Woburn's heaviest slugger, McDonald, three times on strikes and the rest of the team was equally helpless. The pitching of Tift really tells the story as they did not have a "look-in" with his pitching.

For our side Badger scored a run in the first, then Mitchell sent Murray home in the third with the tying run, and perhaps the crowd didn't yell. You could hear them in Woburn. Then in the sixth a base on balls, a sacrifice and force out put a great combination of speed on Morrissey and Dickie, and they proceeded at once in the great "goat getting" act and made a success of it. The minute the Woburn pitcher started to pitch, Dickie started off slowly for second, while Morrissey, with Manager LeDuc coaching like Hughie Jennings, got a good lead off third. Then the Woburn catcher, instead of holding his throw or making a "bluff" at throwing, let the ball go to second, and before it had any chance of getting back, Morrissey was over with the winning run. You have got to hand it to Morrissey for speed, and the Woburn catcher was much to blame for the loss of the game in making such a throw with the game as close as it was at the time.

The game was full of excitement from the first man up until the last was out, with Winchester never in danger and playing snappy ball all the time. The score:

OBSERVATIONS.

The diagram in the Star showing the tax rate of Winchester and the adjoining cities and towns was well designed for the purpose of showing our more favorable rate, but I doubt the need or desirability of booming this town. It is of value, however, to keep in our minds the desirability of seeing to it that our appropriations from year to year do not exceed at least our increase in valuation. After slipping up on that last year we looked after it well this year and so were one of the few places to get a lower tax rate, with much favorable comment from the press which is pleasing to read. We, with other places got a double dose on outside taxes this year, our percentage being increased and the state tax increased a million and three quarters also. However I believe we should get our tax rate down under seventeen dollars and we can do so without any department suffering.

It looks like a hot contest for Governor this Fall and not much interest over the other offices. Were it not for Bird the Progressive party in Massachusetts would fall to pieces, but it looks to me as if he and the Republican candidate will split up the vote so that Walsh will win although he is not a heavy enough man for the office. The Republicans will increase their majority in the legislature undoubtedly.

In walking the length of Highland avenue last week it appeared to be in good condition, but many of the side streets were in anything but good shape and should have special attention next year, even if we have to curtail our cement walk mania.

How much longer are we to carry the part of the Eaton street lot we don't and never will need? We have been throwing away seven or eight hundred dollars a year there for several years, and the neighborhood would look much better if this land was built on. Why not sell it?

It was desirable to widen out the roadbed on Highland avenue in the hollow just north of Fells Road, but the rotten rails on the barriers should have been replaced and painted all one color instead of leaving them with three. Teams have gone over the bank there and a rotten barrier in such a case might be very expensive. Why not place the horse drinking trough at Lawton's blacksmith shop, corner of Cambridge and Pond streets? He was willing to have it there several years ago and very likely would now. The decision of the Selectmen to put it back at the corner of High and Cambridge streets was a rank one and hard to understand.

Whenever I am at the town offices the general clerk and her assistant are always hard at work and I wonder whose work they do. Several of the boards also have special clerks who seem to be liberally paid. Of course this is a rich town, but—Both Senator Fay and Representative Prime deserve to be returned as they undoubtedly will be by increased pluralities.

What has become of our seventy-five thousand dollar post office building? Is anybody looking after it or is it going by default? Has the Star any news? Let us go ahead and build the engine house somewhere regardless of the grade crossing abolition. We cannot hold everything up forever waiting for that. The finishing up of Manchester Field is another thing that should not wait any longer. Let us go ahead on some of the things at least and not stagnate the whole central part of the town waiting for this crossing. Many of the waiting things will not be affected by the crossing abolition anyway and it has only been used for an excuse to delay action on them.

ALLISTON E. FROST.

After an illness extending over several weeks, Mr. Alliston E. Frost passed away at his home, 14 Mystic avenue, last Saturday. He was 63 years of age and had resided in Winchester for many years. He was a cabinet maker by trade and at the time of his death was employed at Waltham. He was a member of Waterfield Lodge of Odd Fellows and at the funeral which was held Tuesday afternoon at his late home, the Odd Fellows had charge of the services, assisted by Rev. Mr. Poland of the Methodist Church.

There was a beautiful display of floral offerings, and after the services the remains were taken to Lynn for interment. The selections were rendered by a quartette. Mr. Frost leaves a widow and one son, the latter residing in Lynn and where Mrs. Frost will make her home in the future.

A FAITHFUL PUBLIC SERVANT.

A Tribute to the Faithfulness of William T. Dotten.

Editor of the Star—

"He that is greatest among you, let him be your servant" says the Good Book, and in this spirit Winchester has gladly let William T. Dotten be its efficient and faithful servant for forty continuous years. It is a long time in these days of chance and change for servant and master to live together as contentedly and happily as has Mr. Dotten and the town of Winchester.

During this extended period Mr. Dotten has taken but few vacations and his watchful care over the water supply system of the town has been exercised day and night, Sundays as well as week days. As a young man he first enlisted in the service of the town at a salary of fifty-two dollars per month, which was later increased to seventy-five dollars per month at which amount it has stood for many years. But now inadequately money payments express the town's obligation to Mr. Dotten.

It is almost conceivable that he would serve the town for nothing rather than to give up his life's work among us, identified as it has been with the highest interests of a most important town department. He has not served the town with the sordid and selfish interest of a hireling but in the spirit of "a good and faithful servant" finding joy in the happy performance of the public duties entrusted to him.

During these long years Mr. Dotten has done his work (or almost all of it) with a smiling face and with the best of good feeling between himself and the men under him. He has served with efficiency and gladness and his happy and yet faithful way of doing things has been an object lesson to all about him.

To serve with gladness of heart and contentedness of mind is certainly to be commended in these times of general disagreement and dissatisfaction between the servant and the served. At one period in the construction of the water works, the first town water board and the engineer in charge of the work appreciated so deeply the faithful services of Mr. Dotten doing extra work for the town in season and out of season that they joined together and made him a present of two hundred and fifty dollars out of their own pockets.

It is certainly a source of great satisfaction for all the older citizens of Winchester to look back over the years which have passed and recall all the pleasant and deeply satisfactory relation which has existed between the town and Mr. Dotten. May he serve us for many years longer and may we be more appreciative in the future than in the past of our debt of obligation to William T. Dotten.

It may be asked why say all these things now, many of them of such a personal nature that it would seem in better taste to express them privately to Mr. Dotten than publicly through the columns of the Star. The answer is that in many cases it would seem to be better if faithful souls could listen to their own funeral oration, near the good things which could be said about them here on earth than to hear compliments upon them after they have passed on. As a neighboring minister lately said at a complimentary meeting of all classes of citizens at which many things were said in commendation of his long and beneficial service to the community, he "liked to smell his own funeral flowers." Certainly Mr. Dotten is not dead and has long years of usefulness before him but he may like the sweet scent of honest and sincere commendation after forty years of public service in Winchester. His large family or nine children have been brought up here, his work has been done in our midst, we have summered and wintered him and he us, now let us tell him frankly what we think of him and his forty years work among us.

Honest commendation and appreciation is encouraging to an honest and earnest soul. It is a stimulant to all who strive to do their best in the work of life and put their conscience into all they do and dare. Especially in the line of public service do we need to take note of such faithful and efficient devotion to duty as has characterized the life of William T. Dotten in the town of Winchester.

An application was received from Ernest Borelli for permission to use certain buildings or structures to be erected on the land of J. Fallon situated about 3000 feet from Forest Circle near the Stoneham line, and at least 2000 feet distant from any existing building, for the keeping, storage, manufacture and sale of gunpowder, dynamite, and other explosives, and the manufacture of fireworks and fireworks therein. It was Ordered: That a public hearing be held on this petition at the Selectmen's Room in the Town Hall Building on Monday, September 15, 1913, at 8 p. m., at the expense of the petitioner, and that publication thereof be given by advertising in the Winchester Star of August 29 and September 5th.

In the matter of request received from the administrators of the estate of Jane R. Herrick dated May 10, 1913, that the loam and grass sod removed from Herrick street extension be used in the completion of the street, the Superintendent of Streets was instructed that so much of the loam taken from Herrick street as would be necessary for filling in the portion now used as a street be so placed, and that the uncompleted part of Herrick street be laid out and finished this year if possible.

A letter was received from the Town Engineer stating that in laying out the line for the proposed tar concrete sidewalk on the northerly side of Harvard street from Washington street he found certain fences to be within the street limits, and which should be set back to the street line before the sidewalk is constructed. The Clerk was instructed to notify the abutters named that the fences must be set back before the 30th inst. or the Town would remove them.

Mr. George H. Hayward, Eustace H. Brigham, John H. Mansfield, Frank W. Jones and Mr. Sheridan of Crescent road appeared before the Board and argued for the construction of a granolithic sidewalk on the outer or long side of that street; and after discussion by the Board it was Voted, That it is the sense of the Board that a granolithic sidewalk be constructed on Crescent road from Winthrop street to Mason street on the westerly and southerly sides known as the outside curve of the street.

The Town Engineer called attention to the existence of a shade tree in the Mystic Valley Parkway about opposite the end of Lakeview road which should be removed, it being an obstruction to the safe use of vehicles; and it was Voted, That the Metropolitan Park Commission be asked to remove the tree on the westerly side of the Mystic Valley Parkway at its junction with Lakeview road and that a proper street connection be made between that street and said Parkway.

The Town Engineer also reported that he had consulted Mr. Skillings about laying granolithic sidewalks at the end of Lloyd street and at the end of Walnut street where these streets connect with the Parkway in order that the Lloyd street and Walnut street walks might be properly finished, and that Mr. Skillings had stated that the Park Commission would probably pay its share for that part of the work which would be within the limits of the Parkway. The Clerk was instructed to write to the Metropolitan Park Commission asking for permission to construct a granolithic sidewalk on the southerly side of Lloyd street where it joins the Mystic Valley Parkway and at the foot of Walnut street where it joins the Parkway at No. 201, and that the expense of the same be assumed by the Metropolitan Park Commission.

Voted, That in the opinion of this Board public convenience and necessity require the grading, constructing, and covering with granolithic the following streets or portions thereof as described, namely:

Grove street southerly sidewalk abutting on the premises of Mary E. Tufts.

Grove street southerly sidewalk abutting on the premises of Amelia M. Symmes.

Brooks street easterly sidewalk abutting on the premises of Emma L. Forbes.

The Town Engineer was instructed to submit figures for construction of sidewalk on Mason street from Crescent road to Highland avenue and for the construction of a gravel sidewalk to be laid on Highland avenue from Mt. Pleasant street southerly to land of John S. Blank, Jr., and it was Voted, That it was the sense of this Board that the above work should be done, also to extend the sidewalk on westerly side of Highland avenue from the southerly line of the property of F. M. Ives to the northerly line of Mt. Pleasant street.

A report was received from Mr. Newton Shultis giving permission to make temporary repairs with brick where the Town's drain on his premises is broken open at the present time and it was Voted, That the letter be acknowledged and filed and that the Superintendent of Streets be instructed to make such repairs as will prevent further damage from surcharging the drain.

Permission was granted to J. J. Powers to fence off the sidewalk on Vine street from the westerly side of the building a part of which is occupied by George E. Morrill to the Water Department building. An agreement of indemnity was received signed by the owners of the property.

A letter was received renewing a request presented August 18 that the writer be allowed to purchase certain sewer pipe from the town, and the Clerk was instructed to reply that the Board does not care to establish a precedent in the matter of private dealings, and while it would be glad to co-operate to any proper extent it believes it not proper to comply with the request.

In the matter of complaint received concerning the condition of the gutter in Nelson street, the Committee on Ways and Bridges reported that they had examined the street which they found slightly washed but hardly dangerous. They recommended that it be fixed up as soon as may be convenient and the Clerk was instructed to reply that the matter would be attended to as soon as possible. In regard to the manhole in the sidewalk the Committee reported that it did not seem possible to make any change in it.

A permit was granted subject to the usual restrictions to lay granolithic entrance across the loam space to a garage on Yale street; to lay a granolithic curb at 18 Lloyd street; to lay a granolithic curb and entrance across the loam space at 22 Lloyd street; to lay a granolithic entrance across the loam space to the garage 17 Lakeview road; to lay a granolithic entrance across the loam space to a driveway on Lakeview road; to lay a granolithic entrance across the loam space to the garage 19 Lakeview road.

The Clerk was instructed to write the Metropolitan Park Commission that the bushes at the corner of Fenwick road and Bacon street obstruct the view and ask that they be cut down in the interests of common safety.

FIVE REASONS AGAINST WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

To the Editor of the Star:

Anti-suffragists have been and are so repeatedly misunderstood and misrepresented, that they ask the favor of having these "five reasons" printed in the "Star." If you will be so kind as to print them we shall be greatly obliged. These are only some of the many reasons why we oppose woman-suffrage.

1. Because of the undemocratic spirit, shown by the suffragists. They are entirely unwilling that the question of Woman Suffrage should be decided by the people most concerned—the women themselves. They are thrown into a panic by the mere suggestion of a referendum in which women shall have a voice. Christabel Pankhurst says a referendum would be a dose of cold poison to the cause. Every other question in the universe they consider women capable of deciding—this one only should be left to men! This is of course a confession that they know themselves in a hopeless minority so far as women are concerned. Their unceasing attempts to force legislation which they know to be against the wishes of the majority proves them to be unfitted for political power in a democracy.

2. Because the suffrage movement develops sex hatred, which is a menace to society. (In England this has reached a stage never before known in our civilization.) It also breaks down the traditional respect for womanhood, and threatens a return to barbarism. It is a wholly new thing to see English, Welsh and Irish mobs attacking and viciously ill-treating women and is entirely due to the suffrage movement. Women have been so long immune by reason of their sex from attacks by men that when it comes to a trial of brute force, woman is bound to go to the wall.

3. Because women make little use of the suffrage when it is given them. In the six suffrage States at the last presidential election only 47 1/2 per cent of the voters, including men and women, voted; while in the six adjoining male suffrage States 69 per cent of the men voted. In Massachusetts, where women have had the school vote for many years, the women's vote has steadily fallen off, until last year, at a very important election, only two per cent voted.

4. Because experience has proven that Woman Suffrage achieves nothing in making and enforcing more humane laws. Legislation protecting the working woman has not been enacted in a woman suffrage state until after its enactment in a male suffrage state. Laws ensuring the woman operative one day's rest in seven are lacking in three of the four oldest woman suffrage states (Colorado, Idaho and Wyoming) and were passed in Utah only after they had been passed in Massachusetts, Michigan and Missouri—all male suffrage states. The only states which have laws prohibiting night work for women are Massachusetts, Nebraska and Indiana—again all male suffrage states. The reports of the National Child Labor Committee show that the states which are most progressive in enacting and enforcing Child Labor legislation are not woman suffrage states, but New York and Massachusetts. There are nine states which have Prohibition—only one of them, Kansas, is a suffrage state, and Kansas had Prohibition long before it had suffrage. A prominent suffragist in Wisconsin offered last year as an inducement to the brewers to vote for Woman Suffrage, the argument that it would mean better business for them, since all the suffrage states were wet!

5. Because of the alliance of suffrage with socialism, which teaches free love and institutional life for children; this teaching is opposed to progress and full of danger to society, for when homes shall perish, states shall fall, and a blow to family life is a blow to the nation itself.

HOW TO SAVE YOUR ICE.

If you will use the paper ice blanket in your home this summer you will not only cut the cost of living but you will have less sickness, because the vegetable parchment keeps germs, flies etc., away from food. The ice blanket is simply thrown over your ice in your ice chest. It makes a big saving in your ice it being claimed that the ice will last twice as long. It is simple and easy, and the ice blanket will not go to pieces when wet. The price is only 10 cents.

EQUAL SUFFRAGE DEPARTMENT.

Conducted by Winchester League.

Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, President of the International Woman Suffrage Alliance returned from the Budapest Conference last week. She has been chosen chairman of the Campaign Committee for all the New York Societies and has organized a school for training speakers in the coming N. Y. campaign for securing the franchise for women in New York. Mrs. Catt, in passing through London on her way home carried out the arrangement made in the Budapest Convention and opened the headquarters of the International Woman Suffrage Association, of which she is President. The offices are on Adams street and consist of several large rooms, well furnished, including a library, reading room and offices for the Association's paper.

The Springfield Republican says of the National Council of Women Voters: "Miss Jane Addams of Chicago, Friday night addressed a mass meeting marking the end of the Conference in Washington, urging the need for universal suffrage. Miss Addams declared that women should have the franchise not only to bring about intelligent humanitarian legislation, but in order to be in a position to follow it into intelligent enforcement."

She said: "Woman has discovered that the misrepresented are always liable to be given what they don't need by legislators who merely wish to placate them. A child labor law exempts street trades, the most dangerous of all trades to a child's morals. A law releasing mothers from petty industry that they may rear worthy children provides so inadequate a pension that overburdened women continue to face the necessity of neglecting their young in order to feed them."

We remember also, that a few years ago, the women of New Orleans were given the right to vote on questions involving the issuance of bonds and helped pass the bill for an issue of bonds for the construction of a sewer, imperatively needed for safety. They were appalled to find later that, through corrupt legislation, the money so raised had been diverted to other purposes. All their efforts at better hygiene conditions had been futile because they could not vote for the men who would have enforced their will. This illustrates the absurdity and uselessness of partial suffrage.

The Republican party of Maryland unanimously endorsed the woman suffrage plank at its recent Convention. The Progressives had previously done this and it is thought that the Democratic party will take similar action.

Judge Ben Lindsey of the Juvenile Court in Denver, will answer the charges made against him and the Juvenile Court, with a view to his recall, at a meeting in Boston on the evening of September 1, arranged by the Massachusetts Woman Suffrage Association. It will be an interesting meeting in which he will doubtless convincingly prove the whole accusation the work of enemies he has made by his determined attacks on corrupt interests.

It is hoped that all who believe in fair play will take this opportunity to satisfy themselves as to the justice or injustice of the charges.

WHY SUBURBS LACK CIVIC SPIRIT.

"The chief trouble with the suburban community is that its members do not pull together. This trouble arises out of the very nature of the suburb. It has two kinds of citizens—commuters and 'natives'. The relation of these two classes is far too commonly one of mutual antagonism and dislike. The commuter thinks he is better than the native, the native knows he is better than the commuter. The commuter, in his relation to the native, too often is a snob. The native, in his relation to the commuter, too often is suspicious of him and believes he is a snob whether he is or not."

"The two classes must get together if the town is to be saved. So, in selecting the group which shall begin to do things, ignore social lines, forget distinctions of wealth, neglect some of the 'prominent citizens'. Remember that the natives have even a larger stake in the community than the commuters, for their business interests are there, in addition to their living interests. They work there, while the commuters only sleep and play there. Make your movement democratic. If you fail to do so, you might as well shut up shop before you begin. Your fate will be the fate of every suburban community where the 'best people' have tried to decide what the community shall do and have expected the rest of the community to accept meekly their decision."

THINGS ALL OUGHT TO KNOW

As Christian Bible Students—The Satisfactory Proof of "Why God Permits Evil."

One of the questions which comes to nearly every thinking mind today is, "Why does God permit evil?" As we look about us in the world we observe that it is filled with sorrow and trouble, sickness and pain and every trial we could enumerate, and we cannot help wondering WHY GOD ALLOWS IT. We realize that He is almighty and that He could prevent it if He wished. We read in His Word that He is more willing to do for His children than are earthly parents for theirs, and we know how much that means; yet oftentimes it seems that those who try to do and live right have the most trouble. This question is made very clear in a book entitled, "The Divine Plan of the Ages." Every statement is backed by Scripture, and shows that while God does not sanction evil HE HAS HAD A PURPOSE IN ALLOWING SIN AND DEATH TO REIGN THESE SIX THOUSAND YEARS. This and many other subjects of deep interest to all of God's people are discussed fully and in language easy of comprehension.

30D'S COVENANT AT MOUNT SINAI.

Exodus 19:1-6—Aug. 31.
Let us have grace thereby we may offer service well-pleasing to God with reverence and awe.—Hebrews 12:28. R. V.

TWO months after the Passover deliverance, the Israelites arrived at Mt. Sinai; but on their way they had two valuable lessons respecting God's grace and power. At Rephidim, Moses in the name of the Lord smote the rock, and from it gushed water, abundantly refreshing Israel, and as a rivulet followed them through much of their subsequent journey. St. Paul, by inspiration declares that the rock represented Christ, that the smiting of the rock represented the putting of Christ to shameful death, but that only thus is the Water of Life provided for whoever will drink.

Israel journeyed on, but encountered new obstacles. The Amalekites, a warlike people, considered Israel's coming as an invasion of their country, and attacked them. Naturally Israel was at a disadvantage. Yet God gave them the victory. Moses, upon a high hill, lifted his hands in prayer for the people. While he did so, success was theirs; but when he ceased thus to pray, Amalek prevailed. Aaron and Hur assisted in holding up Moses' hands until the battle terminated successfully for Israel. God thus indicated that without Moses they could do nothing.

The Royal Priesthood Proffered.
God's dealings with Israel were in accord with His great covenant with Abraham—"In thee and in thy Seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed." Neither Moses nor his followers could possibly have understood the full import of this great onath-bound Promise; for it is double, the spiritual portion being hidden until the First Advent. Even since then, St. Paul assures us, it is a hidden mystery, appreciated by few.

The Promise is divided into three parts: (1) Abraham (and all the Ancient Worthies, whom he represented) was to have a share; (2) Abraham's Seed was to be the channel of blessing; and (3) all the families of the earth were to be blessed through these channels. But only by the light of the Holy Spirit during this Gospel Age are these depths of the Abrahamic covenant manifest.

While the Israelites knew that they were the natural heirs of the promises, it was proper that they also know that they would be unsuitable in blessing the other nations with God's Law unless they could both keep that Law and instruct others to keep it. So a Law Covenant was made with them, and Moses appointed its mediator.

Typical of New Covenant.

St. Paul, in Hebrews 12:18-24, points us to the antitype of today's lesson. As Israel was delivered from Pharaoh and his hosts, so ultimately mankind will be delivered from Satan and his fallen angels, and from all evil influences. As Israel's journey brought them to Mt. Sinai and the Law Covenant, so the journey of God's people will bring all the faithful to Mt. Zion, God's Kingdom.

Meantime, Jesus has become the antitype of Moses, Leader of the people in harmony with Jehovah's Program. He has been selecting joint-heirs. St. Paul explains this, saying, "God gave Jesus to be the Head over the Church, which is His Body." See St. Peter's explanation of "Prophet like unto Moses" in Acts 3:22, 23, 19-21.

The antitype of our lesson will be the inauguration of the New Covenant, at the Second Advent of Jesus. The basis of this better Covenant was completed at Calvary. Our Lord has since been completing His "better sacrifices" by presenting the bodies of His saints to God. (Romans 12:1) Soon the "better sacrifices" will be completed, and the greater Mediator raised up from amongst the brethren. Then will follow the inauguration of the New Covenant, to bless all the families of the earth with Restitution.

St. Paul points out that we are approaching "the General Assembly and Church of the First-born," whose names are written in Heaven. He declares that we may expect stirring scenes. As at Sinai the literal mountain shook, lightnings dashed, and God's voice was heard as the sound of a great trumpet, so here. The trumpet will be the seventh trumpet, the trump of God. The storm and shaking typify the shaking of the ecclesiastical heavens and the social, political and financial earth. All things that can be shaken shall be removed, "as of things that are made."

—Hebrews 12:27.

The Apostle assures us that only the unshakable things will remain. That is, the Messianic Kingdom will completely overturn everything not in harmony with righteousness. This is merely a prelude to the great Covenant, then to be ushered in for the blessing of mankind.

WHAT, WHEN AND HOW TO EAT

The Best Business Man Is One Who Safeguards His Health.

By EUGENE CHRISTIAN, F. S. D.

(Copyright, 1913, by American Press Association.)

THE things that go to make up a good business man according to popular opinion is the establishment of great industries, building up great enterprises and the accumulation of money.

A careful review of the history of business men who have made a success along these lines shows that the majority of them sacrifice their health and their lives to their business.

All effort and work of every kind have for their excuse immunity some day from work and worry, but the average business man permits his business to create and augment the very things he is trying to get rid of. In the final analysis, therefore, men who sacrifice their health to their business are not good business men.

The man who from a cheap tin store founded "The Fair" in Chicago and allowed the business to detract his reason and send him to an insane asylum before he was sixty could hardly be considered a good business man. President Roberts, who arose from the ranks of a car wheel molder to the presidency of the Pennsylvania railroad and died from work and worry at the age of fifty, was not a good business man, and so on.

Money Not the Only Thing.

The accumulation of money and the founding of great industries are prerequisites only and by no means the most important ones of the good business man, for what profiteth a man to make a seven figure fortune—to put in motion a million spindles, to chain continents together with cables, to flash his voice over oceans and continents on waves of common air, to make the ocean's billowed bosom a commercial highway, to transform the ocean into a palace and set it on wheels and let it to the lightning, to build skyscraping structures of stone and steel, to burrow in the earth for coal and oil until his name is known around the world and his fortune is a power in the land—what boots it, I say, to do all these things and glide blindly into the shambles of disease and furnish a fashionable funeral at forty?

The unfortunate thing is that the business man sits him down and weaves about himself the mesh of a prison. Every year puts in a new bar, every month a new bolt and every day a new stroke that rivets around him what he calls business until he feels and really thinks he cannot escape.

A Good Business Man.

A good business man is he who can direct the wheels of industry, who can draw a trial balance between his income and his expenses—in short, who can cash in his experience and at the same time measure his own ability on the yardstick of endurance.

He is a good business man who gives as much study to the laws governing his own body as he does to the organization of his business, and in the final windup I doubt if he would not consider himself a better business man flat broke and in good health at ninety than sojourning in a sanitarium with a million at his call, but out of the fight at fifty.

The routine life of the average business man is about as follows:

He arises between 6 and 7 a. m., takes no exercise or fresh air, but partakes of a breakfast composed largely of acid fruits, cereal starches, meat, eggs and coffee, then goes at once to his business, sits at a desk until noon, takes luncheon at a neighboring cafe, which is composed of meat, cereal or potato starch, beer or coffee, and hurries back to business, sits at his desk five or six hours longer, hurries home, partakes of a dinner composed of more meat, more starch, more tea or coffee—no exercise, no diversion, no association with great authors, no music, no poetry, no change.

Repeated Warnings Neglected.

If he has an ill, headache, sour stomach, indigestion, a tinge of rheumatism, dizziness, intestinal gas, insomnia, nervousness or any one of the hundred symptoms or warnings that nature gives him for the violation of her laws, instead of thinking a little and trying to ascertain the cause, he sends with pride to his physician, and his physician prescribes something in a dead language, and the local druggist sends over the medicine, and it is swallowed with that childish confidence that fitsly becomes the modern business man, who knows a great deal about business, but absolutely nothing about himself.

The days and months go on; the symptoms or signals become more numerous, more expressive, more impressive, more painful; his physician is called more often; the dead language paper goes to the druggist oftener than it used to. With faith he still swallows the medicine. It may relieve him for a little while, usually by paralyzing the little nerve fibers that are carrying to the brain the messages of warning.

After awhile, however, his physician acknowledges defeat and prescribes a trip or a sanitarium. It is either this procedure or the fate that befell Messrs. Roberts, Field, Colonel Ingersoll and the uncounted thousands who had no reputation on which to herald their death.

A Few Menus and Suggestions For a Good Business Man.

FALL AND WINTER. SPRING OR SUMMER.

BREAKFAST I.
A cup of hot water or thin chocolate; a small sauce dish of whole wheat boiled until very soft (five or six hours) or flaked wheat, half coarse wheat bran thoroughly cooked; one egg boiled two minutes, eaten from the shell with butter and a hard cracker, or a small baked potato; one or two exceedingly ripe bananas peeled and baked in an oven ten minutes, served with a little butter or cream; a glass of cool water or thin cocoa.

LUNCHEON I.
Winter squash, carrots, parsnips or turnips; baked potato or baked beans; a bit of lettuce or celery.

LUNCHEON II.
Green corn, peas, asparagus, potato, sweet or white; junket or cheese.

DINNER I.
Cream of vegetable soup; carrots, parsnips, turnips, beets, cabbage, cauliflower, squash (any two or three of these); tender fish or chicken white meat; baked potato, navy or lima beans; bran corn or muffins; cheese with hard cracker or a small service of homemade ice cream if something sweet is desired.

DINNER II.
Melon or cantaloupe; peas, asparagus, corn, summer squash (any two or three of these); potato any style; very tender fish or chicken, white meat; if fresh food is desired; plain ice cream if something sweet is desired.

In cases of fermentation or intestinal gas ice cream should be omitted.

Simple Rules of Health.

If there should be a tendency toward constipation a heaping tablespoonful of coarse clean wheat bran should be cooked and served as an ordinary cereal with each meal. A tablespoonful uncooked should be taken just before retiring.

Don't allow your business to become your master.

Don't discuss business at home or in social life.

Take a cool shower bath and vigorous exercise and deep breathing before an open window the first thing upon arising.

Partake of a very light breakfast an hour after arising, no bread or meat.

Walk to your business if possible; breathe deeply on the way.

Don't wear woolen underwear; dress as lightly as possible.

Take an hour for luncheon, omit coffee, tobacco, beer and sweets.

Keep your office well ventilated.

Secure competent help and trust it.

Don't eat too many things at the same meal.

Leave your office early enough to walk home or at least part of the way.

Masticate your food infinitely fine and by all means do not overeat. This is the crowning sin of the civilized table.

We usually eat as much as we want, then call into activity another set of taste buds by forcing on the appetite another kind of food.

Take from ten to fifteen minutes' exercise before retiring. Sleep in a cold, thoroughly ventilated room. Spend as much time as possible in the sunshine and open air. Play golf, join a gymnasium, dance, sing, kick and play with the boys, for it is infinitely better to dig in the ditch for your dinner and to be able to digest and enjoy it than to lie invalid in your self made prison, perhaps die, and probably if the truth were written on your tombstone it would read:

There was a fool who made a fortune, But he died.

The world called him great. But it lied.

MR. McCALL TO ENTER PRACTICE OF LAW.

His Partner Will Be Stanley R. Miller of This Town.

In an interview printed in last Sunday's Post, Mr. McCall will go back to the law. He said:

"I have left public life. I am just quietly dropping into private life and going to work. For 20 years I have been in Congress. Talk politics? No, sir. Talk tariff? No. I have slept with the tariff for 14 years and now I want to forget it. Nobody should loaf, so I'm going to work. Besides, I have to. When I was not elected United States Senator last winter I decided it was about time I was looking after my private affairs.

"I have a nice little office and the 'shingle' is all painted and suspended or ought to be. I have associated with me Stanley R. Miller of Winchester, who is a bright young man. I think we will be able to make a living. Maybe we will do pretty well. I hope so, anyway. No I am not coming back tomorrow. I am going to take Monday off. Day of rest, so to speak. But I am coming back Tuesday and go to work. That is all there is to it."

The announcement of Congressman McCall's re-entrance into the legal profession was made yesterday. It was in the regular engraved form and was sent to his friends. It was dated August 5th.

It was only two weeks ago that Mr. McCall was seriously discussed for Governor. It was even announced that he was sure to run. He had conferences with his friends. He had one with Governor Foss, after which, on August 9, he issued a statement announcing he would not be a candidate for the Republican gubernatorial nomination and attacking direct primaries.

Last night asked the reason of the declaration to run he contented himself with replying: "I was not in the race and never was."

Mr. McCall was born in East Providence in 1851. Was graduated from Dartmouth in 1874, and admitted to the bar in 1876. He practised law for several years, and for a time was in the newspaper business, being editor of the Boston Advertiser. He was elected to the House in 1888, 1889 and 1892, and to Congress in 1893. He has served continuously since until this year. He has always lived in Winchester. He refused the honor of being president of Dartmouth in 1909.

REV. JOHN F. COLBERT.

Former Winchester Priest Passes Away at Wakefield.

The Rev. John F. Colbert, for 11 years pastor of St. Joseph's Catholic Church, Wakefield, died last Saturday afternoon at the rectory of the church in Harvard square.

Father Colbert had been ailing for a long while and had spent some time in the Rangeley Lake region in an attempt to recover his health. He continued to grow weaker, however, and last week he was brought home.

Fr. Colbert was born in the old Fort Hill section of Boston, in Milton place, in 1855. His early education was acquired in the public schools of the city and at the Boston Latin school. Later he went to Nicolet College, completing his academic education at Holy Cross College, Worcester, graduating in 1875.

He studied for the priesthood at St. Mary's Seminary, Baltimore, and was ordained in that city by the present Cardinal Gibbons, December 21, 1878.

His first appointment was as assistant to Rev. Fr. O'Connor at Winchester, where he remained for two years. From there he was sent to assist the pastor of Plymouth, and later to Lowell, at St. Peter's Church, as assistant to Rev. Peter Crudden. In this parish he also served for some time as assistant to Rev. Michael Ronan, and later he was transferred to East Cambridge, where he assisted Rev. Fr. John O'Brien at the Church of the Sacred Heart. While with Rev. Fr. O'Brien he established the Catholic weekly known as the Sacred Heart Review.

From East Cambridge, Rev. Fr. Colbert went to Roxbury, where he was assistant to Rev. P. J. Daly at the Church of St. Francis de Sales. From there he was appointed rector of the Church of St. John at Hopkinton, where he remained in charge until he was transferred to the Church of Our Lady of the Rosary, South Boston, when the late Rev. Fr. McNulty was made rector of St. Cecilia's in July, 1900.

Fr. Colbert is survived by one brother, J. Parker Colbert, formerly of Winchester, but now living in Wakefield, and one sister, Mrs. W. C. Welch of Winchester.

B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE.

B. F. Keith's Theatre will open its regular fall and winter season on Labor Day with one of the finest arrays of all-star feature attractions ever arranged in one vaudeville program. William Hawtrey, the famous English actor, who's success in "A Message from Mars" is theatrical history, will make his first Boston appearance in years in a brand-new comedy on Monday, September 1st. Mr. Hawtrey is one of the finest actors on the modern stage. The spectacular and sensational feature of the week will be supplied by May Wirth, the greatest bareback rider that ever lived, for the past two seasons the star attraction of the Barnum & Bailey Circus. She will be assisted by the Great Wirth Family of Australian equestrians. Other big features of a great show will be Jesse L. Lasky's "Three Beautiful Types of American Girl," Howard Ratliff & Co., "that happy combination," Williams & Wolfus in "Almost a Pianist," the Eight Berlin Madcaps; Valentine Vox, the European ventiloquist; Flo and Wynne, two pretty girls who sing and dance; Tuscano Brothers, sensational Roman battle-axe jugglers; and the Pathe Weekly in the world's pictured events in motion.

HEATING SYSTEM.

Now is the proper time to consider a warm house for next winter with no gas to kill the flowers. We are the only firm in Winchester that can furnish you with practical heating men of all kinds, for hot air furnaces, steam and hot water work, at a moment's notice for 52 weeks in the year.

We advise attention now to that important feature in your home. Anybody can make a bluff at cleaning your furnace but it takes a practical furnace man to produce results. We have the practical men and would rather serve you now than in the busy season. It being much easier now to get the repairs.

MIDDLESEX, ss. PROBATE COURT.

To the heirs-at-law, next of kin and all other persons interested in the estate of Mary E. Gallagher, late of Winchester, in said County deceased.

Whereas, a certain instrument purporting to be the last will and testament of said deceased has been presented to said Court, for Probate, by Charles H. Gallagher, who prays that said testamentary may be admitted to him, the executor therein named, without giving a surety on his official bond.

You are hereby cited to appear at a Probate Court, to be held at Cambridge, in said County of Middlesex, on the ninth day of September, A. D. 1913, at nine o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, why the same should not be granted.

And said petitioner is hereby directed to give public notice thereof, by publishing this citation once in each week, for three successive weeks in the Winchester Star, a newspaper published in Winchester, the last publication to be one day at least before said Court, and by mailing, post-paid, or delivering a copy of this citation to all known persons interested in the estate, seven days at least before said Court.

Witness, CHARLES J. McINTIRE, Esquire, First Judge of said Court, this nineteenth day of August, in the year one thousand nine hundred and thirteen.

MIDDLESEX, ss. PROBATE COURT.

To Mary Kane of Winchester in said County of Middlesex, and to her heirs apparent or presumptive, and to the State Board of Insanity.

Whereas, a petition for guardianship has been presented to said Court, by Howard S. Cosgrove and Mary A. Cosgrove, both of said Winchester, alleging that said Mary Kane is an insane person, and incapable of taking care of herself, and praying that said Howard S. Cosgrove, or some other suitable person, may be appointed her guardian, agreeably to the law in such case made and provided.

You are hereby cited to appear at a Probate Court to be held at Cambridge, in and for said County of Middlesex, on the eleventh day of September, A. D. 1913, at nine o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, why a guardian should not be appointed as aforesaid.

And said petitioner is hereby directed to cause you to be notified of the time and place appointed for the hearing of said complaint, by serving said Mary Kane and said State Board of Insanity, with a copy of this order, seven days at least before said Court; and by mailing to said heirs apparent or presumptive at the last known post office address of each, a copy of the same, seven days at least before said Court, or instead of said mailing, by publishing the same once in each week, for three successive weeks, in the Winchester Star, a newspaper published in Winchester, the last publication to be one day at least before said Court.

Chief of Police McIntosh and his officers are causing no end of trouble to trap shooters and the latter don't like it. When engaged in a game they don't know for a minute when the officers will pounce upon them. They chance it. The shooters thought they were safe in indulging in a game last Sunday in a field off Swanton street. But they soon learned that they were not safe as the officer came on the scene and arrested six out of the eight crappers. The other two will be caught. In court the penalties ranged from $5 to $15, and in one case a house of correction sentence. Does it pay?

Harry H. West had a narrow escape from injury last Sunday afternoon near the corner of Main and Park streets when a motor cycle which he was riding became entangled in the car tracks and threw him to the ground. He was riding his own machine and was towing a disabled machine at the end of a long rope. The capsize machine skidded along the street for many feet but was not damaged. Mr. West sustained a few scratches but was otherwise unhurt.

Mr. and Mrs. John K. Murdock and Miss Jennie Skinner are occupying the home of Dr. Seth W. Kelley on Main street, Woburn, who is in Maine with his wife. Mr. Murdock has been living in Brookline but is building a home on Frances street, Woburn, which will soon be finished.

Engineers of the Metropolitan park commission are making surveys and obtaining options on land for the construction of three boulevards, which will provide the connecting links between outside towns and Boston and its suburban districts. One of the roads is to be in Woburn and is to cost $50,000. It will extend alongside of Horn pond and continue to Mystic Valley park, connecting with roads leading to the Middlesex Fells. This thoroughfare will be about 11-2 miles long. Already options on much of the property required for its construction have been obtained. The total amount to be expended on the three boulevards is to be $1,000,000.

MILLER - DOHERTY.

Popular Young Couple Are Shown Up In Great Shape.

Frank J. Miller and Miss Margaret V. Doherty of this town, two of the most popular employees at the Winchester Laundry, were married at the parsonage of St. Mary's Church last Sunday evening, Rev. John Corbett being the officiating clergyman. The maid of honor was Miss Elizabeth E. Doherty and the bridesmaids were the Misses Helen J. Doherty and Mary E. Doherty of Woburn. Mr. William J. Doherty of Woburn was the best man.

The bride was attired in a gown of white silk charmeuse over white satin. She wore a bridal veil caught up with orange blossoms and carried white roses. The maid of honor wore white silk messeline and carried pink roses. The bridesmaids dresses were of pale blue and pink silk batiste with hats to match.

Miss Doherty, who lives on Kendall street, was the telephone operator at the laundry and Mr. Miller holds a responsible position in the same concern. After the marriage ceremony Mr. John G. Perry, one of the proprietors, took the young couple in an automobile on a sight seeing tour. Mr. Perry is a man of massive build, of extraordinary strength, and weighs over 200 pounds. After a pleasant ride over the boulevard, Mr. Perry headed the machine up Washington street and when in front of the Baptist Church the machine came to a stop at the command of a bystander. Without ceremony Mr. Perry was pulled out of the machine, but the gentleman sitting beside him put up a fight. It was no use, he was also pulled out in short order, and Jim Hammond, known principally for his reckless speeding, took charge of the wheel accompanied by other men. The bride and groom were helpless and dared not make a move, wondering what would happen next. The auto quickly sped up Washington street toward Stoneham when every one on the street was informed as to whom the demure young lady and gentleman occupying the rear seat were. At Stoneham square there were over 300 people there waiting for the numerous cars that diverge from that point. The auto was driven to a commanding point in the square, and the large assembly was informed regarding the young couple and what they had done. It was a trying period for the happy couple, but they did not flinch, although they wished from the bottom of their hearts that they were somewhere else.

After this and many other trying ordeals, the machine arrived at the home of the bride, where a most pleasing reception was held, followed by appetizing refreshments. The rooms were decorated with flowers and palms. The young people were assisted in receiving by their parents and the ushers were Messrs. John Walsh of Watertown, William J. Doherty of Woburn and William Christian of Stoneham.

Hearty good wishes and a happy married life from the many guests rang in the ears of Mr. and Mrs. Miller as they took their departure for a honeymoon of two weeks or more.

Mr. Perry, the chauffeur, was the arch conspirator in the plot, and the employees of the laundry have a stiff dose up their sleeves should he ever enter the bonds of matrimony. Altogether it was a great popular demonstration testifying to the esteem in which the bride and groom are held by their co-workers. On their return they will reside on Kendall street.

PROBATE COURT MATTERS.

The will of Mrs. Mary E. Gallagher, who died July 20, 1913, has been filed in the Probate Court. The will is dated July 12, 1913, and names her son Charles H. Gallagher of Winchester as executor. The estate is valued at $5300; $5000 in real estate and $300 in personal. All of the bequests in the will are private. The heirs-at-law are Charles H. Gallagher a son; William J. Gallagher a son and Francis E. Gallagher all of Winchester. The will is returnable at East Cambridge September 9. Attorney J. G. Maguire of Woburn represents the executor.

Marion C. Sawyer is an heir-at-law to the estate of her uncle Charles E. Coburn of Medford who died August 18, 1913. No valuation of the estate was filed.

Margaret A. Crowdis of Medford and George B. Hayward of Winchester have been appointed as special administrators of the estate of Franklin E. Chandler of Medford who died June 30, 1913. They have each given a bond of $10,000. The estate is valued at $50,000; $40,000 in real estate and $10,000 in personal property.

An inventory of the estate of James F. Bunting who died March 31, 1913 has been filed in the Probate Court. The estate is valued at $79,341.15; all in personal property.

The tax rate of Boston is $17.20, the highest in the history of that city. Mayor Fitzgerald adroitly places the blame on the tax "dodgers."

FORMAL CLOSING OF PLAY-GROUND.

List of Events and the Prize Winners.

The formal closing of the playground on Manchester Field was scheduled for last Friday afternoon, but owing to the unsettled weather a postponement was found to be necessary. As it was impossible to have the exercises Monday because of the base ball game, Tuesday afternoon was decided upon. One of the most important features had to be omitted Tuesday and that was folk dancing, because of the absence of Miss Comerford who is taking a few days vacation before entering upon her duties as physical director in the public schools. This dance was an entirely new feature and had never before been given here. The children had been carefully trained in the dance and its omission was not only a disappointment to those who were to participate, but to the many spectators.

The finals of the different events caused a great deal of interest and the results and prizes awarded were as follows:

Iron Quoits, Elmer Gray, cup.
Rope Quoits, John Farrow, cup.
Boy's Basket Throwing, Charles Knowlton, cup.
Girls' Basket Throwing, Eleanor Melaugh, cup.
Mumble Peg, Harry O'Laughlin, cup.

Observation Race, Francis McFeeley, fob.
Girls' Relay, Eleanor Melaugh, Emily Melaugh, Helen Farrow, Luella Farrow, Lillian Gray, Mabel Gray, each being awarded a medal.

The season has been a most interesting and profitable one for the children, and again demonstrates the need of the playground. Much credit is due Miss Comerford and Mr. Indlekofer, who have had charge of the playground.

SELECTMEN'S MEETING.

September 2, 1913.

The Board met at 7:30 p. m., all present.

Letters were received from Matthew Hale, Chairman State Committee Progressive Party, and Andrew J. Solis, Chairman Town Committee, Winchester Progressive Party, in regard to the appointment of Ballot Clerks, ordered acknowledged and filed.

The Committee on Fire Department was instructed to look into the matter of erecting a new fire house or houses for the same, and any other matters connected therewith.

Mr. Nathaniel M. Nichols appeared for the School Board to ask that the matter of re-numbering Tremont street have prompt attention as the school census was about to be taken and the matter was referred to the Town Engineer.

The Chairman reported a conference in regard to drainage and construction work on Arlington street and it was voted that this Board construct a wall and if possible with funds available under Surface Drainage Account and Arlington Street Construction to construct the necessary surface drainage.

Voted, that a tar concrete sidewalk be laid on Cross street to a point fronting the Second Congregational Church property on the southerly side, it appearing that J. A. Laraway had paid to the Town Treasurer one-half the estimated cost.

The attention of the Committee on Ways and Bridges was directed to a piece of sidewalk about 100 ft. long on Washington street between Webster and Hancock streets, easterly side on which it was desirable to apply tar concrete.

Voted, that it is the opinion of this Board that public convenience and necessity require the grading, constructing and covering with granolithic that sidewalk on Crescent road which runs from Winthrop street on the westerly and southerly sides known as the outside curve of said street to Mason street.

A deed was received conveying to the Town a triangular piece of land at the corner of Sanborn and Main streets required for making a better approach to Sanborn street and ordered recorded.

The matter of construction of granolithic sidewalk on Mason street was discussed and a view of the premises arranged for Friday afternoon, September 5th, at 5:30.

The report of the Town Engineer submitted August 11th, showing the cost of a granolithic sidewalk at the corner of Highland avenue and Mount Pleasant street, was considered and the Clerk was instructed to write the owners, asking their co-operation in the matter of laying a granolithic sidewalk at this point.

An application was received, approved by the Town Engineer, from the Edison Electric Illuminating Co., for relocation of a pole on Highland avenue to avoid blocking the driveway to Mr. George B. Henry's property and granted.

A letter was received and referred to the Superintendent of Streets for report, claiming that the sidewalk on Mt. Pleasant street was in need of repairs.

Adjourned at 10:50 p. m.
Frank R. Miller,
Clerk of the Board.

NEWSY PARAGRAPHS.

Miss Fortis of Vine street is spending a few weeks at George's Mills, Sunapee Lake, N. H.

Mr. and Mrs. John L. Sherman and Mr. and Mrs. Ara Barnes of Melrose spent the week end at the Bay Side, Nahant.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Kneeland are occupying their new home on Eaton street.

Rev. and Mrs. Carlton P. Mills have returned from Canaan, N. H., where they were enjoying their vacation.

SHALL PROGRESSIVES BE REPRESENTED AT POLLS.

Claim That it is One of the Two Leading Parties.

The following letter from Andrew J. Solis, Chairman Winchester Progressive Town Committee, has been sent to the Selectmen:

Winchester, Mass., Sept. 2, 1913.
Mr. William J. Daly, Chairman of the Selectmen, Town of Winchester, Winchester, Mass.

Dear Sir:—Answering your favor of 26th relative to the appointing of Election officers. Without going into a strict interpretation of the law, the fact remains that — from whichever point of view—the Progressive Party is one of the two leading parties in the Nation, and in the town of Winchester.

The facts, although well known, are that the Republican party in the National election secured but 8 votes in the Electoral College.

In Winchester the Progressive party is the second leading party from other reasons. It had the second highest number of votes for Governor in the last election: Bird 512, Walker 540, and in addition to this showing, in the Senatorial election the Progressive Party carried the town by 589 for the Progressive candidate, against 528 for the Republican candidate, and 247 votes for the Democratic candidate, which shows a plurality of 242 votes over the so-called other leading political party.

Your own strict interpretation of the statute proves that the Selectmen have authority to request the Chairman of the Town Committee of the Progressive Party to submit names of Progressives, whom the Selectmen will appoint as additional ballot clerks at the proper time. (These clerks could act as watchers during the count.)

This power according to your interpretation of the law is as follows:—"The Selectmen have the power to appoint such additional ballot clerks after the opening of the polls."

The Progressive Party has respected the long established tradition of Winchester, which is almost mandatory, that there should be no partisan politics in the election of the governing officers of the town and therefore the Progressive Party have the right to request that you act in the spirit of nonpartisanship. Therefore I again urge that your honorable Board of Selectmen grant equal justice to all contesting parties.

Narrow partisan protestations, as to why you will not grant all parties Election Officers to conserve their respective interests at the Primaries and on election day will justly be considered another instance of a governing committee—a minority—seeking to rule a majority—which principle the Progressive Party will never tolerate, and which has already brought about the downfall of a great political unit.

I ask of you a nonpartisan governing board, the justice of which is due the Progressive Party.

Trusting you will give this matter your further attention, I remain,

Very respectfully,
Andrew J. Solis, Chairman
Winchester Progressive Town Committee.

HORSE RUNS AWAY.

A horse drawing a carriage containing Edward Ginn, Jr., and his sister, Chester and Dexter Tuttle and Miss Lawrence, all prominent residents of Winchester, ran away on Highland avenue, Winchester, last Wednesday night and would have dashed in front of a moving freight train but for Policeman Daniel C. Kelley and William Callahan, who swerved the horse's course away from the crossing.

The carriage was being driven by Mr. Ginn and was proceeding along Highland avenue when the animal took fright and started to run. The horse dashed down into Mt. Vernon street and headed for Winchester square with the occupants screaming for help.

Mr. Ginn attempted to check the excited animal's speed, but could not succeed. The horse was headed directly for the railroad crossing in the square as a fast freight was approaching. Officer Kelley and Callahan rushed into the middle of the street, and caused the horse to turn and dash up Main street.

Miss Ginn jumped from the vehicle as it approached the railroad crossing, and was slightly injured. Officer Kelley and Callahan ran after the runaway and overtook it, bringing the horse to a stop. Miss Ginn was taken home in an automobile.

READING FAIR.

The Reading Fair will take place at Reading-Wakefield Fair Grounds on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, September 23, 24 and 25. More than $1500 in purses for the horse racing program of the three days have been hung up by the management in addition to $500 for the special grange competition between the following granges: Reading, Lynnfield, Wakefield, Wilmington, Woburn, Stoneham, Everett, Saugus and North Reading.

The old time plowing and drafting matches on the opening day, and the workhorse parade and auto show, together with the unrivaled cattle livestock, poultry and fruit and vegetable exhibit, will continue to be a feature.

The fair is in charge of the Quannapowitt Agricultural Association of which Arthur H. Jewett is president, Henry W. Coolidge is secretary, and Arthur A. Upton of North Reading, treasurer. H. A. Brackett is in charge of the horse racing program.

Governor Foss, Lieut. Governor Walsh, Congressman Rogers of Lowell, Congressman Dietrich of Cambridge, the Mayors of cities and the Selectmen of the nearby towns will be among the guests.

LARGE TAX PAYERS

Those Who Pay $100 and Over Into the Town Treasury

Lower Rates Result in Many Changes From Last Year

Following is a list of those persons who are called upon to pay $100 and over in taxes for the present year. This list is correct and is taken from advance returns of the Assessors. The tax bills will not be sent out for two weeks or so.

CANOE TIPPED OVER.

Boy Stands Up and Causes Boat to Capsize.

Because one young boy stood up in a canoe on Upper Mystic Lake Monday evening, he and his two companions had an exciting time in the water before they were rescued by members of the Medford Boat Club. This rescue work was well done and called forth congratulations, as the rescuing canoes each contained a man and a woman, making the fishing-out process a hazardous one.

Shortly before 7 o'clock two boys, each about 15 years old, and one about 18 years old, hired a canoe at the Medford Boat Club and started to paddle around the lake. When about 200 yards from shore the boys, standing up, tipped the canoe over. Several parties near the shore heard the splashing and saw the commotion in the water, but at first thought the matter was a joke.

Finally they realized the boys needed help and A. J. Smith and a young woman companion, Mr. and Mrs. William Irving and Mr. and Mrs. Waldo S. Manson went to their rescue. The oldest boy was unable to swim and his companions helped him to an end of the capsized canoe. He clung there while they rested at the other end. The rescuing parties got alongside and pulled the boys out of the water.

The boys were taken to the canoe club and dried out, after which they went to their homes. They refused to give their names.

TRACY FAMILY REUNION.

Many of the Descendants Gather in Winchester.

The twentieth annual reunion of the Cyrus Tracy Association was held at the home of Mrs. Wm. J. Nutting, Garfield avenue, on Labor Day. Eighteen members and invited guests attended and greatly enjoyed the day.

Handsomely decorated tables, with fruit and flowers, were set in rooms with folding doors opening between, and a most bountiful and toothsome dinner was served.

After dinner the business meeting was held, when officers were elected, speeches were made, and letters were read from the Florida and Connecticut branches of the family. Then various games were played, and a grab-bag, in which each package contained a "grind" of some sort, provoked much mirth.

Later ice cream and cake were served and the guests began to leave for their various homes at an early hour.

Among those present were: Mrs. H. N. Jeffers, and Miss Jennie Bubier of Lynn, Mr. Charles Moore of Hudson, Mr. and Mrs. John Newhall of Peabody, Miss Susan E. Tracy of Jamaica Plain, Miss Edith Tracy Hosmer, Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Ottaway and son Beverly of Somerville, Miss Myra Jewett of Gardner, Mrs. Laura Tracy Hosmer, Miss Louise Hosmer, Miriam J. Hosmer and Chester H. Hosmer of Woburn.

BARR-TAYLOR.

On Monday evening, Miss Alice Sampson Taylor, daughter of Mr. James A. Taylor of Boston, and Mr. Alfred G. Barr of Winthrop, were married at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Samuel E. Perkins of Crescent road. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Mr. Manchester of East Boston. About one hundred and fifty guests were present, coming from Eau Claire, Wisconsin, Jacksonville, Florida, besides many of the surrounding towns. Among those present were Captain Pierce of the Franconia, Mr. Wallace Smith of the S. S. Pierce Company, and many of the business associates of the same firm.

A reception was held from seven until nine, after which Mr. and Mrs. Barr left for Boston, sailing on the Franconia Tuesday morning for a two months' tour of Europe. Upon their return Mr. and Mrs. Barr will make their home in Winchester.

ON A FISHING AND PLEASURE OUTING.

On this Saturday Mr. Charles A. Lane and party will go on a fishing trip to Marr's Camps in Maine, where the trout hold sway and where amid the delightful scenery and pine woods life is ideal. The location is in the primeval forest, where outside troubles do not enter except through an occasional newspaper. However, mail comes and goes. The trip will embrace those who will go are Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Whitney, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Stone, Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Barrett, Mr. O. C. Sanborn, Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Lane, Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Pray of Newton, Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Goss of Melrose, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Kitfield of Swampscott and Dr. and Mrs. Chadwick of Westfield.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

The summer season has come to a close and we hope that all our Leagues have enjoyed the vacation season.

Next Sunday at 6 p. m. will be celebrated League Rally Day.

There will be special music by the Epworth League Quartette, inspiring singing, and a live address by our President, Mr. Herbert Sellers.

Miss Harriet Bryant, the first vice president, working hard for a successful season, so all Leaguers, ex-Leaguers, old and young come out and show your good will and appreciation.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS GIVE STORY OF MIDDLESEX AFFAIRS.

In Response to Request for Publicity on Doings of the County Office a Comprehensive Report is Made.

In a recent issue of a newspaper which has a circulation in several Middlesex county towns appears an article which states that "The people know less about the way the money of the county is spent than they do of any other public matter."

The same article states that the county commissioners could do no better service to the people of Middlesex county than to explain the nature of their duties and the ways in which the funds of the county are expended.

The Middlesex county commissioners, believing there may be a demand for information as suggested, have compiled the following statement regarding the county and the duties of the commissioners.

The county commissioners intend this statement to be for the information of all citizens of the county and believe that if interested citizens will take the pains to read it through they will obtain an excellent insight into the multifarious affairs of the county and will realize to some extent what county commissioners are required to do.

The Statement

Let us first comment on the general proposition of whether or not the affairs of the county of Middlesex are well administered and the funds of the county wisely expended. A learned justice of the superior court, on the occasion of the dedication of the Lowell court house in 1898, said in part, "I have often thought that there might be associated with the school house and church spire, as symbols of the glory and security of the state, the Massachusetts court house. It seems to me that it stands for much that these structures represent and something besides. It is the seat of justice, of law and order. While it may not long survive the school and the church yet so long as the court house shall stand, as we know it today, the fundamental institutions of the government cannot be destroyed."

County Courts.

Without taking shelter under the portals of the court houses and the solemn words of this judge, it is but fair to say that county governments as they exist in this commonwealth today and in most of the states of the Union, are performing the important and indispensable function of providing quarters and facilities for the courts in the administration of the judicial branch of the government, the proper care of the records contained in the registries of deeds; the housing of the unfortunate criminal class in jails and houses of correction, all of which, it is needless to say, are as much parts of the necessary machinery of government as any local, state or national branch of public affairs.

It will be difficult to enumerate in a brief article more than an outline of the "nature of the duties of county commissioners," etc., as required by the editor of the paper in question.

County Commissioners.

A county is a corporation, established mainly for judicial and court purposes. The county commissioners, elected by the people, are not in the strictest sense judicial officers, yet have the same clerk and like authority over their records as the superior court, and in some respects wield the power formerly exercised by certain courts, and may appropriately be called a court.

Their Powers and Duties.

The specific authority which is conferred upon county commissioners by statute constitutes the greater part of their powers and duties; yet many of the statutes are so general in their terms that the discretionary powers acquired are wide and various. For instance, the county commissioners shall have authority "to represent their county, and to have the care of its property and the management of its business and affairs in all cases not otherwise expressly provided for." They are to be considered the agents and representatives of the county in all matters touching its finances and general prudential concerns. They have authority to provide for erecting court houses, jails and other public buildings within and for the use of their county. They shall provide suitable accommodations for district and police courts in the cities and towns in which they are required to be held, and may erect or hire suitable building or rooms and furnish the same, provide for the heating and care thereof, and do all other things incidental thereto.

Penalty for Neglect.

When they are in session, they may administer oaths to witnesses and punish disorderly conduct. A county commissioner who wilfully violates a duty imposed upon him shall forfeit not less than fifty nor more than one thousand dollars, to be recovered in an action to be brought by the attorney-general.

No payments, except of expenses in criminal prosecutions, of expenses of the courts, of the compensation of county officers established by law, of outstanding notes or bonds and of interest thereon, shall be made by a county treasurer except upon orders drawn and signed by a majority of the county commissioners.

County Yearly Reports.

A full report of the affairs of the county is required to be made by the commissioners before the tenth day of January in each year. The county commissioners of each county shall annually prepare estimates of the receipts and expenditures of their county for the ensuing year. They shall levy a county tax which shall be authorized by the general court annually, based on the estimates of receipts and expenditures as before stated.

No county expenditure shall be made nor liability incurred, nor shall a bill be paid for any purpose in excess of the amount appropriated except under strict requirements of law.

At the close of each year the county treasurer renders his accounts to the county commissioners for all money received and paid by him in behalf of the county, which account, when approved and allowed by the county commissioners, is delivered to the clerk of the commissioners for record. The commissioners may incur debts for temporary loans in anticipation of taxes.

Financial Management.

Various provisions of law relating to county management, county finances, procedure in awarding county contracts is specifically described in the statutes, and no money can be paid out unless all these provisions are carefully observed.

The register of deeds is sworn before the county commissioners, and gives bond with such sureties as the commissioners may approve. All payments for clerical assistance in the registry of deeds are subject to the approval of the county commissioners. The commissioners audit all expenses of medical examiners and expenses of commitment of insane. The commissioners divide their respective counties into representative districts as prescribed by the constitution. They receive the votes for county treasurer and register of deeds; determine what persons appear to be elected; issue certificates of election to them, and give notice to the secretary of the commonwealth of the name, residence and term of office of very person elected.

Tax Abatements.

A person aggrieved by the refusal of local assessors to abate a tax may appeal therefrom to the county commissioners, who have power to order an abatement.

They have wide powers with respect to keeping public records of their county in order, and are to store them in fireproof rooms and vaults. They may permit the removal of a monument marking town boundaries, and are required to keep careful record of the same; they may establish training schools which are maintained under their direction; they have full power with respect to the government and control of the inmates of these schools.

Highways.

They may make application to the highway commission to lay out state highways in their counties, and have very wide powers with respect to ordinary highways throughout their county; they may lay out a new highway, alter, relocate or order specific repairs on an existing highway, assess the damages accruing therefrom, and must, if the towns fail to do the work required, complete the work themselves, and charge the same to the delinquent town; they are a board of appeal in the matters of town ways and private ways; they may assess damages, on petition, sustained by the taking of any land, water, rights of way, water rights or easements, or by the erection of a dam or the construction of an aqueduct, waterway, etc.

County commissioners may license ferries, establish tolls for passengers, etc.; they may establish posts to indicate true meridian lines for the use of surveyors; they may order the draining of low lands and the erection of milldams where such work interferes with highways. No reservoir dam shall be constructed or materially altered until plans and specifications of the proposed work have been filed with and approved by the county commissioners. They shall as often as once in three years, if in their judgment the public good requires it, thoroughly examine every reservoir, reservoir dam, or mill dam, by the breaking of which loss of life or damage to a road or bridge is liable to be caused. They may authorize the taking of land for the enlargement of cemeteries.

As a Health Board.

On the proper appeal from a local board of health they may exercise all the powers of a board of health for a city or town; they may grant an auctioneer's license on an appeal from a local authority; determine a fine in case a town does not choose selectmen or assessors; appoint engineers in fire departments in towns in certain cases; they are the board of appeal on account of sewer assessments.

Dog Damage Suits.

They have wide powers with respect to damages done by dogs to domestic animals and audit all expenses of such damages, ordering payment from the county treasurer therefor.

If a county contract is made, eight hours constitute a day's work for all laborers and others, and any agent or official of the county who permits any such laborer to work more than eight hours may be punished by a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars or by imprisonment for six months or by both such fine and imprisonment.

Railroads.

The county commissioners have wide powers with respect to alteration of highways at the crossing of railroads, and may permit railroad companies to take additional land for their purposes. If a railroad corporation cannot agree with the owner of land taken for railroad purposes as to his compensation, the county commissioners, on petition, may determine the same. No railroad actually acquires a location for railroad purposes until plans of the same are filed with the county commissioners. They have like powers with respect to electric railroads.

The county commissioners are inspectors of prisons in their county, and have wide authority with respect to the same. They shall, without extra charge or commission to themselves or to any other person, procure or cause to be procured all necessary supplies for jails and houses of correction. They may issue permits to prisoners to be at liberty in certain cases and may revoke such permit.

They may appoint county police. They must provide accommodations for probate courts and cause records of the same to be preserved. They audit the appraisal of damages done by wild deer, and may summon all witnesses in order to finally determine such damages.

Detail Work Heavy.

The above brief statement indicates in a measure the scope of the commissioners' authority, but the detail in any one case may require exhaustive research from the standpoint of the business man, as well as a determination of their powers and duties in a legal way. All these duties make an unusual share of responsibility, and the wide range covered makes it necessary to have constantly in mind the laws as well as the judgment necessary to administer the duties of the office successfully. County commissioners are expressly prohibited from disbursing money "in behalf of the county."

Middlesex County.

From advanced information not yet published for general distribution it is ascertained that there is a total of 2951 counties in United States. Of the rural counties in North America (including the British possessions, having about 200 counties), the county of Middlesex in Massachusetts stands pre-eminent in population, none others approaching her. There are only seven counties in America exceeding her in population and these are strictly urban, such as New York county, Philadelphia county, St. Louis county, etc. In England and Wales, where county government is prehistoric, there are but twelve counties larger than Middlesex of Massachusetts, and one of them (Middlesex) is made up of the city of London, with more than six million inhabitants. Of this county Baron Macaulay wrote "that an acre in Middlesex is worth a principality in Utopia." Scotland has one, Ireland none, while the British possessions of Australia, New South Wales, Queensland, etc., with an aggregate of 347 counties has none equalling the population of Middlesex in Massachusetts. Several of the English counties of the present day were in existence as kingdoms under the Heptarchy, when Britain was ruled by seven kings. Out of the mist of the ages came the "Tythings," and from then came an aggregation of "one hundred families," known as the "Hundreds" and, as these increased, they were formed into counties as the "representatives of independent communities or kingdoms" having a suitable system of political and judicial government. As an institution for the convenient administration of justice and other purposes under the law, and shorn of its imperfections as applied to a republican form of government, the county still remains as an honored inheritance from the Anglo-Saxon race.

Treasurer's Report.

Each year a full report is issued by the county treasurer under the law, showing in detail the name of every person, except witnesses, by or to whom money has been paid, the amounts so paid or received, under an appropriate classification, and the objects of payment.

The county commissioners also prepare a full report each year stating what action they have taken in such manner as to give the tax payers of the county a full and clear understanding of the affairs of the county, and the objects and methods of county expenditures.

County Affairs.

As to whether the affairs of the county have been properly managed, only a brief statement can be made because of space already taken. Middlesex County now has a population of about 700,000 people and a valuation of more than $800,000,000. The rate of tax per one thousand dollars of valuation for the year 1913 is about 82 cents. The county debt on Dec. 31, 1912, was $435,000. The estimated value of the assets of the county, such as buildings, land, etc., was $2,862,207.42.

There are 54 cities and towns in the county. The Southern Registry of Deeds has more business than any registry of deeds in the commonwealth. The rate of tax for county purposes in Middlesex county is among the very lowest. A great many of the appropriations made for county purposes are for expenses over which county commissioners have no control; such as expenses of the courts, salaries fixed by law, payments on account of state highways, law libraries, etc. By examination of the treasurer's reports to which reference has been made, full information can be had as to these matters of expenditure as well as the sources of county receipts.

An independent investigation by a grand jury produced a statement over the signature of the 21 men signing the report in July, 1911, which was highly commendatory. They spent six months' time in a thorough examination of the affairs and official management of the county; all witnesses being under oath.

The grand jury took occasion to point out the admirable financial standing of the county and declared that the county's money had been well and wisely spent by the county commissioners. The grand jury expressed itself as satisfied with the business affairs of the county.

In conclusion we wish to say that the recent discovery of a defalcation in the house of correction, by a suicidal bookkeeper, whose stealings involved no one dishonestly but himself, is the first record of any crooked financial transaction since the incorporation of the county, May 10, 1643, a period of 270 years. This man was in no sense a county official, being an appointee of the master of the house of correction.

We are encouraged when a subscriber says, "I always send my paper to— as soon as I have read it." We have no means of knowing how many do this and probably those who do send, do so because their particular friend is interested in it. There is however a broader reach. Have you ever thought how thoroughly representative a newspaper is of its home town? A newspaper is the only home institution that travels around to distant cities. Buildings and streets cannot be seen unless one visits a place. The newspaper goes as far as the mails. The home newspaper furnishes a means by which distant people gain an idea of the place where it is published. If a newspaper is new and clean typographically, and has liberal advertising, every man from Los Angeles to the Atlantic who sees it gets an idea that the town is alive.

You women must use your minds in your work. Use it to short-cut your steps; use it to increase the quality and decrease the effort. Above all, get away from the idea that 'kitchen work is drudgery.' So is office work, if a man allows it to work on him instead of working it. The more I see of that type of woman who are so fond of posing as martyrs and calling themselves 'drudges' the more I am convinced that such women are too small for their job." by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed, you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

Conductor Strout, Just Pensioned By New Haven, Visualizes Them.

In keeping with its policy, and by order of President Mellen, the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad has pensioned Conductor H. E. Strout, of 3 Gay Head street, Roxbury, Boston, Mass., as a reward for forty-nine years of continuous and faithful service. Conductor Strout made his last trip over the road on August 9, 1913.

It takes one back over the lapse of years to hear the reminiscences of Mr. Strout and brings to mind the days when transportation was in the transient stage between the caravan and our luxurious transportation facilities of to-day. Mr. Strout scarcely looks his 73 years, and his easy stride, firm hand clasp and clear eye belie the whiteness of his hair. In recalling some of the incidents of his career he said:

"It's a good many years since I made my first run on the Boston and Providence Railroad. Many of us old fellows sign for the good old days; but when I walk through the train row, steam heated, properly ventilated, well lighted, running smoothly, yet with a speed unheard of in my early days, I'm content with the present."

"I am now 73 years of age and have been railroading for 52 years, 49 of which has been in consecutive service. I was born in North Easton, Mass., and entered the service of the old Boston and Providence Railroad in October, 1860, at the age of 20, as a brakeman, with a salary of $7.00 per week. In July, 1862, I enlisted in the Fourth Massachusetts Infantry for service in the Civil War, serving under General Banks in Louisiana. On July 14th, I was wounded in the assault on Fort Hudson, La., but completed my enlistment. I resumed my position with the road as brakeman in October, 1864, with a salary of $1.50 per day, and later this was increased to $2.00. In March, 1871, I was promoted to the position of passenger conductor at a yearly salary of $1,000. At this time no money was deducted on account of sickness or absence from work, and no extra compensation was given for any special trips I was called upon to make."

"There were no local trains then out of or into Boston later than 6:30 p. m., with the exception of a theatre train from Dedham, which ran once a week. The first Sunday train on the road, with the exception of a mail was put on in July, 1871, and I was conductor of it for a number of years. There were no ticket offices open, even in Boston, for this train. We were instructed to collect fares from every passenger and no rebates were given for cash paid. Even the superintendent of the road, himself, was obliged to pay his fare. I collected about $100 to $150 each day. There was no silver money at this time, it being all script, and this I carried between my fingers in order to make change rapidly. This paper money was in denominations of five, ten, twenty-five, fifty cents and one dollar. My regular run was three round trips daily between Boston and Dedham, stopping at all stations, leaving Boston at 8:30 a. m., 12:00 and 5:00 p. m., and returning from Dedham immediately upon arrival. On the morning and night trips we carried five or six cars, but on the noon trip only three."

"A few of the coaches held about 60 people, but not more than this number. On my train there was no smoking car, but there was a baggage car carried which had but four wheels. After considerable hard work on the part of the passengers, the company finally did take an old 'fish-car' and fit it up with seats, and this was used for a smoking car. The cars were lighted by two kerosene lamps, one at each end of the car, with wicks about an inch in width; and we were obliged to carry lanterns in order to collect the fares."

"In winter the cars were heated by wood stoves which were placed in the centre of the cars, and the passengers who were fortunate enough to get seats near the stove were the only ones who could keep warm."

"I think one of the most important notices ever issued by the railroad was sent to the employees on November 18th, 1883, and read as follows:

"You are hereby notified that from and after noon of Sunday, November 18th, the time used on this road will be that of the 75th Meridian of west longitude, which is 15 minutes and 44 1/2 seconds slower than Boston time now in use. Time will be given from the Boston office on Sunday as above, and all persons in the employ of the corporation must assemble at the nearest station convenient to them, and receive the new time."

For the past ten years Mr. Strout has been running the 3:00 p. m. train to New York, with the exception of about 16 months when he ran the "Mayflower Limited."

"Every year," said Mr. Strout, "has

Suffered Awful Pains From Stomach Trouble

Sick Three Months—Could Eat Nothing—Only Relief Was Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy.

Read what Mrs. May T. Bartlett, of Salem, Mass., says in a recent letter: "I shall never be without Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy again. When I wrote for a sample bottle I was suffering badly with my stomach and from constipation. I could eat hardly anything and I would have awful pains. I was down sick for three months that summer and could take nothing but gruel and beef tea. I am now on my second bottle of Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy. My stomach is better, my bowels move freely. I used to have severe headaches but do not now. Not only has it helped me, but four of my friends who have been troubled with constipation are using it and have been benefited."

Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy has had 40 years of wonderful success in Kidney, Liver and Blood troubles. A physician's prescription, formerly used in his large private practice, and now prepared for general use. Write to-day for free sample and booklet of valuable information. Dr. David Kennedy Co., Rondout, N. Y.

brought improvements; to-day the travelling public can scarcely appreciate what these improvements have meant for them."

When asked about his pension, Mr. Strout said: "It is a fortunate thing for me that they have a pension system, and I highly appreciate the generosity of the company in my behalf."

Mr. Strout owns his home and has a daughter and a son, the daughter making her home with him. He is a member of the G. A. R., Order of Railroad Conductors, and Masonic bodies. His position as conductor afforded him an opportunity to make friends, not only for himself but for the company. He was one of the gentlest and kindest employees, sincerely loved by the travelling public, and his smiling countenance will be greatly missed."

LITTLE RED SCHOOL HOUSE.

The Little Red Schoolhouse is to occupy a place of honor on the program of the Fourth International Congress on School Hygiene in Buffalo, N. Y., according to a statement issued by the program committee, which is composed of Drs. Robert W. Lovett and David L. Edsall of Harvard, Dr. Luther H. Gulick, of New York, and Dr. Thomas A. Storey, of the College of New York, Secretary General of the Congress.

"The problems of the city schools have received a great deal of much deserved attention," say the members of the committee in the announcement of the program. "The very serious problems of the village school have received but little attention. The study and the solution of these problems are of obvious complexity and importance. The committee is therefore anxious to secure papers relating to rural school hygiene and village school hygiene as well as to city school hygiene."

In a report issued at Washington, United States Commissioner of Education, Philander P. Claxton, calls attention to the subject of the Little Red School in the following terms: "Until very recently few careful studies of the rural schools have been made, and we yet have little accurate information about them and little knowledge of the factors entering into the problem of their improvement. We do know in a general way that their terms are short, their support inadequate, their teachers poorly prepared, their attendance irregular, their management unscientific and wasteful of money, time, and energy, their courses of study ill-adapted to their needs and the houses in which the children are taught cheap and poorly equipped and furnished. That this is not true of all rural schools goes without saying, but it is unfortunately true in a large measure of most of them."

In all there are some 212,000 one teacher little red schoolhouses in the United States alone, according to the Washington report prepared by A. C. Monahan. In this report there is a picture of a one teacher rural school house which is characterized as "A fair type of about one half of the 212,000 one teacher rural schools." Most of the original red paint seems to have been washed off these schools. "A general impression has been created," says Mr. Monahan, "that there exists an American school system which is sufficient and nation wide, with equal educational opportunities in all parts of the country. The impression is erroneous. It is probably true that the public schools, both urban and rural, have made considerable progress, but the marked progress has been confined almost wholly to the city and town. The majority of rural schools are housed in uncomfortable buildings, unsuitable from every standpoint, without proper furniture or facilities for heating, ventilating and lighting; without adequate provisions for guarding the health and morals of the children and with comparatively little equipment for teaching."

Dr. Fletcher B. Dresslar, School Hygiene Specialist in the Bureau of Education, who is Chairman of the Committee on Scientific Exhibit at the Fourth International Congress, has recently been making a special study of the rural school building and grounds. The result of his investigation will be called to the attention of the delegates at Buffalo. Dr. Dresslar found that although there is great need for reform, nevertheless the indications at the present time point toward a marked improvement in the rural school building, ground and equipment. New buildings are under construction in large numbers in many sections and, as a rule, the new buildings are a great improvement over the old ones.

In commenting upon the $3.00 raise in the Wakefield tax rate this year, chairman Parker of the board of assessors of that town, is quoted as saying: "The high tax is caused by the reckless extravagance in expenditures by the state and town," and adds "The conditions are the same all over the state."

Salaries for officials of railroads, both steam and electric, will soon be the subject of regulation by the government unless there is a big reduction. Salaries on the Boston Elevated range from $36,000 down to $6,000 a year. The officials evidently get too much and the men too little.

Boom Charlestown — for your sake, for the district's sake, for the sake of those who, in steadily increasing numbers, have been engaged in booming Charlestown for 10, these many years! — [Charlestown Enterprise.] We would suggest getting Mayor Fitzgerald to take up his residence there. Then there would be something doing immediately.

The Elevated Railroad and the Car Men's Union are represented at the hearings before the arbitrators, now going on in Boston, but the people who ultimately will have to pay the freight are denied representation. Counsel Feeney, who represents the Union, says "That there are only two sides to this question," — the Elevated and the Union. The people as a whole are not given much consideration these days.

After being published continuously since 1851 the Woburn Journal has suspended. Until about a year ago it was published weekly, when it was merged with the Wo-burn-Daily News and it then became a daily. It was only a matter of time when one or the other of the two daily papers in Woburn would have to go under, as the city was not large enough for both.
The Times is now master of the field and it covers the ground thoroughly. It takes a large amount of capital to publish a paper these days, even in a small city or town, as the public is not so easily satisfied as was the case years ago.
Since we commenced the publication of the STAR our expenses have more than trebled, and they are increasing every year. But as an offset to this is the splendid support given by the inhabitants. A good newspaper is a valuable asset for a town to have, as it mirrors its advantages as a place of residence as far as the mails reach. For this and its news features it is worthy of the support of all.

A FRIENDLY WORD OF CAUTION.

Editor of the Star:—
I think the Board of Public Works ought to consider the matter of changing the line of Church street abutting the new building which is to be built opposite the common according to present indications. The line of the street is curved and the face of the building (evidently a long one) is straight and will seem to "stick out" at the ends too prominently. Some town authority ought to see to this and the town pay out something to harmonize the graceful curve of the street with the straight front of the building. I am afraid the effect will not be good if some change is not made. Let us not make any more building mistakes at the town center, especially on beautiful Church street.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

With "Under Two Flags" at the Castle Square next week, there are sure to be large audiences at every afternoon and evening performance.
Ouida's novel from which it is drama-tized is even more famous than the play, and during the past dozen years it has proved extraordinarily successful both as a book and on the stage.
Cigarette is one of the most fascinating heroines ever seen on the modern stage. She is wilful and audacious, capricious, gentle and self-sacrificing and the story of her love for Bertie Cecil is fascinating. The striking role of Bertie Cecil will be acted by Mr. Carleton, and every one of the members of Mr. Craig's company will be enlisted in the cast.

Rev. Murray Dewart and wife returned home this week from a pleasant time spent at Manchester, N. H. Mr. Dewart will occupy his pulpit Sunday.

If the teams of this section are as well matched next season as this, it seems a shame that they could not get a league together. All-Woburn, Winchester, Calumet, Reading and Wakefield have shown equal class and a five league team would give each team a chance to play one game a month with outside teams or the schedule could be arranged to have the league games played every other

Saturday's Game Was a Victory For Winchester.

The Brookline A. A. fell a prey to the Winchesters last Saturday afternoon in a fast played game, in which the visitors were fairly outclassed, 8 to 2. Powers was taken out of the box after the first inning, and Studebaker took his place, pitching a fairly good game. The Winchesters after winning this game were considered in good trim for the doubleheader with the All-Woburns.

A SEVERE DISAPPOINTMENT.

What An Untutored Umpire Can Do
To Spoil a Game.

On the morning of Labor Day the Baseball Team visited Woburn for the annual game, accompanied by nearly the entire town. The Woburn stand seats 400 people and 300 of the crowd were from Winchester, every one ready and eager to witness a game of ball. It was announced before the game and during the week that a young man named Everburg would umpire and according to some of the "dope" handed out he had "Silk".
O'Laughlin beaten a mile when it came to handing out decisions. While Manager LeDuc did not know anything about him, he felt that Manager McDonald would not put a man in umpiring who was not competent, and of course made no inquiries. We make no complaint when an umpire makes a close decision on the bases, or may be "off" on balls and strikes, but when a man is sent in to handle a game as important to the fans as the Woburn and Winchester game, he should know the rules of the game and have them at his finger tips. Anyway, they told us he umpired (?) in the Philippines, but most of the "fans" will agree with the writer when I say the only umpiring he ever did was handing out decisions on cans of embalmed beef; because some of the Moros out there could do better, and know more about a game than he did.

At 10.45 we had our first glimpse of the important individual. Any kind of an umpire will generally carry an indicator with him, but he came around and had to borrow one to start with. Well, he got out in the center of the diamond and a number of the Winchester fans wanted to know where they got "Bat" Nelson to umpire. There was one thing he had beside his "nerve", that was a beautiful movement of his arms when calling a ball or strike. He was so rank in the first half of the first inning on strikes that the Woburn pitcher had to laugh at him. The fun started in the second inning when with men on second and third, a passed ball by McDonald in the crowd allowed Kenney to score, and Morrissey, who was running for Roche, instead of holding up at third or being held there by the umpire came home and was tagged out by the pitcher, this out being allowed when Morrissey should have been sent back to third.

Of course Manager LeDuc protested, but the umpire had his way, and we were robbed of a possible run or more then. Then came the third inning and it was there where the umpire showed all he knew about the game.
With Neil Doherty on third and Harold McDonald on first the man on first attempted to steal. Dickie made a good throw, but the ball hit
Mr. Everburg and rolled out in the field allowing Doherty to score and McDonald to reach second, when both of the runners should have been sent back. But did the umpire rule according to baseball rules? No, kind friend, it seems that he had a book of his own rules that he wrote while umpiring games under the tropical sun of the Philippines and ruled accordingly.
Manager LeDuc protested, but in vain.
After a long delay the game finally proceeded with both players and spectators thoroughly disgusted, a number of the fans getting up and going away to show their disapproval. Manager LeDuc told the team to go ahead and finish the game out the best they could, as he felt that Walter Johnson could not win a game under the circumstances.

The fair-minded fans in Woburn said it was the worst case of robbery they ever saw on a field, and the worst of it was that he was bound to decide against Winchester whether right or wrong.

There is one thing connected with base ball that Winchester will not stand for and that is having local umpires handle the games for them, as they cannot be fair to a visiting team, therefore we go out of town and get disinterested men to do the work for us.

AFTERNOON GAME.

In the afternoon of Labor Day
Woburn came down to Winchester and in the best game of ball seen on Manchester Field this season, won from Winchester 2 to 0. The game went eight innings without a run on either side, when Woburn came to bat in their half a poorly played hit by Mitchell and bad handling of a ground ball by Tift got men on second and third when a hit sent over the two runs that finally won the game. It was a pitchers' battle between Mc-Mahon and Tift with the luck with McMahon, as Tift fairly outpitched him and only the most wonderful support saved McMahon time and again from certain defeat. It was a clean game of ball handled by a competent umpire with the same standard of fairness that has been in force in Winchester since the game has been run by the present management. — A number of the Woburn fans told the writer that they felt ashamed to come down and see the fair treatment handed to the Woburn team and crowd after the raw work of the morning.

The story of the last inning is the story of the game.

We show herewith cut of "KITCHEN HEATER," which can be attached to any style or make of gas range.

Its purpose is to heat the kitchen and heat the water for domestic purposes at such times as it is desirable to maintain some coal fire for heating purposes.

Many of our consumers are installing this heater, saying that it overcomes all other objections to using a gas range exclusively.

Ask for our representative to call and explain the many good points of this heater which space forbids us to tell here.

EQUAL SUFFRAGE

DEPARTMENT.

Conducted by the Winchester League.

The new editor of Harper's Weekly, Norman Hapgood, gives no chance for doubting his attitude on the suffrage question. In his first editorial, "What women are after," he says: "Voting is a valuable and a necessary part of the new influence that women are to use in remaking our civilization, but it is merely the expression of a right and a point of view and a powerful weapon for helping along changes that are founded on something deeper than legal procedure."

The new position of women in the world means that the intellectual and moral standards of civilization are to be changed. They are no longer to be the expression of one sex slightly influenced by the other. They are to be the composite ideals of the two, not of the two acting separately, but of the two as each will be modified by the other, as they come into fairer, fuller, and more equal communication. The world is a full of institutions and ideas that are stereotyped and ignorantly worshiped, and which, nevertheless, are obstructive to the welfare of mankind.

Already we see the effect of letting loose the criticism of half the human race on a civilization built up by the other half. The attitude of the world today toward all vices is a very different thing from what it was a century ago, when the thinking on the subject was merely man's thinking. The changing view of what needs to be done in industry is already partly due to women, and will be much more due to them as the moral and human side of industry passes more and more into their hands.

Harper's Weekly, under its present management, wishes nothing more strongly than to become a medium for much of the most adequate thought on social institutions of today, as seen by the most intelligent women, who are undertaking to make them better not only for women themselves but for men also, and naturally most of all for children, since in them are determined all the possibilities of the men and women of the future.

Mr. Wells did not exaggerate when he said: "Our modern world is burdened with its sense of the immense, now half articulated, significance of women." Dean Swift said: "I am ignorant of any one quality that is admirable in woman which is not equally so in man. I do not except even modesty and gentleness of nature; nor do I know one vice or folly which is not equally detestable in both. What exceptional men in all ages have recognized all mankind must recognize soon."

Harper's Weekly is to be congratulated on having secured a broad, fair minded man for its editor, in these times of rapidly changing outlooks and ideals.

UNEXPECTED KILLING.

HOT DAYS.

We do not forget what the weather has been from year to year. Every year we acclaim what a cold winter we had, and how much colder than it ever was before, or what a hot summer we had and how much hotter than it was for the past five years, when, if we would only look into the records a little bit, we would find how evenly the conditions average one year with another.

Everyone thinks that when the summer is gone there won't be any more hot weather after Labor Day has past. Slaves to style, most of us discard our straw hats on that day and remark that fall is here.

As a matter of fact, some of our "meanest" hot days come after Labor Day. Certainly we have a great deal of hot weather in September, and those are the days when we suffer most because we least expect such weather, and perhaps are not dressed for it. Hot days and cool nights with their trying extremes make it worth while to take the greatest precautions for our health—especially if we have the great "privilege" of two weeks' vacation, and the opportunity to fill our systems with infection and contagion.

Between September 1st and 15th inclusive, the highest temperatures for the last ten years have been: 1912, 90; 1911, 85; 1910, 83; 1909, 82; 1908, 87; 1907, 88; 1906, 90; 1905, 86; 1904, 90; 1903, 89.

Of course the average temperatures for those July days were much higher, but they came at times when people expected such weather and took the necessary precautions to protect themselves. It is the unexpected that takes us by surprise and often works serious harm, especially when we consider the effects of sudden hot or excessively humid weather.

WOMAN AND POLITICS.

Editor of the Star:

Suffragists used to believe that all obstacles to their propaganda would disappear if they could only bring the men over to their side. They have spent, for some sixty years, and incalculably huge amount of time, energy and money in spreading their doctrine, and now to their consternation, find that their strongest opponents are the great majority of women. They dread nothing so much as the submission of the suffrage question to the vote of women. But, they say, let the vote be given to all women and then only those who want to vote need to do so.

Never have persons professing to understand government advanced an idea so false and dangerous to the nation that a voter is under no obligation to vote. Authorities in political science have repeatedly pointed out that one fundamental reason why our democracy is not yet as successful as it may become, is precisely because so many men do not vote, vote only occasionally, or vote without carefully informing themselves about principles and candidates. The best men are beginning to realize that they should have given more time and thought to their political duties. Some of them even go so far as to advocate compulsory voting.

Women who under such circumstances put forward the suggestion that no one needs to vote, and who want to add to the indifferent voters some 90 per cent of the women of the country, show themselves ignorant enemies of good government.

If women were in reality to "bring the women's point of view to bear" through political means they would find it necessary to become active party workers, legislators and administrators. Political activity, being partisan activity, leads necessarily to personal contention before the public, and demands, if it is to be successful, aggressive fighting qualities. Such characteristics are out of harmony with the nature and ideals of the truest women.

We are proud that our churches are out of politics, we try to keep our schools out of politics, and we desire likewise to keep women from that alliance with parties that would impair their collective non-political power over public opinion.

CURTIS FAMILY REUNION.

Guests of Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Barcalow at Wheelock Park.

The sixth annual reunion of the Curtis Family Association took place last Friday at Wheelock Park and although the day was somewhat stormy, a large number attended.

At one o'clock a bountiful luncheon was served in the park pavilion, after which an entertainment was given, consisting of addresses, readings and music.

A business meeting followed, at which the following officers were chosen for the coming year: President, Mrs. O. B. Curtis, Northfield, Mass.; Vice President, Mrs. Arthur Lawrence, South Acton, Mass.; Secretary, Mrs. Bernice Ballou; Treasurer, O. B. Curtis, Northfield, Mass.; Historian, Mrs. Carrie Fletcher, Chelmsford, Mass.; Entertainment Committee, E. T. Barcalow, F. L. Carey, W. L. Greene, Keene, Wayne G. Lawrence, Concord, Mass.

The afternoon was spent with games and in a social way.

B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE.

Clifton Crawford, the famous musical comedy star, late feature of "Three Twins" and "My Best Girl," will head the bill at B. F. Keith's Theatre the week of September 8th. Mr. Crawford had decided not to appear on the American stage this season, but he at length yielded to the tempting offer made him by Mr. B. F. Keith to appear at the Boston playhouse for a positively limited engagement of one week only. Mr. Crawford will appear in a new monologue with some original songs written by himself. Another big feature of the week will be the first vaudeville appearance of Sydney Jarvis, late of George M. Cohan's "Little Millionaire," and Virginia Dare, pronounced the most beautiful woman in vaudeville, in a skit called, "Oh, You Wonderful Girl." Other splendid features will be the Great Adas Family of sensational aerialists; John E. Kenshaw and Grace Avery, two more musical comedy stars in "Strangers in a Strange Flat"; The Transatlantic Trio; Five Juggling Mowatts; Cummings and Gladys; English and Johnston; Chalk Saunders; and the Pathe Weekly with the latest news in pictures.

YOUR AFFAIRS AND MINE

A Star reader writes to The Spectator concerning that vivisection of the English classics which is conducted in many high schools under the pretense of being courses in English literature. Some question exists in The Spectator's mind whether his correspondent is not severe in his characterization of the analysis which is presumed to instruct the pupil in the beauties and niceties of the language, but there will not be much dissent from his conclusion that these are results which are much needed in Winchester and elsewhere:

To read aloud without stumbling. To converse logically, fluently, and correctly.

To pronounce properly and distinctly.

To use the dictionary with understanding of diacritical marks, accent marks, etc.

To talk with strangers, on business or other matters, clearly and concisely, without embarrassment bred of the consciousness of an adequate mastery of the parent tongue.

To spell with the voice as well as with the pen.

To breathe deeply and rhythmically, and consequently manage the voice effectually.

In short, so, to coordinate the physical, mental and the emotional as to give the fullest and most meaningful vocal interpretation to the masterpieces of literature.

All this is not to say that the schools should aim at making actors of exponents of elocutionary skill out of all the pupils.

That would be most undesirable and unnecessary. But in view of the few—the very few—intelligent readers, and the many—the very many—slipshod and ineffective talkers, it would be more than grateful, it would be magnificent, if the schools would produce large numbers of graduates competent in the direction which "A Star Reader" points out.

STILL AT IT.

The car-shaver is still at it. He is the law-breaker whose specialty is to pass a street car at full speed while the car is stopped for the purpose of taking on or letting off passengers. Regardless of the safety of others, he puts on an extra burst of speed as he approaches the car. Sometimes he blows his horn, as if that were for the purpose of removing all obstructions from his path, and if he fails to scare somebody into dazed helplessness he feels that his own importance has not been sufficiently impressed on those who ride in the humble trolleys.

The hand of the law should be laid heavily upon the car-shavers.

The police of this and other cities are trying to do their duty in the matter of speed, marauding and car-shaving. Let the courts do their duty, regardless of the influences that are always brought to bear when murder or assault is committed by means of a motor car.—Boston Traveler-Herald.

PROFITABLE DAILY TITHING.

"Daily Heavenly Manna."

This little book is having the largest circulation of any of its kind and is conceded by Christians everywhere to be the most helpful.

If Christians allow the rush and crush of selfish ambition to deprive them of their daily portion of heavenly food, they must not be surprised if they grow spiritually leaner day by day, and if the peace of God gives place in their hearts to the discontent which is growing in the world, notwithstanding the multiplication of our comforts and privileges.

Daily Heavenly Manna contains a collection of Scripture texts with appropriate quotations for every day in the year. Surely the little tithe of time daily spent in partaking of its morsels of heavenly counsel cannot fail to profit all who partake. It is published to do good—not for profit.

Your Friends' Birth Dates.

An autograph and birthday record feature in this book is a great convenience. Opposite each day of the year are blank lines upon which you can secure the autographs of your friends and be reminded of their birthdays as they occur. This makes the book more valuable yearly. In ten years you would not sell it for ten dollars.

Besides it has a place for Birth Records, Marriage Records and Death Records. Also it has a table showing the day of the week of any date for one hundred and fifty years.

GOD'S TEN COMMANDS.

Exodus 20:1-11—Sept. 7.

"Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind."—Luke 10:27.

GOD'S Covenant with Israel at Mt. Sinai was that if they should keep the Decalogue—the Ten Commandments—they would thereby demonstrate that they were perfect men, worthy of everlasting life. Then it would be possible for them to obtain the chief blessing under the Abrahamic Covenant—to become the Spiritual Seed of Abraham, through whom God promised to bless the world.

Bible students look in amazement at the simplicity of the Decalogue, and at first wonder which of its features the Jews and others were unable to perform satisfactorily. The matter seems very simple, just as it did to the Jews, until we perceive that God's Law, represented in the Ten Commandments, has a depth of meaning that cannot be seen on hatred is incipient murder.

Apparently the full meaning of this Law was seen by none until Jesus "magnified the Law and made it honorable." He says that hatred toward a brother is incipient murder, and that adulterous desire in the heart is a violation of the Seventh Commandment. This throws a light on the whole matter, and explains why no one has been able to keep this Law, except Jesus, since Adam's fall.

The great Teacher also explains that the first table of the Law, appertaining to man's duties toward his Creator, means much more than merely to avoid image worship and profanity. It means that the true God shall have the first place in the human heart. Any division of heart, strength, mind or soul violates this commandment.

God's Original Law to Man.

God's Law to man was not originally given at Mt. Sinai. Indeed, the Mt. Sinai statement of the Law was given to the Jewish nation alone—as the terms upon which they might become God's Royal Priesthood for the blessing of all nations.

God's original Law to man was given in Eden, written upon Adam's heart, in that he was created in the Divine image—with attributes of mind and heart fully in accord with his Creator. He loved righteousness, and would have hated sin, had there been any to hate. But up to that time there was none.

After Adam's fall, the work of degeneracy progressed so rapidly that Adam's first born son became a murderer. Doubtless the chagrin of Mother Eve in the loss of Eden and in battling with the thorns and the thistles of the earth under the curse embittered her mind, arousing anger and resentment, which marked her child. From then till now the course has been generally downward, with occasionally a well-born child less seriously marked by sin—less depraved. Still the Scriptures inform us that "There is none righteous, no, not one."

Hope for the Future.

Mankind's experience for six thousand years forbids us to expect that any could commend himself to God upon the terms of human perfection, ability and willingness to keep the Divine Law. Jesus alone has kept that Law, and He became begotten miraculously. He was "holy, harmless, undefiled, separate from sinners." God refuses to grant everlasting life to any except the perfect who will keep His Law willingly and gladly. What hope then is there for our race? There is one hope for the world, and still another for the Church, instituted at Pentecost. The world's hope is in the Messianic Kingdom of 1,000 years, whose rulers and judges will be God's Royal Priesthood—the glorified Church, Head and Body.

God's Messianic Kingdom will depose Satan, binding him for a thousand years. Speedily the iniquities of earth will be set aside, and the rule of the "rod of iron" will begin. Everything opposed to righteousness will be dashed to pieces. Everything sinful will be discouraged by chastenings, and everything righteous will be encouraged by blessings.

"Thou shalt have no other gods."

aged by blessings.

Under that administration, the world will again reach the condition of perfection from which Adam fell. All willfully rebellious, all lovers of sin, will have been cut off in the Second Death—"everlasting destruction."

The Church and the Law.

The Church of Christ is selected from amongst mankind, who were born in sin. The members are not under the Law of Sinai in the sense of being required to keep it perfectly in order to get eternal life. (Romans 6:14.) Nevertheless, the Law is very precious to the Church; for its spirit reveals to her how far short of perfection she is in the flesh, and to what extent the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ covers her fleshly imperfections. Thus, the Apostle declares, "the righteousness of the Law is fulfilled in us, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit."

WHAT, WHEN AND HOW TO EAT

Diet One Should Follow to Increase Weight to the Normal.

By EUGENE CHRISTIAN, F. S. D.

[Copyright, 1913, by American Press Association.]

NUMEROUS causes may conspire in the same body to bring it below its normal weight. Named in the order of their importance they are:

One.—Hyperacidity, commonly called sour stomach.

Two.—Malassimilation, both stomach and intestinal indigestion.

Three.—Intestinal congestion, fermentation and autointoxication.

All of these conditions are in reality from the same general cause, that cause being hyperacidity. For many centuries, however, they have been classed and treated as different disorders because they appear and manifest themselves in different parts of the body.

Hyperacidity is a true disease which comes from errors in diet, usually overeating or overconsumption of sweets, acids, starches and drinks of an alkaloid character, such as tea, coffee, wine, beer, liquors, etc.

In one of my former articles I reviewed very briefly the general results of hyperacidity. I will deal now more directly with the results, the principal one of which is physical emaciation.

Overwork, loss of sleep, wrong eating, worry, grief or a period of intense emotional tension, each has a tendency to disturb and derange the process of metabolism. Under these conditions the body is very apt to lose weight, but there is always a fundamental or parent cause which nearly always leads back to the question of diet.

All of the influences above named contribute their share toward physical decline but when the body is perfectly nourished it is more capable of withstanding these strains because it is made fearless by perfect health.

Behind all forms of business and financial trouble is the demon fear, and fear rests upon the uncertainty in our ability to provide creature comforts and necessities. Therefore when we master the science of feeding our bodies and learn how simply and cheaply this can be done the mere possession of such knowledge does more than all else to make of us philosophers and students, eliminating fear and worry.

Emaciation—the Remedy.

Even if the immediate cause of emaciation should be mental, such as worry, fear or anxiety, the most important thing is to select and combine the diet so as to establish perfect digestion and assimilation of food and perfect elimination of waste. This will fortify and strengthen the body in that particular place from which all energy originates. As physical emaciation is caused almost wholly by violation of the laws of nutrition, we are naturally led into this field for our remedy.

Those desiring to gain weight should—First—Limit the quantity of food during the first week to the normal demands of the body regardless of appetite.

Second.—Omit white bread and cereals.

Third.—Omit all acid fruits.

Fourth.—Omit all sweets.

Fifth.—Omit tea, coffee, tobacco, liquor, beer and all intoxicants.

The diet should consist of vegetables named in the list below and of such selections from this list as are most readily digestible and assimilable. This can be ascertained very readily by a few experiments.

After the offending articles named above have been omitted the diet should consist of the following: Milk, eggs, a limited quantity of fish or fowl (white or bloodless meat), an abundance of fresh vegetables, such as potatoes, tender corn, carrots, parsnips, onions, turnips, beets, squash, peas, beans (both fresh and dried), stewed pumpkin, cabbage, Brussels sprouts, cauliflower, eggplant, etc., and a limited quantity of bread made from the entire wheat or the plain wheat boiled five or six hours until the grains burst open.

The carbohydrate part of the diet should be selected from either wheat or potatoes.

The following menus are composed of selections and combinations of food which I would advise in ordinary cases of underweight.

The first thing after rising practice deep breathing exercises for three minutes and drink two tumblers of pure water.

BREAKFAST

Cantaloupes or prunes. One egg whipped, mixed into three glasses of fresh milk.

Two heaping tablespoonfuls of plain boiled wheat or a slice or two of whole wheat bread.

A heaping tablespoonful of plain wheat bran.

LUNCHEON

From three to four glasses of milk. Two or three medium sized baked potatoes with butter and a very little salt.

DINNER

Any one or two fresh vegetables named in the list above.

Two to three glasses of milk and one egg.

Many of the fresh and succulent vegetables named in this menu are not fat producers, but they contain mineral salts, which aid in the digestion and assimilation of other foods and supply the blood with the mineral elements necessary for perfect metabolism and the production and deposition of fat.

Intestinal Congestion (Constipation). Normal intestinal action is absolutely necessary in order to gain weight.

Milk, one of the principal fat producing foods, has a tendency toward intestinal congestion. This can be overcome in two ways.

First.—By taking milk in a quantity great enough to pass from the stomach without being made wholly into curd. That portion which thus passes from the stomach has a tendency to relieve constipation, or, rather, to serve as an alimentary lubricant. For example, one or two glasses of milk might produce congestion in the intestines, while four glasses taken within a period of two hours would not act just the reverse and at the same time supply an abundance of fat producing material.

Second.—From one to three heaping tablespoonfuls of bran should be taken with each meal where milk is used, especially if the quantity is not large enough to prevent congestion.

The whole wheat taken as above suggested often prevents constipation and sometimes acts as a mild laxative. In such cases the whole wheat is preferable to bran.

In the vast majority of emaciated cases it will be found that the patient is suffering from premature fermentation and a lack of body moisture. Copious water drinking therefore becomes of primary importance. Where a small quantity of milk is used the necessary moisture should be made up with pure water. The "washing down" should be avoided, as mastication is needed for healthful assimilation.

Body is 68 Per Cent Water.

The human body is 68 per cent water, but to enter the blood water must pass into the circulation with the food. That is, the food must carry from 60 to 70 per cent of moisture. Water drinking with meals therefore is of much importance to those desiring to gain weight for three specific reasons:

First.—It dilutes the gastric juice and prevents hyperacidity (fermentation).

Second.—It aids digestion by removing irritation of the intestinal tract both in the stomach and intestines.

Third.—It supplies the blood with the requisite amount of moisture, which promotes both purity and circulation.

One is very often afflicted with hyperacidity without any manifestation from the stomach. The best evidence of this is a lack of thirst. Superacidity, therefore, in addition to being one of the primary causes of emaciation, also destroys natural thirst, which prevents water drinking, and there is at once a lack of body moisture, which is another one of the offending causes.

Table of Weights—Normal and Thin.

The following table gives the normal weight of healthy adults according to height, also the weight considered thin or emaciated:

Height.	Mailes Weight.	Females Weight.
Feet. In. Thin. Normal. Thin. Normal.
5.0..... 90 110 90 110
5.1..... 95 115 95 115
5.2..... 100 120 95 115
5.3..... 105 125 102 121
5.4..... 110 130 105 124
5.5..... 114 135 109 131
5.6..... 119 138 112 134
5.7..... 123 140 114 137
5.8..... 126 143 117 140
5.9..... 129 145 120 143
6.0..... 131 148 123 146
6.1..... 133 150 126 149
6.2..... 136 153 129 152
6.3..... 139 156 132 155
6.4..... 142 159 135 158
6.5..... 145 162 138 161
6.6..... 148 165 141 164
6.7..... 151 168 144 167
6.8..... 154 171 147 170
6.9..... 157 174 150 173

At normal weight the body possesses its greatest powers of endurance, which is in the final analysis the true measure of health. Few people of either sex, however, maintain their normal weight up to fifty years of age. The majority of people are either afflicted with a surplus amount of fat or emaciated by acids and toxic poisons, caused by fermentation of food. No better evidence could be offered to show the lack of knowledge in regard to diet than these abnormal physical conditions.

It is a consoling argument of the optimist to contend that whatever custom prevails is right, but this theory will not stand the searchlight of science. Man has become accustomed to using tobacco, stimulants, sedatives, narcotics in a dozen different forms, all of which have a tendency to tear down tissue, destroy energy and de-throne his mentality. Having made a long series of mistakes in his social and politico-economic affairs, it is only logical to conclude that he has made equally as many mistakes in his diet, especially in view of the fact that in the selection of his food he has had practically no restraint.

A DEFECT IN OUR MOTH WORK

From time to time the ravages of the insect pests from which Eastern Massachusetts suffers disclose the need of a little more elasticity in the scheme of legislative appropriations for their suppression. Thus far the State has never made provision for work against any other insects than the gypsy and the brown tail moths. The commission for two or three years has advocated the placing of the elm beetle in the same category. This year serious damage has been done also by the tent caterpillar, the San Jose scale and the leopard moth. In Weston, for example, the residents have been puzzled by what seemed to them the ridiculous practice of operating upon a tree infested with brown-tails and letting the tent caterpillars do their sad worst upon the tree next in line. Money appropriated by the State, however, is specifically designated, and no funds are available for any other purposes. Therefore the tent caterpillars and the rest go on their blighting way unmolested. What is needed is a contingent fund for just such emergencies—an appropriation of money to be used in the discretion of the State forester or other proper official for general rather than specific work. To be sure, the tent caterpillar is a native pest, and we have parasites preying upon it which usually keep the balance, so that its numbers do not become great enough to do such damage as Weston reports this year. It may be now four or five years are the pests again so outnumber the parasites. But from time to time this and other native pests require special attention. When nature fails us, we should have the emergency fund available.—[Boston Journal.]

A PAPER DISH CLOTH.

Just what you have long wanted. Absolutely germ proof; will not go to pieces in the hottest water; lasts as long as linen and leaves no streaks on the finest glassware. One-half dozen dish cloths in sanitary package for 10 cents at Wilson the Stationer's.

THE NEWSPAPER JOB.

Many people believe that a newspaper falls together without work or concerted action or plan. Rev. McLeod, a Presbyterian minister at Pasadena, was of the opinion, and asked to be allowed to edit an edition of the Pasadena Star. The editor gladly accepted the opportunity to go on, and the minister took up his duties in the newspaper office. This is how he felt when he found himself at the end of the task, which it must be said, had been done quite creditably.

"My time is almost up as I pen this last line; my hand is almost paralyzed; my brain is befuddled and I am free to confess that I am right glad to vacate the holy spot. Such rush and riot and disarray. Such a jumble of potpourri. It strikes me as the effort to bring order out of chaos, and to do it lightning quick."

"I am reminded of the memorable words, 'The earth was without form and void, and darkness was upon the face of the waters.' Never shall I criticize newspaper men more. I shall pray for them. They will have my heart's forbearance henceforth and forever. They are the hardest worked, shortest lived, poorest paid brain workers on this weary old world of ours."

HEATING SYSTEM.

Now is the proper time to consider a warm house for next winter with no gas to kill the flowers. We are the only firm in Winchester that can furnish you with practical heating men of all kinds, for hot air furnaces, steam and hot water work, at a moment's notice for 52 weeks in the year.

We advise attention now to that important feature in your home. Anybody can make a bluff at cleaning your furnace but it takes a practical furnace man to produce results. We have the practical men and would rather serve you now than in the busy season. It being much easier now to get the repairs.

MIDDLESEX, ss.

PROBATE COURT.

To the heirs-at-law, next of kin and all other persons interested in the estate of Mary E. Gallagher, late of Winchester, in said County deceased.

WHEREAS, a certain instrument purporting to be the last will and testament of said deceased has been presented to said Court, for Probate, by Charles H. Gallagher, who claims that letters testamentary may be issued to him, the executor therein named, without giving a surety on his official bond.

You are hereby cited to appear at a Probate Court, to be held at Cambridge, in said County of Middlesex, on the ninth day of September, A. D. 1913, at nine o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, why the same should not be granted.

And said petitioner is hereby directed to give public notice thereof, by publishing this citation once in each week, for three successive weeks in the Winchester Star, a newspaper published in Winchester, the last publication to be one day, at least, before said Court, and by mailing, post-paid, or delivering a copy of this citation to all known persons interested in the estate, seven days at least before said Court.

Witness, CHARLES J. MCINTIRE, Esquire, First Judge of said Court, this nineteenth day of August, in the year one thousand nine hundred and thirteen.

PROBATE COURT.

To Mary Kane of Winchester in said County of Middlesex, and to her heirs apparent or presumptive, and to the State Board of Insanity.

Whereas, a petition for guardianship has been presented to said Court, by Howard S. Cosgrove and Mary A. Cosgrove, both of said Winchester, alleging that said Mary Kane is an insane person, and incapable of taking care of herself, and praying that said Howard S. Cosgrove, or some other suitable person, may be appointed her guardian, agreeably to the law in such case made and provided.

You are hereby cited to appear at a Probate Court, to be held at Cambridge, in and for said County of Middlesex, on the eleventh day of September, A. D. 1913, at nine o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, why a guardian should not be appointed as aforesaid.

And said petitioner is hereby directed to give public notice of the time and place appointed for the hearing of said complaint, by serving said Mary Kane and said State Board of Insanity, with a copy of this order, seven days at least before said Court; and by mailing the same once in each week, for three successive weeks, in the Winchester Star, a newspaper published in Winchester, the last publication to be one day at least before said Court.

Witness, CHARLES J. MCINTIRE, Esquire, First Judge of said Court, this nineteenth day of August, in the year one thousand nine hundred and thirteen.

The Neighborhood Railroad

The railroad system of New England is aptly called "the neighborhood railroad".

BECAUSE:—

65,000 of your neighbors own it's stock.

80,000 of your neighbors are employed.

This means that 38,000,000 dollars are distributed by this one industry to your neighbors.

Your neighbors spend this enormous sum in New England.

Think what this means for YOUR business!

Send your children to school wearing Black Cat Stockings. Note how much longer they wear. See how little darning they need.

The heels are extended, the toes and knees are reinforced so they give double the wear of ordinary stockings. They are made especially for children who are "hard on stockings."

We specialize on Black Cat because we know they give the wear and satisfaction you demand. The makers of Black Cat Stockings have been making them for 30 years. They certainly have learned in that time how to make stockings that wear.

Intentions of marriage have been filed by John F. Moore of 15 Eaton street, Winchester, and Miss Katherine A. O'Donnell of 32 Sherman place, Woburn.

Mr. Hermann Dudley Murphy, the well known artist of this town, while sketching on Marblehead Beach, was ordered off by a landowner. Mr. Murphy, it is said, proposes to allow the supposed owner of the beach to arrest him and fight out in the court the question whether this land to the water's edge is private or public property.

Mr. and Mrs. O. C. Sanborn and sons Caleb and Jack have returned from Nova Scotia, where the boys have been camping during the summer.

NEWSY PARAGRAPHS.

There was a good ball game Labor Day morning on Manchester Field, the Old Timers vs. Laundry Drivers, the score being 5 to 2 in favor of the Old Timers. Batteries were Richardson and Hanlon, Fitzgerald and Demming. As usual, "Shorty" Richardson for the O. T.'s pitched a good game and Fitzgerald showed up good. The game was called in the sixth inning so that all hands could see the town team play at Woburn.

The family of H. F. Dearborn have just returned from West Windham, N. H., where they have spent the past two months on their farm.

The local schools open next Monday. If you have a boy we would remind you that we are well stocked with boys' blouses, shirts, belts, hats, caps, corduroy, blue serge and khaki pants, underwear, night robes, pajamas, leather stockings, school bags, athletic shirts, running pants laboratory coats, etc. Tel. 352-W. Dr. B. T. Church and Mrs. Church arrived home Wednesday after a vacation of two months at Sakonnet Point, R. I.

The wonderful increase in the business of the Home Market Co. is doubtless due to the fact that people realize that it gives attention to details. Special attention is given to purchasing for their customers, the very best of beef, lamb, and fresh killed poultry. They make a specialty of fancy cuts, such as frenched chops, filets, crown roasts and fancy steak. A trial will convince you. The delivery is the best.

It is expected that the above numbers will be increased by about 100 late comers. These will have some work to make up. This is difficult for pupils and involves extra work for teachers.

General Notes.

The Kindergarten in the Prince has been placed in one of the lower rear rooms. This seems better adapted to the Kindergarten than the one heretofore used on the same floor as it is larger and more cheerful. This Kindergarten begins its sessions at 9 a. m., the one in the Chapin begins at 8.30 a. m.

The Progress Class has begun with every prospect of a delightful and profitable year. In this class an attempt will be made so far as may be possible to adapt the instruction to the pupil and to make it interesting and educative in the broadest sense.

The high school lunch counter in charge of Miss Jennie P. Clement, teacher of cooking, and the girls who are taking cooking, has scored an initial success.

The new course for girls in the High School, Household Arts, has

Miss Margaret E. Comerford, Supervisor of Physical Training, for the remainder of this month will instruct groups of high school girls in swimming at the bathing beach on Upper Mystic Lake. These pupils with Miss Comerford will have the exclusive use of the beach from 2.30 to 5.30 every afternoon.

Mr. Willard C. Hatch, Harvard 1914, director of athletics, will have charge of the track and gymnasium work of the high school boys and Mr. Donald R. Hanson, Harvard 1914, will coach the high school football team.

The sloyd and sewing classes are heavier than usual. This work is developing so that more teachers will soon be needed.

MARSHALL H. DUTCH.

Respected Citizen and Former Selectman Passes Away.

Mr. Marshall H. Dutch, an old resident of this town, died at the age of sixty-eight at his summer home at North Barnstead, N. H., Monday morning. Though he had been in poor health for the past few years, the end came with unexpected swiftness.

Mr. Dutch moved from Portland, Me., to Winchester in 1884 and always took an active interest in the development of the town and its government. For many years he engaged in the grain business in Somerville, and retiring from that became engaged in the real estate and insurance business in this town and Boston, building up a lucrative and flourishing trade.

He served on the Board of Selectmen for three years, 1892-3-4, and as chairman of the Board, as well as on various town committees. He was for a considerable period an active worker in the Unitarian Church, having at one time been its treasurer.

He is survived by his widow, who was Miss Charlotte Harriett Hill of Hampden, Me., and by his children, Herbert W. Dutch, principal of the High School at Montclair, N. J., Miss Marjorie F. Dutch, and Mr. Charles F. Dutch, counsel for this town.

The services, which were conducted by Rev. William I. Lawrence, were held from the residence of Mr. Charles F. Dutch, 4 Brooks street, Wednesday forenoon at eleven o'clock. The interment was in Wildwood cemetery.

The following letter was sent by the Board of Selectmen to Mrs. Dutch: September 9th, 1913. Mrs. Marshall H. Dutch, Winchester, Mass.

Madam:—The Selectmen of Winchester have learned with sorrow of the death of your respected husband, who was formerly a Selectman of this town; and they wish at this time to express to you and your family their deep sympathy in your bereavement. Those who have for so long observed your beautiful life together feel that it must now be a great solace to you that you and your husband were spared to each other for so many years.

As a mark of their respect for Mr. Dutch's memory the Selectmen have ordered that the flags of the Town be placed at half staff on the day of the funeral.

With assurance also of my own deep sympathy, I am,

Very respectfully yours,

Frank R. Miller,

Clerk of the Board.

CHAPIN PLAYGROUND.

The Chapin Playground, which was recently closed, has given much pleasure and profit to the children who frequented it during the summer days and its director, Mrs. Nellie F. Walker, with her assistant, Miss E. J. McPhie, can feel well satisfied with the good discipline maintained and the love and respect they have inspired in their charges.

Besides the amusements provided for the children by means of swings, slide, sandboxes and various games, folk dancing and a Little Housekeepers' class have been started for the girls, and some of the boys have been busy learning to cane-seat chairs, while others who have learned the art have been earning money by re-seating chairs which have been sent to the playground for that purpose. In all over thirty chairs have been cane-seated this summer, and it was very gratifying to see how faithfully and earnestly the boys worked.

This playground is under the auspices of the Fortnightly, the Club appropriating a sum of money each year for its maintenance.

MOTHERS' ASSOCIATION.

Next Thursday, September 17, the Mothers' Association will hold its first meeting of the fall in the High School at 3 p. m.

Mrs. Schuyler F. Herron will give a talk which will be of practical interest to all mothers on "Some things our Government is doing for Home-makers." Questions in regard to school matters should be brought to this meeting, and new members will be cordially welcomed.

The usual social hour will follow the meeting, and little children will be cared for, if the mothers cannot conveniently leave them at home.

MISS HODGDON ILL AT PORT CLYDE.

Miss Christina Hodgdon, daughter of Rev. Frank W. Hodgdon, pastor of the First Congregational Church, is seriously ill at the summer home of her parents at Port Clyde, Maine, with typhoid fever. Rev. Hodgdon returned to Winchester last week to take up his duties at the parish, but was summoned to Maine the first of the week owing to his daughter's illness. If her condition permits he will return home to conduct the services this Sunday.

A later report is that Miss Hodgdon is not ill with typhoid fever, that she is improving and that it is hoped to bring her home next week.

SUPT. OF STREETS SPATES MAY GO TO MALDEN.

Prominent Citizens Ask That He Be Kept in Winchester.

The city of Malden is looking for a superintendent of streets, and Mr. Henry A. Spates, superintendent of streets of this town, has been applied for for the position. Although no official action has been taken by Malden it is understood that his application is looked upon with favor by that city.

Supt. Spates receives a salary from Winchester of $1,500 a year. Malden pays $2,300. This town has as yet taken no action in the matter, although it is understood that the Board of Selectmen received a delegation of prominent citizens Monday evening who appeared in behalf of Mr. Spates, and strongly urged that he be retained at an increase of salary.

Mr. Spates states that he has made application for the position at Malden. He says that the salary paid by this town has been, he felt, less than the position was worth. He says that he informed the Selectmen last year that should opportunity present itself for a more lucrative position elsewhere he would probably accept it.

He says that he much prefers to remain in Winchester, that he likes the town and has given his best thought and work to securing for it the best streets and service of any town in this vicinity. On the other hand the work has increased enormously with the rapid growth of the town, and personal considerations which urged Mr. Spates to continue here have been removed, so that now he feels that he is free to accept any advance in his position which is offered.

It is understood that the Selectmen took no action in the matter on Monday evening, having received no official notice regarding the matter. It is very probable that the matter will again come before the Board next week.

SURPRISED AND GIVEN WATCH.

Miss Hodge of Pond Street Was The Happy Recipient.

Miss Veronica Hodge was the most surprised person in Winchester Wednesday evening when a host of her friends called at her home at 9 Pond street. While away from the house on a nearby errand the preparations were made by her callers so that when she returned she was met with an undreamed of surprise. She was completely taken back and was unable to comprehend what was actually going to happen until presented with a handsome lady's gold watch and chain, with her monogram engraved upon it. The presentation speech was made by the young lady's sister, Miss Katherine Hodge. After she had recovered sufficiently from her astonishment, Miss Veronica gave her thanks to the guests in a few happy words after which the evening was spent in games, vocal and instrumental selections. Those who tendered their talent consisted of Misses Katherine Hodge and Lora Given, and Messrs. Howard Tart and Bertine Winchester. Dancing was enjoyed. A dainty and bountiful collation was served by the hostess and the evening was one long to be remembered.

Among those present were: Mrs. Edward Glidden of Lynn, Mrs. Neil O'Donnell of Lynn, Miss Mary Ganev of Somerville, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Tart, Mr. and Mrs. John Hodge and the Misses Katherine Doherty, Katherine O'Donnell, Josephine Rooney, Lora Given, Josephine Ring, Veronica and Susan Hodge, Katherine Bregan, Sarah Brogan, Mildred Ganev, Hilda and Elvira Anderson, Helen Doherty, Mary Lynch, Reid Young, Mary Hanev, Alice and Harriet Hodge, Helen Coleman, Margaret Coleman, and Margaret Cahill. The Messrs. Joseph Walsh, Edward Begley, Lawrence O'Connor, John Mitchell, James Daly, William Greenan, John Foley, William Daly, Earl Coleman, Eugene Collins, Earl Bryant, Walter Sullivan, Edward Verneville, Frank McKinnon, Carl Hodge, William and Edward Moore, John Flanagan, Edward Anderson, Fred Roche, James McGovern, John Griffin, William Mulcahey, Roland, Marshall, William Murray, Peter Bonica of Lynn, William Callahan, Charles Murphy, James Corduck, Michael Curran, James Hoy, John Hanson, Martin Foley, Arthur Danahey and Bertine Winchester.

METCALF DISCOVERS COMET.

Approaching Earth Rapidly, and Will Be Nearest Sun September 14.

Rev. Joel H. Metcalf of the Unitarian Church has returned from his vacation at South Hero, Vt., and brings news of the discovery of another comet. The discovery was made about 8.30 on the evening of September 1 while he was scanning the heavens.

As described by Mr. Metcalf, the comet is of the ninth magnitude and, being circumpolar, is always visible above the horizon, but not, however, with the naked eye. It is almost directly under the North Star and is approaching the earth very rapidly. It will be nearest the sun September 14. It was discovered by other watchers in Europe and in other parts of America on September 2 according to reports. Rev. Mr. Metcalf therefore claims to have seen it a day ahead of the others. The orbit of the new comet has been computed by Prof. Crawford of Berkeley, Calif.

FIRST FROST WEDNESDAY.

The first frost of the season was reported Wednesday morning when a heavy white frost occurred through the valley. Thermometers about town recorded from 34 to 40 early in the morning.

THE UNITARIAN CHURCH AND SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Will Open Sunday After Two Months' Vacation.

The Unitarian Church and Sunday School will open next Sunday after a vacation of two months. The minister, the Rev. Joel H. Metcalf, will preach, his subject being the "Utility of Religion", showing the importance of the religious spirit for the higher life of the individual and the Nation. The Sunday School will also hold its first session. Instead of the regular lessons which do not begin until October 1st, the Minister will give an illustrated talk on the Life of David, one of the course on the Heroes of Israel. The two following Sundays talks will be given on Elijah and Paul. These addresses are illustrated with beautiful sets of lantern slides from Underwood & Underwood, the great illustrators.

A cordial invitation is extended to all not having other church affiliations to join with us in our common faith and work. This church has no creed. It cordially invites to its working fellowship any who, while differing from us in belief are in sympathy with our aims and practical purpose. It is one of a body of churches which accepts the religion of Jesus, holding, according to his teaching, that practical religion is summed up in Love to God and Love to Man. Its ideal is the cultivation of the religious spirit in an atmosphere of freedom.

AUTO TRUCK AND FIRE TEAM IN COLLISION.

Narrow Escape From a Serious Accident to Men and Horses.

The big auto truck of Kelley & Hawes was in collision with the pair of horses of the ladder truck of the fire department pulling the exercising wagon on Main street yesterday morning. The wagon was badly damaged and the truck body also was somewhat smashed. First reports had it that the horses were badly injured, but examination revealed that only one horse was hurt, and that only slightly scratched.

The fire wagon was driven by fireman Owen Flaherty. He passed through the center and let the horses out for a run, going up the right side of Main street towards Woburn. Just as the team reached the Whitney dump the big auto truck came out of that place from behind the house adjoining, driven by Elias Waldron. When Waldron saw the approaching team he immediately stopped his truck it blocking the street. The team struck it fairly before Flaherty could even attempt to swing to one side.

The pole of the wagon and its running gear was badly damaged. The auto had several traces broken and the end of the wagon pole went through one side. It was a very fortunate escape from a more serious accident.

A PLEASANT DANCE.

Harry and Celina Cox Entertain at Their Summer Home.

Miss Celina and Mr. Harry Cox gave a very charming dance at their summer home at Waveland, Mass., on Thursday, September fourth. The house was artistically decorated with gold and red, the entire color scheme being yellow. Among those present were Misses Mary Manning of Lynn, Norma Bonet and Hazel Smart of Winchester, Marguerite Newton of New York, Cornelia Head of Brookline, Dorothy Hannigan of Braintree, Marie Daly of Green Hill, Lydia Cook of Portland, Marian and Dorothy Elston, Lillian Burk, Grace Flynn, Claire Lehey, Bella Whalen Dorothy Nolan and Marguerite Elston of Waveland, Messrs. Howard Heppach of Chicago, Robinson Cook of Portland, Rodman Leymour of Lynn, Kenneth Hannigan of Braintree, Norman Small of Cambridge, William Fallon of Nantasket, and James McKeough, Charles Malloy, William Harenden, Arthur Flemming, Le Mont Brine, William Sweeney, Giles Barney, Charles Rogers, Thomas O'Connor and Thomas Keegan of Waveland. Supper was served at eleven and dancing continued until morning.

BEST SELECTED NINE HOLES.

Miss Edelfson Had Best Net, Miss Edgett Best Gross Score.

The ladies' golf at the Winchester Country Club Tuesday afternoon was in charge of Mrs. F. L. Hunt and Mrs. R. B. Wiggin, being the best selected nine holes, three-quarters handicap. Miss Katherine Edgett finished with the best gross score with 44, and Miss Helen Edelfson had the best net with 38.

SELECTMEN'S MEETING.

Action Taken Regarding Through Cars to Harvard Square.

The Board met at 7.30 p. m., all present. Mr. Pike reported a conference with Mr. Goff of the Bay State Street Railway Company, in regard to through car service to the Harvard Square Terminal, and more frequent car service, and recommended that the Clerk endeavor to arrange with the Clerk of the Joint Board of the Boston Transit Commission and the Public Utilities Commission sitting jointly, to have the request of the Selectmen of Winchester for more frequent car service through Winchester to Arlington and through car service through Winchester and Arlington over the tracks of the Bay State and Boston Elevated Street Railway Companies to Harvard Square Terminal considered at the next hearing and that Mr. Dutch be asked to take charge of the matter for the Selectmen, and it was so voted.

Mr. Andrew J. Solis, Chairman of the Town Committee of the Winchester Progressive Party appeared before the Board and urged action on his letter of September 2nd, in regard to the appointment of Ballot Clerks. The matter was discussed at length with him but no further action was taken.

The death of Marshall H. Dutch, a former Selectman of this town, was reported and it was voted to send a suitable letter expressing the sympathy of this Board to the family of the deceased; the Custodian of the Town Hall being instructed to display the flags of the Town at half staff on the day of the funeral.

The Superintendent of Streets reported the cost of oiling Pond street recently finished to have been $243.45 and the Clerk was instructed to send a bill for 25 per cent of this amount to the Middlesex County Commissioners in accordance with their letter to this Board of August 1st.

The Committee on Ways and Bridges reported on the petition presented August 11th, for a tar concrete sidewalk on Elm street westerly side about 75 feet, that the westerly side of the street had a concrete sidewalk for a short distance from Mt. Vernon street but the balance of the sidewalk was gravel. The construction of the walk would be an isolated piece having at each end a gravel walk and under these circumstances the Committee recommended that the sidewalk petitioned for be constructed only when a walk the entire length of the street was built. The report was accepted and the Clerk instructed to forward a notice of the same to the petitioner.

A report was received from the Town Engineer in regard to the construction of a tar concrete sidewalk on Washington street abutting the premises of Augustus E. Scott, and it was voted to construct the same.

A letter was received asking that the tar concrete walk on Winthrop street from Washington street to Hillside avenue on the northerly side be repaired. Referred to the Committee on Ways and Bridges.

A letter was received asking that a granite sidewalk be laid in front of 30 Wedgemere avenue, the same to be carried around the corner onto Foxcroft road about 194 feet, the cost of the same to be levied as an assessment. Referred to the Committee on Ways and Bridges.

The Town Engineer reported on the cost of laying granolithic sidewalks on Park avenue southerly side and it was voted that in the opinion of this Board public convenience and necessity require the grading, constructing and covering with granolithic the southerly sidewalk on Park avenue from the easterly end of lot of Ida F. Dickinson to the easterly line of the lot of Margaret E. Pecker and the northerly sidewalk of said street from the westerly end of the lot of Marion A. Fay to the corner of Highland avenue.

The Town Engineer reported with estimate of cost of laying granolithic sidewalk on the southerly line of Lincoln street from Washington street to Highland avenue. The matter was discussed and the Town Engineer was requested to furnish a similar estimate covering the northerly side of Lincoln street.

A letter was received concerning the sidewalks on Crescent road and Mason street and referred to the Committee on Ways and Bridges.

A letter was received from the Metropolitan Park Commission in response to the matters referred to it by this Board stating that the matter of shade tree on Mystic Valley Parkway opposite Lakeview road and connection of said roadway with the Parkway would be given early consideration by their Board; also that the extension of sidewalks at Lloyd and Walnut streets to connect with the Mystic Valley Parkway had been referred to the Superintendent of the Middlesex Fells Division with instructions to extend the sidewalks as recommended by this Board, also that the removal of shrubs at the corner of Crescent road and the Parkway be attended to.

Voted, that in the opinion of this Board public convenience and necessity require the grading, constructing and covering with granolithic the sidewalk abutting the property of Nana M. Hayward at the corner of Crescent road and Mason street extending to Highland avenue and that the maple tree standing in the sidewalk on Mason street near the corner of Crescent road be and it is hereby ordered removed.

SATURDAY'S BALL GAME.

Winchester Will Play the Strong Wakefield Team.

Saturday, September 13th, Winchester will play Wakefield. This team, as all the fans know, has the reputation of being one of the best teams in this section and will probably be strengthened for the game with Winchester, as it seems to be the policy with all teams to get extra men when they play us. The Woburn team was trying hard to get this game from Wakefield, but the Wakefield Manager much preferred to play here, so this is where we put one "over" on Woburn.

Now about Woburn, we have tried in every way to arrange another game but they surely are afraid to play us. Manager LeDuc offered them a 60 per cent winner's or a 40 per cent loser's share of the receipts, and if they were any sort of sports they would take that up as it is more than they can get in any ordinary game in Woburn. The manager of the Woburn team is not very anxious about the game, but he does not represent the "fans" in Woburn, from what we hear from all the good ones up there, as they seem to desire one very much.

WILL ERECT FOURTEEN HOUSES.

Mr. George C. Ogden, the well known builder, who has already erected over half a hundred of Winchester's beautiful homes, commenced excavations this week for a group of fourteen new houses on Manchester road. This new street runs from Mystic avenue to the Parkway, just opposite the lower end of the playground. Seven houses will be erected on each side of the thoroughfare.

NEWSY PARAGRAPHS.

Mr. Frank Payne, son of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Payne of Washington street, and now residing in Chicago, Ill., was in town for a few days the first of the week with his

YOUR AFFAIRS AND MINE

Recently The Spectator had something to say upon the subject "Winchester Beautiful." Whatever may develop in the way of concerted action in the advancement of the town "beautiful" idea, it remains for the people of Winchester as individuals to add a note of beauty to their own little environment. There is contagion in the first move for the artistic and the slightly that soon sweetens the atmosphere of an entire neighborhood. The dream of the world all through the ages has been to evolve the ideal town, and though we may fall far short of our Utopian visions, we still may have a town to which we can point with pride. For some reason "back yards" are not productive of pretty speculation ordinarily, but they are a good beginning for "town beautiful" work. It is a real inspiration to view from a rear window the cheery brightness of a green lawn, dotted with flowers; and a Winchesterite must be utterly devoid of pride to permit a yard to remain an unsightly spot, set apart as a mere refuse heap, when one's neighbors are attempting to exemplify a love of the beautiful. Perhaps an unsightly billboard may be a disfigurement. As individuals we cannot remove it, but possibly we might influence an improvement. Perhaps there is an ugly fence that could be transformed into a thing of beauty by a vine. Possibly in the accumulation of paper and bits of rubbish there is a blemish that could be remedied. Individual opportunity does not seem far-reaching, but the influence of just one conspicuous demonstration of civic pride is like an arrow shot in the air—it fell to earth; I know not where. It is not civic pride alone that prompts the call for improvement. Bareness and ugliness are dwarfing to individual life. It is pathetic to see a child struggling to get a bit of pleasure out of a barren stretch of ground; it is tuneless and dull. But suppose that same space is seeded and glorified with even the commonest flowers—the child can not help a sense of beauty growing with the rest of nature; it gives him something to watch, to tend, to love. We may look to our "town fathers" for the large accomplishments, but at our own door lies the burden of responsibility for the vital touch that must be given the "town beautiful." Every good citizen here in Winchester should see that his own little plot of ground hangs out its flag of loyalty to the wave of improvement that is widespread throughout the American nation. We are not responsible for what is done, or left undone elsewhere.

The Spectator is an ardent bird lover and is genuinely grieved every time he sees a woman wearing bird plumage of any kind. He wonders how many women in Winchester and elsewhere ever give thought to the wholesale slaughter of God's beautiful creatures all the time going on to meet fashion's demand. According to a Consular Report upon The Spectator's desk there were shipped from the port of Ciudad, Bolivar, Venezuela, nearly five tons of wild bird plumage in a single year. A United States steamer sailing to Linansky Island, Hawaiian Islands, to put a stop to the depredation of Japanese poachers, arrived to find that 335 cases of plumage, representing the slaughter of 300,000 birds, had already been secured. It was reported at a low estimate, 20,000 skins of birds of paradise were annually exported from North and West Dutch New Guinea, and that one millinery dealer received 12,000 skins, chiefly of one species. Is it any wonder that this race is doomed, and that several species are already nearly extinct?

Like the majority of men who earn their living by the pen The Spectator does not own an automobile and has only ridden in one three times in his life. Neither does The Spectator own a horse, but he thinks a great deal more of the horse than he does of the automobile, and if some kind person were to place at his disposal an automobile or horse he would choose the horse by all means. Horses are placing mankind daily under everlasting obligations to them; but how cruelly and thoughtlessly are they repaid by those who are most indebted to them. A horse is a noble animal, patient, kind-hearted, self-sacrificing, willing to serve his master till he falls exhausted, uncomplaining, a lover of kind treatment, and who is willing to work a whole lifetime with no other compensation than his bed and board. Many people still use the horse and it is for the special benefit of these that The Spectator reproduces the following short article from "The Horse World":

Of the many things which make the daily life of a horse miserable, two are blinders and a tight check rein, the worst part of a horse's harness. Very many people believe that they are part and parcel of a horse and that he would not be a horse without them.

The majority of horses could readily dispense with blinders, and all could if they had never been invented. Blinders were first used by a nobleman in England to hide a defect on his horse's head, and later were found excellent locations for the displaying of his coat-of-arms.

A horse's head was never intended for blinders, for his eyes are set in his head that he can see behind him without turning his head and, of course the blinders deprive him of seeing the very things he should see for his own safety as well as his driver's. A horse's eye is a beautiful object, and it is a shame to cover it.

Whenever I see a man driving a horse without blinders I always feel like stopping him and shaking hands with him. A horse's head is the best part of him and should have on it as little harness as possible.

Another instrument of torture to a horse is the tight check-rein. It is responsible for boll evil, abscesses, sprung knees, paralysis and disorders of the brain and muscles. It spoils his appearance and detracts from his free and graceful movements.

"I'll take her down a bit." This is what The Spectator overheard one woman say to another the other evening. We all have our beautiful dreams; sometimes they come in the quiet night hours, ungoverned by will power; again, they are the happy, gloriously tinted day dreams, whose wondrous "ships at sea" whose whereabouts and precious freight are known just to ourselves. And when the awakening comes! Do we want ours to be the jarring hand that rudely snatches a happy wanderer in Utopian fields back to his sighs and stern realities? Yet that is what we mean, no more, no less; when we propose to "take her down". It is not alone unworthy, but narrowing, and most affects the perpetrator. Suppose it is a foolish, a mistaken dream, even a ridiculous dream. Let the dreamer dream, and in the end we will be the happier for it. Sharpness of tongue, sarcasm, bitterness, only clog the wheels, and in the last analysis the sarcastic woman who never loses an opportunity to "get even" no matter what the cost, pays for her license. In point of fact, she may be right many times; people need to be "taken down"; need to be disciplined, need to be smoothed and softened. But the greatest need of human lives is for friends, friends who will speak a kindly word. We are not likely to regret the pleasant-ness we have uttered; but if we stop long enough to reckon the "digs," the ugly little speeches and the efforts to "get even," we will have a few hours when pride will receive a shocking fall—and it should. It was George Eliot who said, "What do we live for, if it is not to make life less difficult for others?" And meanwhile, in making life less difficult, we are gaining friends, not enemies. We may soothe our disturbed spirits by saying we do not care for the friendship of certain people here, and perhaps we do not covet their active friendship; but we long for the good will of everybody, even prefer to hear the friendly purr of the family cat.

THE NEW FORM OF TICKET.

Can Be Used By One or More Passengers.

The fact that the Boston & Maine R. R. is to issue a new form of 12, 25 and 50-cent tickets on suburban lines has given rise to an impression that these tickets can be used by only one person. This report is denied however, by George W. Bishop of the Mass. Public Service Commission and assurance is given commuters here and elsewhere that they and their families or companions, may ride on the same ticket.

The new form of ticket is to be a card, to be punched by the conductor, instead of the old book of coupon tickets. The principal reason for changing the style is to prevent passengers from using coupons other than those which come with the cover they hold and to effectually do away with attempts to exercise a stop-over privilege. It has been a common custom for a person having an empty cover of one number to show it when presenting as the fare a coupon from some other book.

If a man and wife or any two (or more) persons are riding together, the conductor will simply punch two or more places in the new card ticket instead of accepting two or more coupons from the old-style book tickets.

The restrictions on the ticket will read: "It is good only for continuous passage between points named hereon or between intermediate points on passenger trains advertised, at the time it is presented, to make stops for passengers traveling between such points." No stop-over will be permitted.

POLITICAL NOTES.

There is not much doing at the present time in politics in Winchester and the indications are that this will be manifested at the primaries. This should not be so, as a number of important offices are to be filled. Not much of an effort is required to attend the primary as the polls are to be open the greater part of the day.

There promises to be a contest for the Democratic nomination for representative in the 27th Middlesex representative district, which includes the town of Winchester and Wards 3 and 6, known as West Medford. Ex-Chairman John Holland of the Democratic town committee of Winchester, who was the Democratic candidate last year, and President Thomas J. Barrett of the Wilson club of Winchester are both seeking the nomination. Mr. W. F. Prime, the present Republican representative from the district, will also be a candidate.

Winchester also has an aspirant for the Democratic nomination for senator from this, the 6th Middlesex senatorial district. Whitfield L. Tuck, known best as "the original Bryan man" of Massachusetts, is seeking the Democratic senatorial nomination against Representative Charles Dean of Wakefield.

On the Republican side Senator W. B. Fay of West Medford is unsupported for the Republican nomination, but he will be opposed for election by City Solicitor Edward E. Elder, who is the Progressive candidate for senator.

FIRE ALARM WIRES CROSSED.

The fire alarm whistle went on a strike Monday. Commencing early in the morning and continuing through the day it blew impossible boxes at various and unexpected intervals. At first it was thought that there really was a fire, and that possibly two alarms had been sounded at once or some other accident occurred, but as the whistle and bell continued to sound it was generally accepted that a test was being made of the system. The firemen however, were as much in the dark as the residents, and a close inspection of the system failed to reveal any cause for the crossing of the wires, which it undoubtedly was.

By evening the whistle failed to arouse even any interest, and after a last series of the blows late in the afternoon it took a vacation. It is thought that possibly some one trimming trees or working alongside the alarm wires crossed them in some way, which caused the trouble.

GEO. L. SCHUBARTH SAVES TWO LIVES.

His Modesty Prevents Giving Details of His Bravery.

September 4th, 1913.

Editor of the Star:—Dear Sir:—In the belief that your fellow citizens will take a sympathetic interest in saving of two lives by Mr. Geo. L. Schubarth, 26 Lloyd street, Winchester, on Sept. 1st, at Rocky Point, R. I., I beg to enclose an article from "The Providence Daily Journal," the 2nd inst.

The modesty of Mr. Schubarth furnished meagre details at the time of his brave act, accomplished under difficult and hazardous conditions. Mr. Schubarth is the purchasing agent for Lockwood, Greene & Co., architects and engineers for industrial plants at 60 Federal street, Boston. Yours sincerely, N. G. Peterson. Arlington Heights, Mass. Sept. 4th, 1913.

The Providence Journal in its account of the accident said:

Hamilton had gone to Highland Beach in the morning to visit friends and his brother, who was staying at the camp grounds, a short distance away. Shortly after noon the young man went to Longmeadow, where he met four friends, and a row to Rocky Point was proposed.

A change of tide had kicked up an ugly chop on the surface of the bay, and the party had rowed but a short distance when the boat began to fill. Three of the party attempted to bail it out, but the heavy load in the skiff and the rough water made this impossible.

A moment later, when about a half-mile from shore, the skiff began to fill, and, under the weight of five men, sank deeply in the water. All of the party were thrown out, and the boat capsized. Walter Connolly, 24, and Charles Booth, 24, unwilling to attempt to swim ashore, clung to the bottom of the skiff.

They managed to keep their hold until George Schubarth, who lives at Grant's Station, reached them with another boat and took them aboard. In the meantime, Hamilton, with the other two men in the party, Harold Wheeler, 22, and William Davenport, 20, had started to swim toward the Warwick Club. All wore bathing suits.

The three swam for some distance when Hamilton shouted to his companions that he was tiring and that he could not last. They, themselves, did not have strength enough to go to his assistance, and consequently they called to him to keep on as long as he could.

Suddenly Hamilton sank once, but came up again and struggled weakly to keep his head above water.

A minute later Wheeler and Davenport looked around and found that he had gone down. His companions reached shore safely.

MORSE-O'DONNELL.

At the parochial residence in Woburn last Sunday evening Miss Katherine A. O'Donnell and Mr. John F. Morse were married by Rev. J. Keegan. The bride is the daughter of Martin O'Donnell of Sherman Place, Woburn. Mr. Morse is from Winchester.

The couple were attended by Miss Winifred O'Donnell, sister of the bride and a cousin of the groom acted as best man. Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's father. Mr. and Mrs. Morse will make their home in North Billerica.

AREOPLANE NOT TO ALIGHT ON PLAYGROUND.

An effort was made to secure permission this week for aviator McGrath of Woburn to fly from that city to Winchester and alight on the lower end of the playground tomorrow afternoon during the ball game. Mr. McGrath was seen by those who thought the novel event would prove interesting and stated that he would be pleased to make the flight. When Patrick Dempsey interviewed the park commissioners how ever he was informed that the feature would not be permitted, as it would endanger the lives of the spectators at the game, and so it was abandoned.

DRINKING FOUNTAIN AT POND STREET.

The drinking fountain for horses, says a subscriber, should be placed at Pond street, if such a fountain must be placed within the town limits on Cambridge street. The contention is, that with fountains now at the Town Hall square, Symmes corner, Arlington centre and Cambridge and Lexington streets, Woburn, this is really the most suitable place, and the most needed place.

John Curtis Nichols died last Friday morning at his home, 5 Burlington street, Woburn, after an illness of several months. Mr. Nichols was one of those whose birthday observances were few, he having been born Feb. 29, 1828. His native place was Stoneham. He was the son of Tracy C. and Louisa (Kimball) Nichols. For many years he was of the firm of Crowder, Cobb & Nichols of Winchester, manufacturers of piano cases. Mr. Nichols was unmarried, and had been a resident of Woburn for the major portion of his long life. He is survived by three brothers, Stillman of Winchester, Charles A. and Frank C. of Woburn, and a sister, Mrs. Sarah Munroe of Woburn. Funeral services will be held at his home, Monday at 2:30.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Himes returned to their home in Passaic, N. J., last week from their summer home at Portland harbor. Mr. Himes had his passage engaged on the ill-fated Bar Harbor Express which was wrecked at North Haven, but yielding to a disinclination to travel on the New Haven at night during the rush season, he changed his plans and went through by day. His sleeper was the one in which most of the deaths occurred.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry J. Winde and Mrs. W. A. Snow left on Monday for Saunderson, R. I., where they will remain until the 19th.

The extensive alterations to the Old Peoples Home are about completed, and will soon be ready for the reception of the inmates. The building has been given an attractive coat of white paint.

Mr. and Mrs. George A. Weld have returned to their home on Sanborn street after spending the summer at The Cliff, Swampscott.

Miss Asunta Michelini, soprano at the Unitarian Church, has been spending six weeks at Buck's Harbor, Maine.

Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Kelley of Fletcher street have returned from their cottage "We're Here," at Harwich this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Corey of the Parkway sailed on Wednesday from New York for a six weeks' trip to Europe.

William Parkman Lodge, A. F. & A. M., held its first fall communication Tuesday evening. The degrees were conferred on several candidates.

The Unitarian Church Choir consisting of Miss Michelini, Miss Wessells, Mr. Hodson and Mr. Shufelt under the direction of the organist Mrs. Lockman, resumed their regular rehearsals in Boston last week.

NEWSY PARAGRAPHS.

It is advisable for people to take precautions against thefts by keeping houses locked, and guard buildings as much as possible. It is cheaper to hire a safe deposit box at the Winchester Trust Company, for instance, to keep valuable jewels and papers in than to run the risk of hiding them in the house. A thief with an axe has little sympathy for the polish on a bureau drawer if he considers that valuables are therein contained.

Mr. Frank Chapman of Hillcrest, who has been seriously ill, for the past eight weeks with rheumatic fever, was able to go to Boston Monday for the first time. It will be a month or more before he engages actively in business.

NEWSY PARAGRAPHS.

George H. Carter of Winchester, town clerk, overseer of the poor and clerk of the Board of Assessors, has hit upon a new scheme to advertise Winchester as an attractive place for home-seekers. It is a map in outline, which shows all the adjacent places. The tax rate of each town and city is given in large type, and this proves that Winchester has by far the lowest figures. The moral is obvious.—Boston Herald.

And yet we have heard one or two persons disapprove of it because it would boom the town. Well, if it will bring desirable families here, the scheme is a good thing.

APPLES IN NEW ENGLAND.

Proper Care of Trees Ensures Big Crops.

Two or three years ago a man bought a farm not far from Boston on which there were about 400 Baldwin apple trees. They were about 25 years old, and had been conscientiously neglected. They were in bad condition and the new owner debated whether he would try to have them doctored up or cut them down. He was strongly inclined for the axe, but he relented enough to consult a tree doctor as to the initial cost for necessary surgery and tonics. The tree man said about $700 to start. The owner declared for the axe. But there was a bit of a parley, and at length in a spirit of bravado, the owner offered the tree man all the first crop of apples after treatment and half of the two succeeding crops, in lieu of a fee in cash. The tree man accepted. He put about $800 into the orchard at once. It was April. He sold about 1,000 barrels of No. 1 apples that fall, filled the owners cellar with seconds, made a lot of cider, and had all the apples his firm could use, besides giving away many lots. He got back about two dollars for every one he spent, and had about two half yearly crops coming to him. He turned the orchard back to the owner, having demonstrated what proper treatment will do for neglected New England orchards.

This is a sample. I could go on and fill a page with just such stories all true, and all verifiable from data I have on file. And then I would not have begun to tell the tale about the apple possibilities of New England. The West or the Northwest have nothing that can compare with the possibilities of New England—the proved, demonstrated possibilities—in the way of apple raising.

There is a reason. It is the land and the climate. God made New England the potential orchard of the world. The men of New England are beginning to realize what riches there are in rocky pastures that they have hated to have assessed at a few dollars per acre. The scientific reasons have been stated by the Department of Agriculture, and by many experts. I have not space to go into the matter except to say that it is the rocks of New England that make the apple land. The rocks have made nearly all of the New England land. But little of it has come from the other sections through the agency of water. But little of it has been blown from other regions by the winds. It has been slowly formed by the integration of the bottom rock formation that underlies New England. That rock has chemicals that are necessary for good apple culture. Therefore the native soil of most New England sections has in it the essential salts and chemicals that must be present in the best apples. The rest is easy. It is easy to supply the humus to make the trees grow. It is not practicable to supply the chemicals to the soil.

Thus it happens that while the famous apple regions of the West and Northwest produce beautiful apples, and apples having a fine flavor of their own but they cannot grow the New England apples with the New England flavor and character. The best apple that the West can produce cannot compare with the best New England apple. That is a truism that does not have to be argued. The New England Baldwin, Rhode Island Greening, Roxbury Russett, Hubbardston, Nonesuch, Old Nonesuch, Spy Porter, Gravenstien, Yellow Bellflower, Red Astrachan and a dozen others that can be mentioned do not come out of the West.

In New England also the crops far exceed those produced in the West. The trees are larger and it is a fact that they bear barrels to pecks from the Western trees. I remember a famous apple grower from the Middle West once told me with great pride, that his trees averaged a bushel each. Bless him! How small that quantity seems to us New Englanders who have been reckoning our apple crops in terms of barrels per tree. And in New England the trees live and bear for any kind of care, and many thousands have lived to that age, or longer, and borne good fruit every other year, and have had no care at all—just have not been cut down and burned in the kitchen stoves. The western apple tree has a very limited life in comparison.

But the proof of the pudding is in chewing the string, as they say in the New England classics, so let us see what has been done, by citing a few experiences. I won't give the names of towns, but I have them, every one, and can produce them if necessary. Your real New England farmer does not court personal notoriety. He likes to talk about his farm and what he does on and with it, but he hates to be pointed out in print. Facts are pretty good arguments. It is what the land really does, rather than what it may be supposed to be capable of doing that establishes the standing of a section for apples, po-atoes, wheat, cattle, hogs, or anything else.

Let me say, right here, that no one in New England is so foolish as to claim or think that there is not a lot of good apple land in other states—in New York, the Middle States, some parts of the South, etc. But they do not raise New England apples anywhere but in New England, and there is no other section where the possible profit is as large. Land values are very low in New England, and transportation is cheap. A car of apples from the farthest point in New England to market costs around $50, while from Oregon to market it costs about ten times that sum. In New England the good money for apples is now coming from renovated orchards—orchards rescued from poverty by a little common sense and cash. The State of Maine bought a farm with 3,100 apple trees. The first year's crop was 90 barrels. Eight hundred trees were cut down, and in 1912 three years after the purchase, the crop of apples totalled 2,200 barrels. At the Boston fruit show last year, one man showed 11 barrels of apples from one 20-year old tree. Another man showed 95 pounds from a seven year old tree (within a pound of two bushels, and twice the average yield of the big Kansas orchards). Another showed 129 pounds from a 9-year old tree, while another showed 7,505 apples for a 15-year old tree—which must have been nearly or quite 20 barrels.

A Massachusetts man had a lot of high woody Baldwin trees in his pasture, yielding but little fruit, and that little poor. He got an "Aggy" man to tell him what to do, spent $50 in pruning, but not a cent for fertilizers or spraying, and the second year sold 850 barrels and netted $1,500. A Vermont man gets 6,000 barrels of Rhode Island Greenings off of 100 acres, and sells them for better than $20,000. He has refused $50,000 for his farm, and no wonder. But a Rhode Island man goes Vermont several better, so far as money is concerned, as he gets 2,000 barrels of Greenings off of 40 acres, and sells them for from $6 to $8 per barrel. He has a cold-storage plant and keeps his apples for the top-notch market. A Maine man bought a near-abandoned farm for $650 and in two years sold one apple crop for $2,000. These trees were in pasture, and were not considered worth anything. A New Hampshire man with 553 trees sold $8,000 worth of apples during three years, practically all of this owing to pruning and spraying the trees in an old orchard. A Maine man took hold of a tree over 100 years old, 20 feet in circumference, pruned, sprayed and grafted it, and gets 20 barrels of fine fruit from it. A Rhode Island farm rented for $325 a year, and the tenant gave it up because he could not afford to pay the rent. Another man took it, and sells his apple crop on the trees for three times the former rent.

A man bought a Vermont farm with a 100-acre orchard, with 3,000 trees. This was a "fancy" farm, reckoned worth $50,000. The new owner quickly made it earn big interest on five times that valuation, and within a few years of buying had refused $100,000 for it. This reminds me of the more or less well-known Connecticut man who is said to have refused a million for his farm off which he annually takes a gross income of about $85,000. One of his crops is apples, the others are sheep (or rather lambs), hay and peaches. who has been a peach specialist, has gone into apples. When his 60-acre orchard was seven years old he got $6,000 for the fruit, some of the trees yielding four barrels. This is a very "tall" story, but it is strictly true, vouched for by one of the Amherst "Aggy" professors. The apples were fancy varieties and packed and sold as fancy fruit. A Vermont man came into possession of an orchard 50 years old on a rocky hillside that had never been plowed. Pruning and spraying brought the yield up to 10,000 bushels of perfect fruit, over 90 per cent. No. 1 stock, that was sold in New York for more than $12,000.

In Massachusetts a couple of years ago there was a contest for the best acre of apples, and the winner showed 227 barrels that sold for $715 with the net profit of $520. There is plenty of land in New England as good as this for apples that can be bought for $100 an acre; yes, there is plenty that can be bought for $25 an acre. I know one farm, almost abandoned, that is one of the very best natural fruit farms in the whole of New England that can be bought for a very small sum. It would make an energetic young man rich in twenty years.

Haste causes death and sorrow to many persons, not alone on steam trains but automobiles. Taking chances is sure to bring disaster at some time.

Attention is called to the notice of registrars of Voters in another column of this issue to those who wish to enroll themselves as voters previous to the primaries.

Every voter should do his own thinking when he attends the primary. Select the best possible candidate, for only by this way is it possible to get good representation. And that is what is surely needed at the present time.

There are about six candidates for county commissioner in the field. The man who will win out in all probably will be the candidate of the leading county officials. Unless endorsed by them there is not much hope of success for an aspirant for the office.

It is wrong for labor men to claim that the train men arrested for causing the New Haven wreck are used as scapegoats. Impartial investigators will thoroughly probe and fix the responsibility, and until they make their reports, blame should not be attached to the railroad or the men.

The printed notice seen in smoking cars of the Boston & Maine Railroad requesting people not to throw lighted cigars, cigarettes or matches out of the car windows has done a great deal in preventing forest fires. The railroad is to be commended for assisting in the prevention of the great waste of forest lands from fires.

The Republican victory in the third Maine district is indicative of a desire on the part of Republicans to get together. There is no good reason now why they should not, as all the existing slight differences can and should be settled in the party. Progressive men with progressive ideas has been the principal contention, and this now has been recognized by the Republican leaders to a great extent.

The ball game on Manchester Field last Saturday afternoon was one of the best ever seen in Winchester. All the players were first class, and the game kept the spectators on the anxious seat until the last half of the tenth inning. The town is fortunate in having such a team, and the managers who have done so much to entertain the stay-at-homes this summer are deserving of praise and encouragement.

Work has been started on the channel that is to connect the steamship pier at Onset with the new Cape Cod canal. It is understood that it will cost about $10,000 to complete this work, but when the canal is formally opened it is expected that a line of steamers will connect Onset and the other seashore resorts nearby with Boston. This is just another one of the score of possibilities that the Cape Cod canal suggests.

FLAHERTY'S TEAM FINISHED SECOND.

Charles H. Flaherty, the well known ball player, who has been catching for the St. John's team in the New Brunswick League this summer, returned to Winchester last week. He reports that his team finished the season in second place, notwithstanding the fact that they took the majority of their games with the winners. "Charlie" says he enjoyed the country and is in hopes of going back again next year. From various reports of the games of the St. John's team he made good behind the bat, and a number of the team's wins were due to his superior work.

VETERANS' PENSIONS.

Checks Must Not Be Forwarded to Other Postoffices.

Woburn Civil War veterans are concerned in the order from the first assistant postmaster general, instructing postmasters to more carefully observe the department's instructions relative to the treatment of letters from the pension bureau containing checks. These letters are identified by the presence of printed matter referring to the act of August 17, 1912.

"Such letters must not be forwarded to another postoffice under any circumstances. They must not be delivered to anyone in case the addressee has died, is under guardianship, has changed his postoffice, either temporarily or permanently, or, if a widow, has remarried. A change of street address in the same city is not such a removal as to prevent a proper delivery of such letters.

"Before delivering a pension letter to a person other than the addressee, the clerk or carrier having it in charge should be satisfied by inquiry or otherwise that none of the prohibitive conditions exist, in which case delivery may be made to a pensioner's family or household who has been specially authorized to receive pension mail. The special authorization should consist of a written order signed by the pensioner and designating by name the person to whom the delivery of pension letters may be made.

"In case the pensioner is temporarily away from the delivery of the postoffice address, such letters addressed to him should be held in the postoffice for the ten days specified in the return request."

Letter Carrier Joseph E. O'Connor is on his annual leave of absence.

W. C. T. U. NOTES.

An interesting story of attempted rescue work is told in a recent number of the Congregationalist. A young man, a tramp, thoroughly under the sway of the liquor habit, is rescued, only to fall again. Later he rises. The story is a pathetic picture of his struggles and the patient efforts of his friends to help him to his feet after repeated falls. Each time the liquor which worked his ruin was obtained from a city nearby.

Of the various reflections suggested by his career, we copy one.

"There are suggestions here of the difficulties in the way of enforcing prohibition piecemeal. Given a town free from the traffic of intoxicants, and a convenient neighboring city which invitingly holds out the prospect of a spree away from home, and there is danger for every victim of the appetite and much of disappointment in store for everyone who would help to save and redeem such a one.

More than half a century ago Abraham Lincoln voiced the great prophecy that America could not exist "half slave and half free." It is perfectly safe to say today, though the fulfillment of this prophecy may be much longer delayed, that America will not exist half drunk and half sober, half slave to the saloon and half free. Even the liquor men know that they must drive back the temperance forces and wrest the no-saloon territory for reoccupation by the saloon, or inevitably the whole country will sooner or later cast out the saloon. And whatever of temporary reverse may come here and there the saloon will not regain its lost provinces, but will itself lose the battle at last."

George H. Lochman, assistant treasurer of the Winchester Trust Company, is enjoying his vacation.

THE VILLAGE BLACKSMITH.

In this Town there is a Blacksmith, Who has both skill and trade To shoe a horse or mend a cart That ever yet was made. You will find him Busy always No matter where you stop, Near the corner of Main and Lake streets Where he runs a little shop.

His shop is small that's true I know, And a little out of sight, But men of business don't mind that They know he's square and right. His work attracts attention, Because it is the Best For wear and tear, no matter where 'Twill always stand the test.

He is very polite and civil No matter when you call; He is patient and attentive, He is fair and square to all. He suits all kinds of people, From the rich man to the poor, And while they live to him they'll give Their work, you may be sure.

There is no job too small for him, There is no job too big; He can set a tire on any wheel From a figger to a kix. Horses that have corns, He'll remove them without harm, He'll do it so quick without a kick You'd swear he had a Charm.

If your cart is getting shaky, Or your horse's feet are sore, Just drive around the corner And your troubles will pass o'er. He'll soon find out the reason, Then he'll shoe your horses right, And your cart that once was shaky He will make it strong and tight.

He does a lot of woodwork That I haven't yet explained; For repairing teams of every kind A great name he has gained. He can make new hounds to hold the pole,

Or Build a Body new, When you take your cart and from him start For years good work 'twill do.

There are other blacksmiths in this town That are very good indeed; Don't think I'm trying to run them down.

When these few lines you read, There's plenty work and room for all, But no matter where you go, You will find that Haggerty is the best.

If you'll just give him a show, John Greenleaf Shortfellow.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Last Sunday night was celebrated League Rally Day. The church was tastefully decorated with potted plants and cut flowers, the League colors, red and white, predominating. The Epworth League Trio furnished excellent music. Come next Sunday and hear them.

After a helpful talk by the President, the Secretary called the roll, there being 22 present. The League never started the new year before with such enthusiasm. It is catching.

Next Sunday will be school and college night. Miss Grace Snow will lead and special music will be given by the E. L. Trio. If you enjoyed the meeting last Sunday night tell your friends, if not, tell us. It is hoped to see you there next Sunday night. Your presence counts.

WEDNESDAY'S FIRE.

On Wednesday afternoon a fire on the roof of a small barn at the rear of the Winchester Hotel necessitated an alarm of fire. The blaze evidently caught from locomotive sparks, and was seen soon after it started. A train passing through the centre held up the auto to the outside of the roof, but it being on the outside of the roof, was promptly extinguished with hand chemicals. In the stable was a horse owned by C. F. Cogswell, which remained there during all the excitement.

The engineer of the train which held up the chemical saw the fire and sounded his whistle as he passed. The damage was slight.

DEAN CHALLENGED.

Winchester, Sept. 10, 1913.

Mr. C. A. Dean,
Dear Sir:—As I am a candidate for the Senate from our 6th Middlesex District, and believing a party platform is a party pledge, not to be broken by a candidate after he is elected, I challenge you to a joint debate in each city and town in our district within the next eight days, the question to be

"Resolved:—That when a Representative to our General Court breaks the pledge made in his party's platform, he should not again be a candidate for said Court, thereby being a heavy load on our party."

Yours for victory,
Whitfield L. Tuck.

Have your developing and printing done at Wilson the Stationer's. Prompt and satisfactory work. adv.

A GREAT GAME.

Winchester Won From Newton Upper Falls in Best Game Ever Seen Here.

(By Winchester's "Connie Mack.")

In the greatest game of ball played on Manchester Field in many a season, Winchester won from the strong Newton Upper Falls team in ten innings by a score of 2 to 1. This is the second defeat this team has met this season out of 23 starts, and playing the best teams in Greater Boston. They expected to win here as they had John Murray, the sensational Everett pitcher in the box for them. Winchester has the honor and glory of being the only team to beat him this year, as he had not lost a game since the season opened, April 5th. Winchester "got" to him, and only the great support handed him by the outfield saved him from a worse defeat. The game was clean, free from disputes, and not one left the field until the winning run was scored. While there were no big league scouts watching the game, like they see every Saturday in Woburn, you have got to hand it to Winchester for having a pretty nice ball team, with a good, clean crowd of players on it, always playing the game with their hands and heads, not with their mouths, as is the case in some places.

We had a new man in right field named Leland. He led the Suburban League in hitting this season, and from the way he went about it in this game he looks as though he might help the team out to a great extent. Tift pitched his usual heady game of ball and at no time was he in distress, and at the same time he had a good support from the rest of the team.

Newton was first to score on a couple of hits and a Texas leaguer. Winchester tied up the game in the fourth on a hit by Kenney and a smashing drive for three bases by Leland off the first ball pitched. The game then went along until the tenth, when Dickie reached first on a low throw by the third baseman; he was sent to second on a sacrifice by Tift, when Murray scored them with one of his old time deliveries over third and perhaps the crowd didn't go wild, while the Newton crowd filed slowly out of the field, a nice crowd and good fair losers.

BASE BALL NOTES.

Winchester is hot after another game with Woburn, but it looks rather doubtful. They do not seem very anxious for any of our games.

The game in Woburn Saturday between the Calumet and Woburn was one series of disputes. The umpire, a competent man, was rendering impartial decisions, but they won't stand for that in Woburn. He has got to give the home team everything, or he is no good.

The Calumet are too much for them and won't stand any umpires from Woburn. The result: a couple of well earned victories for Stoneham.

Shrewsbury, where Whittaker is playing, lost to Clinton Saturday although Whittaker did not pitch. The series now stands two apiece with the deciding game to be played at Worcester on the New England League grounds.

The people who have been away for the summer were out in force Saturday and were surprised at the class of ball shown by the team, as it was not going very good when they went away.

Badger seems to be recovering his old time form when he was a terror to the pitchers and catchers, when he got on the bases.

Roche made a couple of swell catches in left, one of them off the bat of Collins who thought the ball had gone over Roche's head and never stopped running until he nailed third.

(Winchester's "Connie Mack.")

ANENT THE WOBURN—WINCHESTER GAME.

Saturday's Woburn Times had the following to say concerning the Star's account of the Labor Day Woburn-Winchester game:

The Winchester Star in its issue of this week contains a highly prejudiced account of the double header on the holiday. Its contention is that on account of poor umpiring in the morning game, the All-Woburns should call that victory void, and play a "third" game to decide the series.

The article sounds as if it may have been from the pen of Winchester's "Connie Mack" and sounds very much like a certain article written in another year after the same series in defense of a Winchester umpire's work; and is apparently no nearer the truth.

The only correct assumption in the highly garbled account is that the umpire made a mistake in allowing Neil Doherty to score from third, but it made no difference, as he would have scored later.

If the Winchester team expects to come to Woburn with an untied pitcher, (who allows a dozen hits) and a team which fields like a team in a grammar school league (or worse), and makes but four scattered hits, and get away with a "wolf" story of being robbed, they are sadly mistaken.

The Winchester Star, in all due respect, would deal out to its readers a fairer and more truthful account of games played by the Winchester team, if it had the contents reported by a member of the paper's staff, and not by a member of the Winchester team or management.

Manager McDonald may give the Winchester team another game (in fact, we understand that he has in view games both with Winchester and Marlboro) but we feel that the only reason in favor would be the money advantage.

The Stoneham Enterprise says: The Winchester Star condemns the umpiring at Woburn Labor Day morning, in an article headed "A Severe Disappointment—What an Untutored Umpire Can Do to Spoil a Game." There is no getting over the fact nevertheless, that the All Woburns played an unusually smart game. Every man was a star. We sat directly behind the home plate, and know the umpire was partial to McMahon on balls and strikes compelling Leonard, the Winchester pitcher, to cut the plate in two, while he gave McMahon all the corners.

PROBATE COURT NEWS.

Samuel Ernest Perkins is an heir-at-law to the estate of his grandfather, Andrew Hapgood of West Acton, who died June 26, 1912. The estate is valued at $5750; $5000 in real estate and $750 in personal property.

An inventory of the estate of James F. Davis who died July 17, 1913, has been filed in the Probate Court. The estate is valued at $704.31, all in personal property.

Terrance McGovern has filed a petition in the Probate Court asking to be appointed as administrator of the estate of his wife, Mrs. Susan McGovern, who died August 12, 1913. No valuation of the estate was filed. The petition is returnable at East Cambridge September 23. Attorney Michael J. Dennen of Winchester represents the petitioner.

Florence W. Farmer, Everett W. Farmer and Benjamin Edwards, all of Winchester, have been attached for $1000 in an action of contract by the Brown-Wales company of Boston. The papers have been filed by attorney C. W. Nash, 35 Congress street, Boston.

W. Wheatley doing business as W. Wheatley & Company in Winchester has been sued for $200 in an action of contract by B. E. Slier of Gananoune, Ontario, Canada. The papers have been filed by attorney A. S. Hall, 31 Milk street, Boston. It is alleged that the defendant owes $128.30.

Joseph Murray of Winchester who was indicted for an assault with intent to murder John Daly at Winchester on June 17, pleaded guilty to a simple assault and was fined $75 by Judge P. A. Keating in the superior criminal court Tuesday.

PARK THEATRE.

The Park Theatre, beginning Monday evening, September 15th, will present for its first performances outside of New York "The Conspiracy," the police-detective play by John Emerson and Robert Baker which will be recalled near the whole of last season at Mr. Frohman's New York Garrick Theatre. "The Conspiracy" is credited with an abundance of thrills as well as amusing situations to relieve the excitement, and of all the underworld plays produced last season it has met with the most favor. Two companies are now on tour presenting the piece in America and at the present time "The Conspiracy" is the season's success at the Comedy Theatre, London.

John Emerson's portrayal of Winthrop Clavering has been one of the personal successes of the New York theatrical season. Mr. Frohman sends to Boston the original Garrick Theatre cast including, besides Mr. Emerson, Mary Keener, Roslyn Mundell, Helena Rapport, Julia Blanc, Francis Byrne, Georgis Majeroni, Langdon Gillet, Conrad Cantzen, Warren Cook, Willard Barton and P. E. McCoy. The scenic equipment is an elaborate and unusual one.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

A new play to Boston will be the attraction at the Castle Square next week. Its title is "Bachelors and Benedicts," its author is Jackson D. Haag, and in plot, scenes and characters it is genuine comedy.

The scenes of the play take place in the home of Leslie Gilbert just before and six months after his marriage. In them the dramatist depicts life, and he has succeeded in transferring it to the stage very realistically.

The plot of "Bachelors and Benedicts" is remarkably true to life, the action is spirited, and the dialogue is lively. It should keep the audience in continuous good spirits, and alert with smiles and laughter. The husband and the wife will be played by Mr. Carleton and Miss Olson, and in the other roles all the members of Mr. Craig's company will appear.

Mr. Martin A. Brown and family of Stratford road have returned from their summer home in Wilmington, Vt.

VOTES FOR WOMEN?

Government of the people, by the people and for the people does not mean that each individual person must take active part in governing the nation. This is a mistake into which our country is rapidly falling, forgetting the object-lesson provided for us by France in the reign of blood and terror, which was the result of trying to follow to its logical conclusion the idea of government by the ignorant masses. England, although she governs one-fifth of the entire globe, has never fallen into this error. She has entrusted the affairs of the nation to men who have had time to attend to them, and who have made a life study of government. This left the business men to attend each to his own affairs, each to become the best tradesman or manufacturer that his abilities and his undivided attention would permit him to be.

In this country the man who is unsuccessful as a worker, often goes into politics—because he knows anything about government, but because he wants to get a share of the profits of the successful business man. Therefore, instead of trying to govern the country for the good of all, such a man tries to seize upon the profits of the hard workers and to divert them into his own pocket. This is the root idea of Socialism—no profits—and without working I shall be as well off as anyone. The trouble with the Suffragists to-day is that, like their allies the Socialists, they want the fun of governing and holding offices, without doing any hard work. They do not think it necessary to make a study of government. They never express opinions on tariff reform, reciprocity, corporation legislation and similar problems. They are too busy rushing around in motors, acting in theatricals, going to banquets, parading and self-advertising, to think about really important national affairs.

But if we women are to have votes and to take part in all that voting entails, we must inform ourselves about these things, and we must be prepared to turn out, hot or cold, wet or dry, sick or well, to see that they are being properly attended to. It is not enough to pass laws. We must see that the laws are properly enforced, and right here we come to one of the most obvious facts among those which the Suffragists are prone to ignore; namely, that laws must be made by the people who can enforce them. If not, there is no use in having any. It cannot be disputed that to give women the vote would be to give them responsibility without power, for no legislation can possibly endow women with that physical force upon which all law and order depends.

To have responsibility—without power—is to be in a very ridiculous and dangerous position. Women must be protected and therefore men must make the laws for their protection, which they alone can enforce. If the men are willing to enforce a law, the chances are that they would pass it of their own accord. We know that American men are quite ready to pass laws in favor of women and children, because there are more and better laws in their favor in male suffrage states than there are in women suffrage states. We Anti-Suffragists believe firstly, that votes do not create laws, and secondly, that there are plenty of laws already. What is needed is the enforcement of existing legislation.

Votes for women would not aid in the enforcement of a single law. The creation of an intelligent public opinion is the first step towards this, and for that knowledge is necessary—knowledge and hard work are both necessary—not emotional muck-raking and empty promises that votes for women will accomplish what all intelligent people can plainly see is not being accomplished by them in the suffrage states.

We Anti-Suffragists claim that we represent the majority of the women, that our ranks are composed of the mothers and the workers and the women who now have all and more to do than they can do in each twenty-four hours. We ask to be left free from the useless horrors of partisan politics so that we may not be hampered in the work in which all public spirited women are interested; namely, the establishment of an intelligent, non-partisan and fearless public opinion, the improvement of our own country and of the human race.

Anti-Suffragist.

WOMAN FOUND LIFELESS IN CHELSEA HAD SISTER HERE.

The woman who was found lifeless in the residence of Fred Marchant of 35 Auburn street, Chelsea, Monday morning, after asking for shelter the afternoon previous was Louise Carpenter, a sister of Mrs. Eugene Gendron of Salem street, this town. On Sunday afternoon Miss Carpenter asked for shelter at the Marchant house, which was given. She stated that she had recently left the Deaconess Hospital at Brookline. About 6.30 Monday morning she was found dead by Mr. Marchant, who notified the police.

Investigation revealed that she was Louise Carpenter and had been employed at the Deaconess Hospital as a domestic, having left that institution some time ago, and that she was a sister of Mrs. Gendron of this town.

FORMER WINCHESTER RESIDENT RETURNED FIND OF $2,900.

Considerable prominence was given by the Seattle Post last week of the finding and returning of $2,900 in bills by a former Winchester resident who is now a real estate dealer of that city.

The gentleman who received the prominence is Mr. George B. Riley. The money was lost by a couple who had sold their home and gone to Seattle to invest the sum. On the evening of their arrival the money was lost on one of the principal streets, it being found by Mr. Riley and returned in answer to their advertisement.

Mr. Riley formerly lived with his parents in the L. C. Pattee estate on Church street, he being born there. He is well remembered by many former Winchester residents.

Recently a wealthy New York woman who employs the son of one of her less fortunate sisters as a chauffeur for the summer to assist him in working his way through college, motored up to what appeared, from the prices charged and the bowing and scraping of the flunkies, to be a fashionable hotel in a horse New Hampshire town, says the Melrose News. She asked the lad to lunch with her, as is her custom when motoring alone. The snob who acted as proprietor of the hotel asked if the young man was a chauffeur. The woman replied that such was his business but for the time being he was her guest at luncheon and she resented the idea of being questioned regarding the occupation of anyone she chose to ask to lunch with her. But the manager was obdurate and refused to let the young man dine with the woman who employed him. As there was no other good hotel for some miles the woman decided to dine alone. While she was eating a man and woman entered the dining room, the woman leading a filthy bulldog by a leash. The same landlord, who had consigned the honest, clear-cut American boy making his way through college to the stables, nearly broke his back in kotowing to the woman and the dog. To cap the climax the dog sat at the table and every once in a while was given a bit of meat by his mistress, who kissed him twice during the dinner. When William Makepeace Thackeray wrote his book of snobs he little dreamed that he had lived he could have added a chapter on dogs and chauffeurs.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by HALL'S CATARRH CURE. Send for circular, free. P. J. CHENEY, & CO., Toledo, Ohio. Sold by Druggists, 75c. Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

Peter Christianson, age 24, was in court last Friday morning, charged with being a tramp. He solicited money from various persons and was given food. Judge Johnson placed the case on file and Christianson will henceforth be expected to stay away from Winchester. He told the court that he has been in America four years, coming here from Denmark.

Have those summer snap shots developed and printed at Wilson's Stationers, adv.

B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE.

One of the biggest successes in vaudeville this season has been registered by Jack Norworth, the song writer and comedian, who since his separation from Nora Bayes has been going it alone on his own account. A week ago at Atlantic City he gave an entertainment that broke all records for that resort. He was immediately booked by Mr. Keith for his Boston house and begins his engagement here next Monday for one week. He will be the feature of an exceptionally strong bill, which will include Lovenberg's Six American Dancers in entirely new stage settings; the Duffin-Redway Troupe in sensational casting feats; William Weston and Company in a sketch that ends with a big surprise; Leo Zarell Trio in humorous acrobatics; the Famous Four Huntings in their big scream called "Fun in a Crazy House"; Carmen Ersell, late of the "Duke of Luxembourg" and the Hurrah Company in sensational skating feats.

THE BOSTON THEATRE.

A very noticeable local interest has been manifested in the forthcoming production at the Boston Theatre of the first New England rural comic opera, "The Courtin'", book and lyrics by Charles Felton Pidgin and Justin Adams, and music by George Lowell Tracy. This will be the attraction at this theatre next week, opening Monday evening, Sept. 15th. As is already quite well known, "The Courtin'" is a musical adaptation of the famous New England play, "Quincy Adams Sawyer", which has had a number of very successful engagements at this house.

The leading role of Huldry, "the prettiest girl in town" and Zekle's sweetheart will be assumed by Grace Freeman. Other principals are: Hester Lavelle as Patience Plummer, Edna Nickerson as Sophia Barker, Isidore Marcell as Heskiah Hawkins, Paul Irving as Reuben Green, Walter Paschal as J. Quincy Adams, and Hadie Massey as Tiddy Titcomb. Seats will go on sale next Tuesday morning.

SPIRITISM SAID TO BE DEMONISM.

A most interesting little brochure has recently come of the press setting forth with Bible proofs that the communications received by and through Spiritist Mediums is of Demon origin. The writer traces his subject through the Scriptures from the time when certain of the holy angels became disobedient. He proves from the Scriptures that these fallen spirits permeate the human dead, with whose past history, spirits, though invisible, are thoroughly acquainted. He shows that they also frequently personate the Creator and the Redeemer, commanding their deceived ones to pray, do penance, etc. This, however, is merely to lead them on and to bring them more thoroughly under demonic control. Sometimes by breaking down the natural barrier, the human will, they possess their victim, and rule him more or less to his ruin—frequently sending such to the mad-house. Numerous illustrations, Scriptural and otherwise, are given. The price of the little book is but five cents; it should be in the hands of all interested in Spiritism or who have friends interested therein. Enclose stamps to the Bible and Tract Society, 17 Hicks Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

WHO IS MY NEIGHBOR?
Exodus 20:12-21—Sept. 14.
"Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."—Lev. 19:18.

THE Ten Commandments were written upon two stone tablets. One bore the first four commandments, appertaining to God; the other, the remaining six, appertaining to humanity. The essence of these last six was expressed in Jesus' words, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."

Whoever loves his neighbor will not intentionally injure him in act, word or thought. Hence, Love expresses the full measure of the requirements of the Law. (Romans 13:10) Love is at liberty to do more than the Law requires, but cannot do less.

While only Christians are credited by the Lord with fulfilling the requirements of the Law—because of the allowance made for their weaknesses on account of their relationship with Christ—nevertheless, the Jews and many others have been blessed in proportion as they endeavored to fulfill the Law. Hence it is wise and proper to lift high the Divine standards.

Honor Father and Mother.
All parents are deserving of consideration from their children. Yet, of course, the degree of respect must depend upon the character of the parents, to some extent. With disobedience to parents rank and rampant everywhere, it may seem a hard saying, but we believe it true, that the child's disobedience is due to the parent or the guardian.

The child may have been ill-born. Discontent and rebellion in the mother's mind during the period of gestation may have so marked the child that no amount of training may fully recover it. In such a case parents may well be patient with unhappy, disobedient dispositions in their children.

Perhaps the parents were only partially to blame. Perhaps their ministrations did not preach the laws of God, their human operation and the penalties of their violation, but gave flowery essays and anecdotes containing neither food for the spiritual nature nor assistance in understanding and combating the human weaknesses. Perhaps the father forgot that he had a duty toward his offspring, chiefly served by assisting his wife to thoughts of kindness, gentleness, nobility, etc.

A modern writer of influence holds that Sunday Schools, while accomplishing good in one direction, have also weakened the respect of children for parents and released parents from appreciation of their parental responsibilities. One hour per week in Sunday School cannot take the place of continual parental supervision.

Statistics show that boys from sixteen to twenty years old constitute about one-third of all dangerous criminals, and that their proportionate number is increasing. Hence benevolent people should especially co-operate with the Divine command by encouraging obedience to parental authority.

"Thou Shalt Not Murder."

Nothing in this command forbids the necessary killing of animals. Neither does it forbid the execution of criminals, for this it would conflict with Divine Law elsewhere expressed, and practised by Divine direction.

This commandment teaches that life is to be prized, not jeopardized. Its spirit, Jesus declared, forbids an angry, murderous spirit, restrained merely by fear of consequences. This commandment makes it incumbent upon those employing labor or having supervision of others to safeguard against accidents. To allow self-interest or love of money to perpetrate dangerous conditions is to violate this commandment.

Commit Not Adultery.

One result of man's fall has been depravity of sexual appetites—unchastity, lack of self-control. These tendencies lead away from God and righteousness. The family unit of one husband and one wife, originally established in Eden, is a corner stone of righteousness in both family and national life.

"Thou Shalt Not Steal."

To steal is to take from another his possessions. Some subtle forms of theft are through stock speculations, fake companies, etc. Making false returns to the tax assessor is stealing. So are smuggling and failure to give agreed upon services for wages received. But the worst form of theft is stealing another's good name, in violation of the Scriptures.

"Bear No False Witness."

Daily is the spirit of this injunction violated, not only in misrepresenting what we wish to sell or buy, but by indirect statements, by a nod, a shrug, or by silence when it is understood to mean consent.

"Thou Shalt Not Covet."

Covetousness is a heart disease which has to do with every crime; for sin has its basis in selfishness, which is covetousness. Whoever would keep the spirit of God's Law must guard against covetousness.

Obesity—the Remedy.

The control of bodily weight rests upon three distinct laws:
One.—Nutrition.
Two.—Exercise.
Three.—Oxidation or breathing.

The logical remedy is to begin with

WHAT, WHEN AND HOW TO EAT

How Obesity Is Caused and How Diet Will Effect a Cure.

By EUGENE CHRISTIAN, F. S. D.

(Copyright, 1913, by American Press Association.)

OBESITY or overweight is a disease produced by a definite cause, for which there is a definite remedy. There may be a slight hereditary tendency toward obesity, but it is usually caused directly by violating one or more of nature's laws. If the cause is hereditary the science of nutrition is doing but little for the human family if it cannot overcome this.

A combination of commissions and omissions generally conspire to produce the obese body. They may be mentioned in the order of their importance:

First.—Overeating.

Second.—Omission of the proper amount of exercise.

Third.—The overconsumption of fluids, especially malt and fermented stimulants.

In every case of obesity one or more of these causes will be found. If one is blessed with good digestion and good assimilation then the quantity of food must be regulated by one's work or labor, otherwise any excess of fat producing elements will be stored up by provident nature contemplating future use. If the surplus is not used up by manual labor the result is a gradual accumulation of fatty tissues.

Worst Form of Obesity.

The worst form of obesity is that caused by overconsumption of stimulants, wine, beer, etc. This form of enlarged tissue contributes no strength whatever to its own support. It is as much of a dead weight as a load of mortar and much more useless. In fact, all forms of obesity are not only useless but dangerous to life. The obese body is much more liable to contagious and infectious diseases and, when once affected, is less able to defend itself than the normal body.

The following is a table taken from the old Greek standard, which gives the normal weight of naturally healthy adults according to height, also the weight considered obese:

Height.	Males.	Females.
Feet, in.	Weight.	Weight.
5.0	125	122
5.1	128	125
5.2	132	128
5.3	136	132
5.4	140	136
5.5	145	140
5.6	150	145
5.7	155	150
5.8	160	155
5.9	165	160
6.0	170	165
6.1	175	170
6.2	180	175
6.3	185	180

What is usually called a bad stomach is in a majority of cases a good one, because it warns us of our errors an hour after we commit them and will not permit us to eat more than we can assimilate. This is why confirmed dyspeptics as a class live longer than the portly, well fed class.

Fat Producing Foods.

The foods most conducive to obesity are carbohydrates (starch and sugar), albuminoids and the very soluble forms of proteins.

Carbohydrates are the principal fat-making nutrients and might be grouped as follows:

All bread and cereal products, potatoes, bananas, chestnuts and dried beans. The sweets are sugar, honey, sirup, dates, figs, raisins and all desserts containing sugar. The gelatinoids are that portion of the animal known as connective tissue, from which the commercial gelatin is made. The most soluble, hence the most fattening, proteins are milk and eggs.

The casein of milk and the phosphorus and nitrogen in eggs are converted largely into fat, especially if a quantity be taken in excess of the amount used up in effort and work.

While the above named articles are all conducive to the production of fat in the body it does not mean that they should be totally eliminated, but rather that the quantity should be reduced to the actual needs of the body. As an example, the old method of treating diabetes was to omit starch and sugar entirely. Modern science has shown this method of treatment to be incorrect. The normal body needs a certain amount of starch and sugar, and to withhold this entirely is swinging the pendulum of reform to the other extreme, which is as intemperate as overeating.

Fat such as butter, cream, olive oil, nuts, etc., do not produce fats. Their primary purpose is to produce heat. Fats, however, may store up fat if taken largely in excess of the bodily needs.

Obesity—the Remedy.

The control of bodily weight rests upon three distinct laws:

One.—Nutrition.

Two.—Exercise.

Three.—Oxidation or breathing.

The logical remedy is to begin with the diet which, when corrected, is a process of removing causes.

The food should be selected, combined and proportioned so as to give the body all the elements of nutrition it needs in approximately the right quantities, these quantities to be determined by age, temperature of the atmosphere and the character of work.

Meat and all animal fat should be eliminated except perhaps now and then tender fish or white meat of chicken. The amount of carbohydrates necessary to support the energy required should be calculated as nearly as possible and none in excess of this quantity consumed. This will have a tendency to stop the accumulation of fatty tissue by removing its primary causes.

The diet should consist largely of nuts, fruits, salads and all fresh vegetables, with a limited quantity of milk and eggs, and once a day perhaps a small portion of bloodless meat such as fish, lobster or chicken or turkey white meat.

Weight Can Be Reduced.

If the tendency toward obesity is hereditary and the appetite calls for more food than it actually needs, this menu may not show a substantial reduction in weight. Under such conditions milk, eggs, fish and fowl should be discontinued, and the diet should consist entirely of nuts, fruits, fresh vegetables and salads with a very limited quantity of cereal once a day.

If one will subsist upon the above named articles and can take from one to three hours' moderate exercise daily it will overcome even hereditary tendencies, and the body can be reduced to its normal weight within a period of three to six months.

For the ordinary obese person I would suggest either of the following menus:

BREAKFAST.

Two oranges or a grapefruit.

One banana with cream and nuts.

One egg, whipped.

Menu II.

Berries, grapes, peaches, plums, pears, apples, melons, soaked evaporated apricots, peaches or prunes.

If the patient is doing manual labor the protein foods such as milk, nuts, fish and eggs should be increased according to the work. If, however, the labor is sedentary, such as followed by the average business man, the quantities herein prescribed are sufficient.

The breakfast should be taken an hour after arising and the luncheon not later than 12 noon and the dinner not later than 6 p. m.

The symptom during the first two or three days may be that of weakness or perhaps acute hunger, leaving the impression of under nourishment. This will disappear after the third or fourth day, and the strength will not only return to normal, but the body will feel much more energetic than before, and there will be a marked increase in the powers of endurance. If a person will "fight it out" for a week along these lines favorable symptoms will develop, and he will be aided by the mental conviction that he is on the road to success.

In many cases the cause of overweight is too much meat and too much starchy food, which is nearly always followed by copious water drinking with meals. Meat alone will not produce surplus fat. Meat being a nitrogenous compound, it is used by the body for building up the tissue and cells, while the starches and sugars are used to fill these cells. Thus meat produces an overgrowth of cell structure, and nature appropriates everything possible with which to fill these. Meat or all flesh food may in this way augment obese tendencies.

If the menus herein prescribed should entail too much deprivation or craving for food, then the quantity should be slightly increased until normal hunger is satisfied, provided enough exercise or manual labor be performed to consume the surplus.

Nature is a perfect economist. She draws a trial balance every day with the fuel one puts into the furnace and the amount of work the human mechanism performs.

The true science of human nutrition is the ability to feed the body, both in quantity and selections, upon the things which it needs for the work it does.

Persons following a sedentary occupation should not eat such foods as require hard manual labor to metabolize. If they do they are punished for this error by being forced to carry around a lot of dead weight, which they do not need, or by auto-intoxication (self poisoning), which expresses itself in over twenty known ailments to which medical men have given separate names and for which they prescribe separate remedies.

Health being man's natural state, overweight, sickness or any abnormal condition meets with great resistance. In other words, it is difficult to get sick. Nature will tolerate the moderate violation of her laws for years uncomplainingly, but a day of settlement must come sooner or later.

TOWN ACCOUNTING.

The State will Compel Cities and Towns to Adopt a System.

Under the above caption, F. W. Coburn writes at some length in Wednesday's Transcript on the important features of the new laws relating to municipal finance. The requirements will cause radical changes in the methods of accounting in many towns, among them Natick. Mr. Coburn says in part:

Better municipal housekeeping and accounting in all cities and towns of Massachusetts is prescribed in a "special notice to town treasurers, select men and other municipal officers" which early this week was mailed from the Bureau of Statistics on Beacon Hill. With a leaflet of instructions goes a bulletin devoted to the new laws relating to municipal finances and the Bureau's fifth annual report laws relating to municipal finances now first published. The term "housekeeping" is used advisedly. Every household knows, or ought to know, that economy (from its derivation signifying the proper management of a house) can be practised efficiently only when budgets and accounting systems are highly administered. Bad community housekeeping is by no means confined to large cities. Investigations of a few years ago showed most astonishing lax and ineffective methods of accounting for money received by and spent for many of the Massachusetts municipalities. Some of them, it is hardly to be optional, but beginning 1914, aged as the fifteen percent of the families of greater Boston who subsist only by the grace of the loan shark.

In the outer office of the Bureau of Statistics for some months past there has hung a chart, of the "watch us grow" sort, on which have been recorded those towns and cities who have voluntarily petitioned for installation of a standard accounting system, and for the regular audits of their accounts by officers of the Bureau. This privilege will continue to be optional, but beginning 1914, all municipalities will be legally required to observe certain principles of safety and uniformity which have heretofore been ignored or respected according to the discretion of individual officials.

Regulation after regulation has restricted this local liberty, which has always shown a dangerous liability to degenerate into license. From now on Massachusetts will present perhaps the best example in the world, in a district of similar population, of the application of principles of scientific accounting to the local government.

Municipal officers and town treasurers, at all events, are now bidden to observe with especial care the statutes that govern the borrowing of money.

They are appraised that on and after Jan. 1 1914, loans of the class heretofore described as "in anticipation of taxes" (but now known as "in anticipation of revenue") may not be issued to an amount in excess of the total tax levy of the preceding year. Under the old law no specific limitation was set upon the amount which could be borrowed on the pretext of anticipation of taxes. It might have been presumed that the authorities would not borrow more than the probable amount of one year's levy. As a matter of fact, they sometimes have gone beyond this limit and have then resorted to renewals or refunding to keep the local government going.

Authorities are also instructed that except for temporary purposes, debt can be incurred after Jan. 1, 1914, only for particular purposes which are carefully specified in legislation enacted last winter. This classification is both negative, in that it prevents borrowing for current expenses, and positive in that for the first time the objects for which municipalities may borrow have been studied and properly grouped. In each specification a limit is set upon the borrowing.

Authorized loans are of two general classes, those which may be made within the debt limit fixed by law, viz two and a half percent of the average valuation of the three preceding calendar years in cities and three percent in towns, and those which are exempt from this limitation.

There are fifteen objects for which money may be borrowed within the debt limit. These may concern such necessities of civilized existence as sewers, public parks, school houses, bridges, streets, cemeteries and the like.

Five classes of loans may be incurred outside the general limit of indebtedness prescribed by law. These concern temporary loans in anticipation of revenue, establishment or purchase of a water system or water rights, extension of water mains or water departmental equipment, establishment, purchase or enlargement of a gas or electric plant, acquisition of land for purposes of a playground. Proportions of the total tax valuation which these loans may not exceed are prescribed in the new legislation.

Reckless borrowing is thus rendered impossible in routine finance.

Any municipality wishing to borrow outside the debt limit except for these specified purposes must, as heretofore, go to the Legislature and secure special permission. Such authorization in the past has been so easy to get that, as Director Gettemy of the bureau of statistics says, "The number of such special acts passed each year had become so great as to practically nullify in many cases, the intent of the statute."

The Legislature, up to now, has merely listened to the claims of the petitioners and passed on the presentation of facts, which they have made. It is now prescribed that whenever any municipality petitions to borrow outside the debt limit, the case shall be examined by the director of statistics and a message concerning its advisability, shall be transmitted to the legislative committee having such petitions in charge. If then the Great and General Court sees fit to grant the petition this action will at least be taken after consideration of expert and unprejudiced information.

No more sinking funds can be established. All loans hereafter issued must be payable by a serial method. If a town borrows a million dollars for twenty years it must provide for repayment of a fixed amount of the debt each year instead of accumulating a single fund to take care of the entire obligation when it matures. This accords, it hardly need be said, with the best accounting practices of today.

On this subject Mr. Gettemy remarks: "It was once said that the way to resume specie payments was to resume; and the way to stop the abuses of the sinking fund method of paying municipal debt caused by ignorance and inefficiency and to remedy its wastes is to stop the establishment of such funds. This is the very simple and effective remedy which has now been applied in Massachusetts. The Commonwealth itself set the example a few years ago and since then all State bonds have been issued and made payable by the serial method. Likewise several of our cities and towns did likewise and now the process is to be hastened by prohibition of further creation of sinking funds and the requirement that all debt shall be issued in accordance with the serial plan."

This method is carefully specified. The serial provision of the law requires all municipalities to provide for the payment of all except temporary loans "by such annual payments as will extinguish the same at maturity, and so that the first of such annual payments on account of any loan shall be made not later than one year after the date of the bonds or notes issued therefor, and so that the amount of such annual payments in any year on account of such debts, so far as issued, shall not be less than the amount of principal payable in any subsequent year, and such annual amount, together with the interest on all debts, shall without further vote, be assessed until the debt is paid.

Trust funds and perpetual care funds must be invested. Trust funds which have been used or borrowed must be restored and all outstanding demand notes must be taken up or either paid from the tax levy of 1914 or by refunding in cases where the total repayment would work hardship. This provision will rectify the evils caused by the diversion of trust funds of which several flagrant examples came to light in the investigation of two years ago. Since the agitation then begun, it may be noted some thirty-two municipalities have been induced to petition the Legislature for the necessary authority by special act to refund, by the serial amounting to $1,125,245.71, most of which represented liabilities caused by borrowing or use of trust funds.

Officials are informed that the financial year of all cities and towns of the Commonwealth must close on Dec. 31, on and after 1914.

The principle of compulsory uniform accounting, as already stated, has not been definitely established in Massachusetts. It is, however, now mandatory to submit to the voters of every municipality that has not voluntarily applied for the audit and installation offered by the Bureau of Statistics the question whether it is not desirable to take such action. The argument in favor of the value of this requirement is that "while the towns will still be free to determine their own attitude in the matter, it is probably safe to assume that as a result of this mandatory referendum a considerable number which otherwise would be likely to postpone action indefinitely, will take advantage of the opportunity to vote on the proposition and act favorably on it."

ROYAL ARCANUM CLAIMS FINANCIAL CONDITION GOOD.

Half Truth More Misleading Than Downright Falsehood.

The Royal Arcanum Bulletin, the official organ of the order, in an article, refutes a statement, recently published in the newspapers concerning the financial condition of the order.

The article reads as follows: "Annianias appears to have been the original discoverer of the important fact that a half truth may be more efficacious and misleading lie than a downright falsehood. This principle has recently done yeoman service for several of his successors who have been beautifying the columns of the old-line journals with some quite accurate tabulations showing an actual shrinkage in our emergency fund and an imaginary 'crisis' and 'collapse' of the entire order."

"These figures which are accurate, and the inferences, which are false, have been so widely copied, that it is perhaps worth while to repeat a word of explanation, which in substance has already appeared in several previous issues of the Bulletin."

"Every member of the order knows, or ought to know that the monthly assessment does two things. It collects a certain amount of cash, and at the same time, in the case of certain members who are 65 years of age, or older, it permits the payment of the remainder by what is known as the 'half cash privilege.' For example, I paid $2.22 on assessment No. 443, which became due on July 31, but my father, who is 66 years old, paid $8.04 in cash, and $8.04 by a lien chargeable against his certificate and payable at his death."

"The order, therefore, actually received $16.08 from my father under this arrangement, but only $8.04 shows in the cash account. The other $8.04 which does not show in the cash account is an equally real transaction. The only important difference is that the cash can be applied toward the settlement of any certificate which may become due while the credit can be applied only to the settlement of the certificate against which it is charged. The cash is an immediate resource. The credit does not become an actual resource till the settlement of my father's certificate, when it will be exactly as good as cash."

"In the accounting of the order nothing has been entered as cash, unless it was actual money. Therefore, the amount charged under the so-called half-cash option has never appeared in the cash account, although it is an asset, and was so considered in the valuation of the order recently made, the details of which were published in the June issue of the Bulletin."

"Oftentimes the prosperous storekeeper finds it desirable to increase his line of credit at certain times of the year when his customers are using an unusual amount of goods. The fact that he is giving credit enables him to secure good trade which he would otherwise lose, but it may also lessen the amount of actual cash he takes in. The investigator who undertook to pass upon his business condition by simply counting the contents of the money-drawer without paying any attention to the goods charged on the books, would prove himself a fool, but he would also probably secure figures which would convince anyone who was ignorant of the facts of the case that the storekeeper's case was almost hopeless."

"This is the method that our critics have used in depicting the 'dire straits' of our financial condition. The persons who are worried by articles of that kind should carefully examine the following figures giving the net result of the operation of our entire fiscal system for the past seven years:

	Cash Received	Am't. of Liens against Benefit Certificates
1906	$8,964,745.48
1907	8,625,221.22	$1,191,952.33
1908	8,418,407.88	1,759,158.78
1909	8,228,496.75	2,355,919.25
1910	8,106,305.35	2,933,272.01
1911	7,979,918.47	3,527,654.20
1912	7,881,220.08	4,144,696.56
	Emergency Fund	Total
1906	$2,844,145.97	$11,808,891.45
1907	4,000,100.98	13,817,374.53
1908	5,091,906.22	15,179,472.88
1909	5,808,247.69	16,392,663.69
1910	6,088,344.97	17,127,922.33
1911	6,072,660.18	17,580,232.85
1912	6,042,201.32	18,068,117.96

"These figures (and the ascertained valuation of the order of 88.26 per cent.), afford a conclusive answer to the misrepresentations of our enemies and the fears of our friends. The order still has problems to solve, which need the best thought and energy of its members. It has not yet reached the goal, but the results of the past seven years, taken altogether, and in the official form prescribed by the insurance department of Massachusetts, show an unprecedented march in the right direction."

Another "Hopeless Case"

He Astonished the Doctors—Recovers Without Operation—Used Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy.

Mr. James Lettice, of Canajoharie, N.Y., writes:

"Some years ago I was attacked with fearful pains in my back and side. I could not control my kidneys at all, and what came from them was mucous and blood. I was in a terrible state and suffered intensely. A prominent physician of Albany, N.Y., decided that an operation was all that would save me. I dreaded that and commenced to take Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy. I felt better almost immediately. When I had taken about two bottles, the flow from the bladder was much cleaner, the pain stopped. I was, saved from the surgeon's knife and am now well."

The above letter was written in 1900. To prove that the benefit he obtained from Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy was permanent, read what he says in a recent letter (in 1912):

"I am enjoying the best of health. Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy cured me permanently. I have answered many letters asking about it. I shall keep on taking it."

Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy has had nearly 40 years of great success in Kidney, Liver and Blood disorders. Not a "patent" medicine, but a physician's prescription, prepared for universal use. Write today to Dr. David Kennedy Co., Rondout, N.Y., for a free trial bottle and booklet of valuable medical advice. Large bottles sold by 40,000 druggists.

Whether or not the hobble skirt is a factor in accidents to passengers is to be ascertained by the Pennsylvania railroad. Trainmen are instructed to include estimates of the measurements of skirts in their reports of accidents at the car steps, and also to observe the effect of high heels on the movements of the persons injured. Street railway companies might find in the Pennsylvania's bulletin a useful suggestion. Will the hobble skirt bar women from collecting damages? This interesting question may have to be decided by the courts. The prevalent practise on the part of women facing to the rear when leaving a car gives the company a ground of defense. An Ohio judge has ruled that those who fail to face forward are not entitled to compensation for falls. The narrow skirt thus is a new element in damage suits.

Angelina Pollitano, the five months' old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Antonio Pollitano of 37 Oak street, was found dead in bed this morning. Medical Examiner William H. Keeler of Woburn was called and gave his opinion that the child died from accidental suffocation.

Mrs. Katharine Shaughnessy who passed away last week was buried on Wednesday of last week from the Sacred Heart Church of Lowell.

The interment was in the family lot in St. Patrick's Cemetery. Mrs. Shaughnessy had a large acquaintance in Winchester where she was employed before her marriage for about eight years in the family of Mrs. Frank White. Her maiden name was Katharine Moriarty. She was married about a year ago. A very sad feature of her death was the loss to her twin babies, a son and a daughter, of a mother's loving care. She leaves besides her husband, a brother and a sister.

Edge tools of every description sharpened at the Central Hardware Store, 15 Mt Vernon street.

Mr. and Mrs. Sylvester Taylor and son, Prescott, will return next week from Assquam Lake, Holderness, N.H., where they have been spending August and part of September.

The bronze letters on the Winchester Trust Company's new building indicate that the safe deposit department is to be a strong feature of its business.

Subscriptions for the Orchestral Concerts are coming in more rapidly than usual this year. About thirty per cent more subscriptions have been received up to date than were on the list at this time last year. This is a great help to the Treasurer as it takes time and money to solicit and re-solicit members who do not reply promptly. A prompt reply, even if it be a flat "No," is better than no answer at all. The concerts this season promise to be better than any yet given and a large number of the low priced seats are being reserved for the entire season.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur E. Whitney have gone to Moosehead Lake, Maine, for their annual fall fishing trip.

Many persons are complaining about the condition of Main street, which has recently received a coat of oil. It is found that the oil is being tracked into houses, to the ruin of rugs and floors, besides causing much damage to clothing. Residents in the vicinity are of the opinion that less oil and more sand would be much more acceptable.

BRIDE FROM STONEHAM.

Well Known Winchester Man Married Monday Evening.

A well known young man of this town was married at Stoneham on Monday evening before a large gathering of guests from many towns in this vicinity and elsewhere, when Rev. Henry E. Hodge, pastor of the First Baptist church of this town, united Mr. Howard Salem Palmer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace P. Palmer of Forest street, and Miss Edna May Kinsley, daughter of Mrs. Alice G. Kinsley of Stoneham, in the holy bonds of matrimony.

The residence was decorated for the ceremony in a general color scheme of green and yellow, fall flowers and foliage being used about the rooms and halls with pleasing effect. The couple were married in a bowl of pine boughs lined with golden red.

The bride was gowned in a dress of embroidered voile, trimmed with white satin, and wore a tulle veil caught with a spray of orange blossoms. She carried a bridal bouquet of bride's roses.

Miss Inez E. Kinsley, the bride's sister, was maid of honor. She wore a dress of embroidered voile over pink. Mr. Myron E. Berry of West Boylston was best man.

The couple were preceded by two little ribbon bearers, Miss Marion Chesley and Miss Marjorie Whiting of Stoneham, who, dressed all in white, carried the ribbons which formed the aisle for the approach of the wedding party.

The reception followed immediately after the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Palmer receiving with their parents. The ushers for both wedding and reception were Messrs. Leroy T. Downer and Charles P. Downer of this town and H. Stanley Kinsley of Stoneham, the latter a brother of the bride.

Among the guests who were in Stoneham for the express purpose of attending the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. Edward Osmond of Auburn, Me., Mr. and Mrs. Guy P. Palmer and son Robert of Chicago, Ill., Miss Edith Marsh of Hudson, N. H., and many relatives and friends from towns in this vicinity.

The couple left after the reception for a wedding trip, and will be at home in their new residence, 31 Forest circle, Winchester, after November first.

MOVED TO CONNECTICUT.

Mr. M. W. Morgan and family, residents of this town for 21 years, left last week for Killingly, Connecticut where Mr. Morgan has purchased a farm.

Members of the A. O. U. W. Lodge, of which Mr. Morgan is a member, presented him with a purse of money in appreciation of his faithful services in that Order and with hope that this new undertaking would be a most successful one.

Mr. C. F. Cogswell, with whom Mr. Morgan has been associated for a number of years, very kindly consented to take the family to their new home to Connecticut in his auto.

AN APPRECIATION.

NEW SYSTEM IN HIGH SCHOOL LUNCH COUNTER.

A new system in running the lunch counter has been originated at the high school this year. The girls' cooking class does the furnishing, giving the scholars all home-made cooking, and no scholars are over five cents in price. Included in the list of food which may be purchased will be found sandwiches, 2 for 5 cents; salad 5c a dish; milk and crackers, 5c; cocoa, 5c; ice cream, 5c.

The amount of money taken in the first week was about $50. The first day 12 loaves of bread were cooked for sandwiches, 14 on the second, 22 on the fifth, and about 30 loaves are being cooked daily now. The new idea seems to be well received and is popular with the scholars.

WILL RESIDE IN NORRIDGEWOCK, ME.

Mr. and Mrs. Jotham S. Woods of the Parkway left town this week for Norridgewock, Maine, where they will make their home. They have been residents of this town for the past twelve years, and their removal is a source of much regret to their large circle of friends.

Mr. Woods has been for 30 years in the employ of the Thomas Todd Company of Beacon street, Boston. He has suffered for some time with lead poisoning, and by moving to Norridgewock, where he has purchased a fine farm, hopes to regain his health. Although they have made no definite plans to do so, Mr. and Mrs. Woods say that they have not given up all thought of again returning to Winchester.

MRS. WHEELER SERIOUSLY ILL.

The many friends in this town of Mrs. Harry A. Wheeler of Cliff street were pained to learn this week of her serious illness. She is at Intervale, N. H., her condition being such that removal to her home is deemed inadvisable. Her husband is at Intervale with her and recent reports are that she is falling very rapidly, little hope being held for her recovery.

The slight decrease in the High School is due to a very large graduating class last June and to a small entering class in September, 1912. During the past two years more pupils have been graduated from the High School than in any preceding two years, while a number smaller than usual has been graduated from the Wadleigh Grammar School. For the class of 1913 of the Grammar School the percent entering the High School is 90, while the average percent for the preceding five years is 87.7.

CATHERINE CALDWELL.

Mrs. Catherine (Lawton) Caldwell passed away at her home on Pond street last Saturday morning. She was born in St. John's, N. B., but came to Winchester at an early age and had lived here ever since. She was noted for her kindness of heart and in the section in which she lived she was known as the "Neighborhood Mother." Mrs. Caldwell had been ill for a long time and her death was not unexpected.

She is survived by her husband, Bertrand Caldwell, one son, Bertrand Caldwell, jr., and one grandson, Richard Caldwell; also by a sister, Mrs. Gertrude Welch, and one brother, Mr. Dennis Lawton.

The funeral took place Tuesday morning. Requiem mass was celebrated at St. Mary's church at 9:30 by Rev. John W. W. Corbett. The pall bearers were Thomas Tobin of Lowell, James Hennessey of Lowell, Clarence Bemis of Melrose, George Welch of this town, and Henry Lawton of Calvary cemetery, Montvale.

HIGH SCHOOL CANDIDATES BEGIN PRACTICE FOR COMING SEASON.

The football season has opened very promisingly at the High school this fall and a large number of candidates for the team have reported for practice. Included among those candidates who have already appeared on the field are: W. Johnson, W. Reynolds, H. Matthews, F. Locke, W. Caldwell, J. McCarthy, S. Lane, R. Eldridge, B. Cobb, P. Leonard, E. Murphy, J. Cullen, G. Sullivan, W. Bradley, R. Hight, W. Warner, H. Ogden, G. Apey, P. Heath, E. Stevenson.

WINCHESTER AUTO IN COLLISION IN STONEHAM.

Two autos, one owned by a resident of this town, were in collision near the corner of Hancock and Main streets, Stoneham, Sunday afternoon. The Winchester machine was owned and driven by Mr. George M. Byrne of Pine street. It had just left the garage near Hancock street, when it was struck by another car owned and driven by Walter C. Light of 112 Norton street, Boston. On the latter machine the searchlights were broken. The running board and rear wheel of the Byrne car were smashed. Mr. Byrne was accompanied by his wife, and there were several passengers in Mr. Light's car, but all escaped injury.

Letter carrier James W. Kelley started yesterday on his annual leave of absence.

FRANK EUGENE BARNARD.

FRANK EUGENE BARNARD.

Sudden Death of Well Known Young Winchester Lawyer and Prominent Man.

Residents of this town were shocked on Saturday evening to learn of the sudden and unexpected death of Frank Eugene Barnard, which occurred shortly after six o'clock at his home on Oxford street. His death was due to heart disease. Although he had knowledge of his affliction, he had, during the summer taken an extensive rest from business cares. On Saturday he visited his office in Boston and returned to his home at noon, the fact that he greeted many friends during the morning made his sudden death an even greater shock.

Mr. Barnard was 42 years of age. He was well known as an attorney, being law partner of ex-Representative Isaac F. Paul, with offices in the Old South Building, Boston.

He was born in Franklin, N. H., February 17, 1871, being the son of Hon. Daniel and Amelia (Morse) Barnard. After graduating from the public schools of Franklin he attended Phillips Exeter Academy, graduating from that institution in 1888. Following this he entered Dartmouth College from which he graduated in 1891.

In 1894 he was admitted to the bar in New Hampshire, and in 1895 he opened law offices in Boston and was admitted to the Massachusetts bar. He was junior member of the firm of Paul & Barnard. He is survived by his wife, who was Miss Ethel Fletcher of this town, and two young sons. He had made his residence here for the past thirteen years.

He had been prominent in politics, and was a staunch Republican. From 1898 until 1903 he was secretary of the Boston Evening High School, and during 1907 and 1908 he was a member of the Winchester Board of Selectmen. He had also been secretary of the Republican Town Committee of Winchester.

He went to the State House as the Representative of the 27th Middlesex District in 1909, and was prominent in working on the bill to regulate the business of small loans. He was a member and former director of the Winchester Country Club and a member of the Middlesex Bar Association.

The funeral services were held from the residence, No. 41 Oxford street, on Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, being largely attended by friends and business associates. The pall bearers were Messrs. John Abbott, F. Patterson Smith, Everett D. Chadwick, James Nowell, Maurice F. Brown and Addison R. Pike. As a mark of respect the flag on the Common was flown at half mast on the day of the funeral.

The burial was in the family lot in Wildwood Cemetery.

WINCHESTER UNITARIAN SOCIETY.

Mr. Metcalf's sermon on Sunday morning will be an attempt to point out some of the difficulties and responsibilities of moral and social reform involved in a conscious attempt at true progress. How progress has come in the lower ranges of life up to man and how it must come in man with reference to some revolutionary schemes which are proposed.

The general conference of Unitarian churches at Buffalo, Oct. 6-9, gives an opportunity for a delightful trip to Niagara Falls as well as an opportunity to attend the meetings. Reduced rates on the railroad have been obtained.

Arrangements are being made to have a reunion of the parish with a supper, to which all in any way connected with the parish are invited. This will take the place of the annual reception in October.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

The League held one of the best meetings ever had last Sunday night, but we did not see you there. The decorations were superb, the singing was great, and as for the speaking, you certainly missed it.

Next Sunday, Mr. Arthur Moore of North Woburn will speak on "League study classes," a very interesting subject.

The same enthusiasm and high standard is still prevalent and

A place in the ranks awaits you. Each man has some part to play. The past and the future are nothing in the face of the stern today.

THE WINCHESTER HOSPITAL.

After two years' experiment the time has come to decide the question whether or not the Winchester Hospital is to be retained on a permanent basis or be abandoned. If it has made good and has proved itself of use in the town, the community will act up to its conviction and rally to its support. At a meeting of the Winchester Visiting Nurse Association, Mr. Buttrick of Melrose presented the plans by which $126,000.00 was raised in nine days for the new Melrose Hospital, and a committee was appointed to consider plans to make possible a fund for the Winchester Hospital. The committee consists of the members of the finance committee of the Hospital, Mrs. Inez Sanborn, Mrs. Root and Mrs. Ferdinand French, with the officers of the Visiting Nurse Association as advisory committee, Mrs. Ellen Metcalf, President; Miss Pond and Miss Shattuck, Vice Presidents; Miss Alice Mason, Treasurer; Mrs. Edwin C. Gilman, Secretary.

It is proposed to have a mass meeting in the Town Hall early in October, with speakers to be announced, to present the need and the situation, and to ask for pledges to maintain the Hospital. It is hoped that the community will be interested to make the meeting a success. A long pull, a strong pull and a pull all together will accomplish the result for which the Winchester Visiting Nurse Association has been striving and will insure the maintenance of the Winchester Hospital.

FRANK A. PATCH.

Former Resident a Candidate For County Commissioner.

Men variously equipped as to public office, but few present a more convincing array of practical experience than Frank A. Patch of Littleton, one of the Republican aspirants for the office of Middlesex county commissioner. He has been assistant associate commissioner for the last six years. He has occupied these offices in his native and adopted towns: Chairman respectively of Selectmen, School Committee and Overseers of the Poor; superintendent of schools, town treasurer, tax collector, chairman of board of water commissioners during installation of plant, chairman of board of electric light commissioners during installation of plant, trustee and treasurer of Reuben Hoar, Public Library, president of Littleton Improvement Society, vice president and one of the investment committee of North Middlesex Savings Bank of Ayer, member of Massachusetts house for 1890, Senate for 1890 and 1900, serving on the committee on Liquor Laws and as chairman of committee on Agriculture, also chairman of Committee on Prisons, visiting all the penal institutions in the commonwealth. That is a sound basis upon which to build a claim for support.

Mr. Patch is well remembered as a former resident of Winchester, having made his home here for many years. He is worthy of the support of the voters as a clean cut progressive man.

"AFTER VACATION SOCIAL."

The ladies of the Friendship Class of the Methodist Episcopal Church will open their season with an "After Vacation Social," at the home of Mrs. Raymond Bancroft at 35 Myrtle terrace on the evening of Friday, Sept. 26.

Those who attended last winter's series will be pleased to be present and take part in the affair and help make plans for the coming winter. The President, Mrs. C. A. Dodge, is very desirous of a full attendance.

CALUMET CLUB NEWS.

Bowling Tournaments Will Open in Few Weeks.

Chairman George S. Littlefield of the Calumet bowling committee is actively at work with the members of his committee arranging for the fall and winter tournaments. Notices were sent to members of the club this week announcing the beginning of the usual winter tournament on October 15th, and in addition to this eagerly anticipated event, other tournaments, including prizes for the best weekly rolling, will soon be announced.

It is proposed to roll the winter tournament this season in a wholly different manner than that which has heretofore prevailed. The usual matches will be between three teams instead of the usual two. Thus each team will roll against two others each match, the highest scores to determine the winners as before. By this arrangement one of the four alleys will be left open on all evenings for the general bowling of the members and for any special tournaments, of which the committee expects to have a number. The entries for the winter tournament will be in the hands of Mr. John A. Tarbell, secretary of the committee, Oct. 1st.

It is proposed to open the season for the ladies by placing the alleys at their disposal two afternoons each week—Tuesdays and Fridays—when they can enjoy the sport from 3 to 6. Further plans in this direction will depend largely upon the amount of interest taken in the sport by the ladies. It is possible that there may be afternoon tournaments for their benefit, and the usual mixed tournament will probably be held later in the season.

GERAGHTY OPENS GARAGE.

John E. Geraghty of Woburn, who has followed the automobile business for many years, now proposes to give auto owners of this vicinity the benefit of his long experience, and has actively entered the field by opening a fine new garage and agency on Main street, Woburn.

Mr. Geraghty is opening his establishment with a full equipment of the most modern machinery for the repair and care of automobiles, and has surrounded himself with a force of competent machinists and workmen.

He has taken the agency for the Selden motor trucks, and the Buick will also be handled in its completeness, the new models for 1914 to be on exhibition in a few days.

Mr. Geraghty is catering to the auto owners throughout this section by a guarantee of prompt and satisfactory work and right prices. He is showing the line of Selden trucks at the Wakefield Reading fair this week.

BROWN-FROST.

Miss Marion Frost, who has taught in the Washington School for the past three years, was married to Mr. Louis C. Brown of Bridgewater on Saturday, September 13th, at eleven o'clock, at the home of her brother, Mr. Lloyd A. Frost of Ellsworth avenue, Cambridge. About seventy-five relatives and intimate friends were present.

The double ring ceremony was performed by Rev. William L. Worcester of the Church of the New Jerusalem, Cambridge. The bride's attendants were her sister, Miss Emma R. Frost, and her cousin, Miss Rowena H. Morse, and two little flower girls, Evelyn Frost and Natalie Benson.

Mr. and Mrs. Brown will reside in Akron, Ohio. Mr. Brown, after graduating from the Massachusetts Agricultural College in 1910, spent some months in the United States Constabulary Service in the Philippine Islands. He has recently become connected with the construction of the new municipal water system of Akron.

GREAT GAME FOR SATURDAY.

Lexington Boys With Their Life and Drum Corps Will Make It Lively.

One of the best attractions of the season will be here Saturday, September 20th, when the Minute Boys of Lexington play. This team has been very hard to match up as they play all their games at home. Only to be good sports and the offer of a big guarantee got them to come here. They are in great demand everywhere, as they play a clean game of ball and have a very fast team. The fans in Lexington are wild over them and three or four hundred of them will come here Saturday for the game. They also bring a life and drum corps of 25 pieces with them to enliven the game. It will be well worth watching. The game will start Saturday at 3:15, so get down early for seats as they will be taken quickly.

BARLOW VS. THE COUNTY RING.

There seems to be a general feeling throughout Middlesex County that the County Commissioner to be nominated next Tuesday should be a man who is free from "County Ring" influence. Erson B. Barlow is the only man who has had the courage to openly oppose the ring, and this, combined with his fine record in the House and Senate, should entitle him to a wide preferential vote.

MOTHERS' ASSOCIATION.

The first fall meeting of the Winchester Mothers' Association was held Wednesday afternoon in the High School assembly hall. Mrs. Schuyler F. Herron gave a very interesting and instructive talk on "Some things the government is doing for Home Making." Of special interest were the bulletins issued by the U. S. Department of Agriculture containing exact and useful information about the preparation and economical use of various food products.

YOUR AFFAIRS AND MINE

Nearly every day The Spectator meets a round-faced, freckled, stubby little chap whose naturally homely face simply expands into one big beautiful smile; and so bright and merry is he that when The Spectator misses the happy smile something worth while is gone for the day. The Spectator doesn't know where the boy ever learned the art, but it must have come straight from the lavish hand of Nature, and one is almost tempted to permit the entrance of a grain of envy for the joy the lad will dispense and the happiness he will gather to himself all through life, just for that merry little smile. It is a shame to call him homely, but he is, and he knows it—until that smile breaks out. Some day when the years have rolled along, that stubby, merry face will be a glad sight to someone won by the bright spirit that prompts the happy expression.

A smile and a show of friendliness are infectious and that person who comes under the magic spell, feels the kindly impetus towards happiness. Hopeless ingratitude marks an individual for his very own when he cannot or will not unbend in an atmosphere of cheeriness and meet smile with smile. There is something paralyzing in an impassive expressionless face and a cold, indifferent air; but even when we are hurt with the ill and troubles of life, a smile and a hint of friendly-feeling go far toward putting us back in line with brightness and sunshine. There is so much reserve, so much fear that we will not be sufficiently exclusive or will be criticised for over-friendliness that the incentive to look cheery is swamped, and it must be in this unwholesome soil that the frigid bow one so often meets on the streets here in Winchester and elsewhere comes into being. Or is it only habit? If so, pray let us burst the bonds of weary, bored expressions, the air of indifference and unfriendliness and get out in the open where we can expand and cultivate the habit of smiling and enjoy natural, unaffected lives. The habit of moroseness, the cultivation of unsimiling countenance is deplorable; but if only a habit, we may take heart, for back of the foolish conventional and the desire to appear sophisticated in the ways of the world there still abides an embryonic smile which may come to life sometime. And when it does, a happier lesson will have been learned, one that teaches that we have our share of responsibility toward people we simply meet as "ships that pass in the night and speak each other in passing"; that a kindly demeanor is medicinal in effect that life demands of us all the cheer we can radiate, and that in the end these are the things that make for our own best happiness.

The Spectator is brimful of enthusiasm for Winchester—full of inspiring thoughts—and he might relate several columns of things the people of Winchester ought to be proud of; things they should be thankful for, for we are citizens of no mean town. One of our slogans now is "Buy in Winchester". And now a leading churchman sounds another slogan "Go to church in Winchester". "There are a great many people in Winchester who are not connected with any church," said this churchman to The Spectator. "There are a few who go to church in Boston. While we are 'Crowing for Winchester', which is the duty of every good citizen, let us not forget that we are traveling on toward the great Eternal City, and that if we are to be citizens of that city we must first be good citizens of our home town here."

A Bigger and Better Winchester is our watchword.
Repeat it o'er and o'er.
Ever reaching forward
As never heretofore.
Then let us not be dreaming
Ere the time to do is passed,
Rather let's be up and doing;
Winchester "old" will be surpassed.
The person who wants his own way about everything is ultimately left to find it alone.

WINCHESTER BANKERS ATTEND CONVENTION.

Three Winchester bankers, together with their wives, left on Saturday last to attend the annual convention of the American Institution of Banking at Richmond, Va. Included in the party are Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Merrill of Crescent road, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert E. Stone of 8 Edgemoor road and Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Bean of Myrtle terrace.

Mr. Merrill is with the New England Trust Co., Mr. Stone with the Second National and Mr. Bean with the Merchants National, all of Boston.

The party will spend a week in the south and will visit a number of the important cities.

HOOD BUYS BAY STATE MILK COMPANY.

The Bay State Milk Company has been bought by the H. P. Hood & Son Company. This limits the big milk dealers in this town to two companies—the Hood and Whiting concerns. The purchase of the Bay State Company came about through the recent death of the owner, Mr. Frank Chandler of Medford.

SELECTMEN'S MEETING.

Location For Fireworks Factory Again Refused by the Board.

September 15, 1913.

The Board met at 7.30 p. m., all present.

At 8 p. m. a hearing was declared open in accordance with public advertisement as required by law, on the application of Ernest Borelli for permission to use certain buildings or structures to be erected in Winchester on the land of J. Fallon about 3,000 feet from Forest Circle and near the Stoneham boundary for the keeping, storage, manufacture and sale of gunpowder, dynamite and other explosives and the manufacture of fireworks and fire-works therein.

J. A. Laraway of Forest street appeared in opposition to the granting of the petition objecting to the location on the ground that it would be a source of danger to children living in the vicinity, to visitors strolling through the woods and a damage to property.

Miss Lawrence of Kendall road who owns a piece of land adjoining the Fallon property also appeared in opposition and spoke of the danger to young children and the depreciation of property.

Mr. A. P. Watt, 176 Forest street, E. W. Chase, 173 Forest street, W. W. Howe, representing Mrs. E. B. Thompson, and James Hinds, Town Engineer, also spoke in opposition to the granting of the permit on the ground of danger to persons, property and animals and the damage to property and checking of property improvement.

After discussion it was voted, that the petition of Ernest Borelli, for permit to occupy buildings as petitioned for, and the same is hereby refused.

The death of Frank E. Barnard, a former Selectman of this Town was reported and it was Voted, that this Board extend to Mrs. Frank E. Barnard, the heartfelt sympathy of its members in the death of her esteemed husband who served this Town as a Selectman and this district as a representative to the General Court, and who by his interest in and faithful devotion to Town affairs, and his kindness and sweetness of character well earned the respect and admiration of so many of our citizens; and that Mrs. Barnard be notified that as a mark of respect the flags of the Town on the Town Hall Building and Common have been ordered placed at half staff on the day of the funeral.

Fred Joy appeared before the Board and asked that the sidewalk on Mystic street abutting No. 23 be resurfaced with tar concrete. Referred to the Town Engineer for recommendations.

An estimate of the probable cost of a granolithic sidewalk on the northern side of Lincoln street was received from the Town Engineer and was considered in conjunction with the estimate presented September 8th of the cost of the same on the southerly side and it was Voted, that in the opinion of this Board, public convenience and necessity requires the grading, construction and covering with granolithic the southerly sidewalk on Lincoln street from Washington street to the westerly line of the lot of Edward A. Facey. The Superintendent of Streets was instructed to remove November 15th, the plank runways on Winthrop street crossing the gutter in front of numbers 12 and 18 and that the replacing of said runways be prohibited; also that a copy of this vote be sent to each abutter interested.

A letter was received from the Superintendent of Streets stating that the majority of the men seem inclined to wish to work the week out by Saturday noon, thus giving three nine hour days in the week; and that nine hours a day in many cases, especially on a long haul, is quite an advantage to the Town, he recommended that the plan be adopted for the remainder of the season. It was Voted, that in the opinion of the Board it is considered advisable to continue the present working day of 8 hours.

A petition was received for permission to lay a granolithic stepstone and runway across the loam space at 39 Wildwood street and granted. Also permission to lay a granolithic entrance to the garage, 12 Hancock street, across the loam space was asked for and the same was tabled to await the action of the Board on the Hancock street sidewalk.

Voted, that the Superintendent of Streets be and he is hereby instructed to remove the present obstruction in the gutter in front of the driveway from 6 Summit avenue, and that the gutter be placed in proper condition.

The Clerk was instructed to write the Postal Telegraph Company asking prompt action on the matter of locating their poles on High and Ridge streets, for which they hold the location order of this Board.

Adjourned at 10.30 p. m.

Clerk of the Board.

W. C. T. U. NOTES.

The first fall meeting of the W. C. T. U. was held at the home of Mrs. Jennie Tolman, September 12th. A large number were present, and began the fall work by enthusiastically sewing for a sale which is to be held at the Francis Willard Settlement, December 5th and 6th.

Mrs. Ella Gleason, President of Suffolk County W. C. T. U., was a welcome guest, and spoke of her many years of active W. C. T. U. work. Mrs. Gleason has recently come to Winchester and will make her home at No 10 Edgemoor road. She intends to transfer her work to Middlesex County and become a member of the Winchester Union. We trust our ladies will give her a hearty welcome.

Delegates were appointed to attend the County Convention which will be held in the First Baptist Church, Woburn, September 25th. Delegates were also appointed to the State Convention which will meet in Worcester, October 6th, 7th and 8th. A social half hour was enjoyed, the hostess serving a bountiful collation. Articles for the F. E. Willard Settlement Sale are earnestly requested. Kindly send contributions of articles or money to Mrs. Daniel Kelley, 4 Dix street.

Mr. and Mrs. William I. Palmer, Mr. and Mrs. John Abbott, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Vinal have been motoring through the White Mountains the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. George B. Davis and family have returned from Annisquam where they have been spending the summer.

Miss Olive Randlett and Miss Gertrude May left this week to attend Bradford Academy.

Mr. Coburn and family have returned from their farm at Wendell, Mass.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert E. Stone of Edgemoor road, have been spending the week in Richmond, Va., attending the annual convention of the American Institute of Banking.

A public hearing of the service given the people of Medford by the Boston Elevated and Bay State Street Railway Companies and the question of abolishing the extra five-cent fare charged by the Bay State Railway Company from Winthrop square to Oak Grove Cemetery in Medford, was held by the Public Service Commission Wednesday morning at the office of the commission, 20 Beacon street, Boston. Commission, er Fred J. McLeod, informed City Solicitor Elder and others interested in the matter for the city that it was within the power of the Bay State Street Railway Company to carry passengers for less than five cents; also that the Boston Elevated line to West Medford square would have to be extended to Playstead road and the Oak Grove Cemetery.

Mr. B. Stanwood Henderson of this town was for eight years in the employ of the late George E. Williams, the insurance underwriter, whose past life is prominent in the newspapers. Mr. Henderson says:

"The statement that Mr. Williams produced small personal business is also untrue; erroneous and unfounded, his personal production being well in excess of half a million a year. The total business written by the entire force of agents exceeded $1,250,000. This is a minor correction, yet it may be only proper to have the truth known in regard to his wonderful ability as an underwriter."

The fight for a superintendent for Malden streets was ended when Edward Ephim, a superintendent for the Malden Gas and Electric Light Company, was chosen for the position. Since the forced resignation of Clarence A. Perkins from the position a few weeks ago, over seven names have been proposed. The position carries a salary of $2,300.

Mr. and Mrs. John L. Ayer and family of Cambridge street have returned from their summer home at Quincy Great Hill.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Herbert Dwinell of Main street and Mr. and Mrs. F. Manley Ives and family of Highland avenue have returned from Cataumet, where they have been spending the summer.

Winchester, Stoneham and Woburn lodges of Odd Fellows will have union degree work this winter. Stoneham will work the first degree, Winchester the second and Woburn the third, beginning in October.

POLLITANO DIED MONDAY.

His Case Had Interested Many Physicians in This Vicinity.

Pasquale Pollitano, the Italian who was injured early in August in a collision with an automobile on Cambridge st., at the foot of Myopia Hill, died at the Winchester Hospital Monday night. His condition had been serious for the previous week, blood poisoning having developed after medical science had apparently saved him from death after receiving fatal injury.

Pollitano was riding a bicycle on Cambridge street and collided with an automobile. After the accident he was taken to the Winchester Hospital, where it was found that he was suffering from a very bad fracture of the skull. A piece of the skull bone three inches long and an inch wide was removed from his head, disclosing the brain. The opening was closed as nearly as possible by sutures, but for days every time the dressing was removed some of the brain oozed out. A celluloid covering outside the gauze dressing was later used and the hole became gradually covered with a tough skin. It was estimated that the man lost about two tablespoonfuls of brain matter.

He improved in condition, but owing to the large amount of blood lost confusion was decided upon and a cousin gave the necessary amount of blood from his own body, this operation also being successfully carried out.

For several days the patient hovered between life and death and then regained consciousness and began to improve. For over a week his condition gave promise of a complete recovery and he was able to be about the hospital grounds, but last week blood poisoning developed and notwithstanding every effort to combat it, worked through his system, causing his death on Monday.

"Clincher" Paint

We know a paint which holds to the wood like a driven nail. Seasoned lumber is porous. The pores are the empty sap-cells. White lead paint, which dries on the wood in the form of a solid, elastic film, fastens into these pores, and the whole coat of paint is actually riveted like armor-plate to the surface it decorates and protects.

RED SEAL WHITE LEAD

TOWERMEN ARE THE RAILROADS NERVES.

Duty Is To Detect Trouble and Direct Operation of Trains.

The towermen are the ends of the railroad's nervous system. As the nerves direct our muscles so the towermen direct the movements of the railroad. They also detect trouble on the road and send word of it to headquarters as our nerves do to the brain. They are a most important cog in that wonderful organization which today makes up a railroad.

Human ingenuity is bent today towards reducing as much as possible the importance of the human factor. More and more do we become mechanical, for in that direction supposedly lies greater safety. In consequence of this various checks have been thrown around the work of the towerman so that he is not in the position perhaps to do so much harm as he once was, that is, on important railroad lines. On smaller lines hundreds of human lives may still depend daily on the manner in which he performs his duties.

It was not so many years ago that the towerman even on the main stem of our great railroad system could set a signal wrong or throw a switch and send a whole train to destruction. Today on lines operated by the automatic block signal system, such as the New York, New Haven and Hartford has, it takes the men in two separate towers to set one signal. "One man must unlock the other" as the railroad people describe it. In other words, they have multiplied the safety in the human factor by two. Two brains must work wrong to accomplish such a disaster, two sets of hands perform the act which means death on the rail. But while the safety of human lives may not depend on him to quite the same degree as they once did the towerman remains a most important functionary. Let him relax his vigilance or be remiss in his duties and the whole railroad system may get a bad attack of the colic, may be tied up in a double bow knot, which will take hours to unravel.

If you have ever ridden on the observation platform of a fast train you have undoubtedly seen the man in each tower as you flashed by surveying your receding figure from one of his little windows. Perhaps you have wondered at his curiosity, remembering how many trains he sees in a day. But it is the particular business of the towerman to look carefully over your train as it goes speeding by his tower just as it was his particular business to set the signals and the switches right for it.

Often times a fast train not making many stops doesn't know that anything ails it at all until it is stopped at some place unexpectedly by an order. Then it finds that it has contracted that well known railroad ailment—a hotbox. What stopped the train? It was some towerman away back on the line, who scrutinizing the train as it went past his lonely perch saw what the train crew were unable to see and telegraphed it in. A freight car in a long train may have a loose door, a potential trouble-maker for it may sidewise passing trains. The towerman will see it if the train crew doesn't. And the reason he always looks after your train is to see if it is displaying the proper signals in the rear.

This inspection work is one of the most important features of the towerman's job. His are the eyes which really watch the actual operation of the road. From him comes the alarm if things are not working right. Up in their offices the operating officials can't actually watch the road; the towerman must do it for them.

Naturally railroad towermen are selected with extreme care. They make from $17.20 to $23 a week. Promotion for them means a job in the train dispatcher's office and perhaps some day Chief Train Dispatcher. First of all, the towerman must be a telegraph operator. He usually starts in to learn telegraphy in some railroad station while acting as a freight or ticket clerk. Some times men will give their time just in return for this tuition in telegraphy.

When a man has become proficient in telegraphy and send and receive train orders he gets a more important job, such as a ticket clerk or operator at some railroad station on a line without block signals. He will ask for a transfer to the tower service then because it means better hours and better pay.

Towermen work in eight-hour stretches from 12 to 12. The pay will vary according to length of service and the importance of his tower. The towerman has assistants called levermen. They are not telegraph operators. Their job is simply to move the switch and signal levers under the towerman's supervision. This is at busy points on the line. At Tower 75, just at the entrance of the yards at New Haven, Conn., on the New Haven's main line, there are four of these levermen besides the towerman. This is because of the many tracks and signals which must be handled there. At points where there are a lot of tracks, such as at the entrance of a yard, the signals and switches are all interlocked, which means that a certain signal must agree with a certain track condition. Under this system you can't set a wrong signal for a switch. These are always busy points for the towerman.

The towerman is at all times in communication with the train dispatcher. As has been said, he is the sensory nerves of the railroad system. If he sees a train stop for some reason he must notify the train dispatcher, perhaps a hundred miles away or more. He keeps a record of every passing train on his train sheet and this sheet is sent in every day to the superintendent of the division. If a dispatcher wants to stop a train anywhere and give it new orders he does it through the towerman.

On an electrified railroad such as the New Haven's four-track main line between New York and New Haven the towerman still has another interesting duty to perform at times. In times of emergency he can turn off the "juice" from his portion of the line and bring every train to a standstill. The feed wire supplying his part of the line passes through his tower. He might not have occasion to exercise this function once in six months, but he must at all times be ready for such an order from the load dispatcher, as the man who handles the electric current is called.

The towerman generally lives in the nearest town to his tower. The block system was introduced on the Shore Line of the New Haven road 27 years ago and there are a score of men who started in with the system. Some of these men have not had a scratch against their record in all that time.

Before his appointment the towerman is very closely examined and his record and personal habits minutely gone into. But after he goes to work in his tower he is left alone. A certain section of the railroad is entrusted to his keeping for weal or woe. There are no eyes on him as there are on the sentry. Instead, they watch him by wire. This would seem almost impossible, but it isn't. The train dispatcher gets to know the towerman as he knows his children. He knows them by number and by name as well.

"While it may not seem so," said an old train dispatcher, "the towerman is really watched every minute and he knows it. His work is so prominent in the operation of the road that any variation in it becomes instantly apparent to the train dispatcher. His job, of course, requires him to be alert and quick in action at all times. The minute he begins to drink or get careless trains begin to be delayed and the telegraph wire leading out of his tower will also tell the story. To-day under the automatic block system such as the New Haven has, the worst the negligence of a towerman can do is to delay trains probably, but from the operator's standpoint that is very serious. The Chief Train Dispatcher is watching and seeking the cause of every delay and a negligent towerman simply cannot escape detection nowadays, even though his tower may be a hundred miles away from the Dispatcher's office."

PEOPLE APPRECIATE OLD PRICE

Took Care of Customers Even at a Sacrifice.

The Horn Pond Ice Company has received many letters and personal commendation in adhering to the former prices of ice this summer. As all know last winter was extremely mild, so much so that the ice men in this section were able to store but little or any ice. The greater part of the crop had to come from northern states and because of the freight and handling charges dealers raised their prices from 30 cents of a year ago to 40 cents a ton for the present summer. The raise in price was perfectly legitimate, despite what the Boston dailies said regarding the extortion that was being practiced on the consumers. The Horn Pond Ice Company, however, did not raise the price over the previous summer, but kept the figure at 30 cents a ton. The Company purchased 60,000 tons of ice, stored in ice houses in Wilmington, some of which was sold at wholesale, but the greater part was reserved for their retail customers. With the added expense of freight, handling, etc., the Company managed to about split even. They might have charged ten cents a ton more, as all the other dealers in this section did, but they decided to give their customers the benefit. Should the coming winter be as mild as last, then, no doubt, the Company will be forced to make an increase. This is why so many kind things have been said of the Horn Pond Ice Company.

WOMEN'S CLUBS HAVE GREAT OPPORTUNITY.

Can Do Work Shaping Public Sentiment.

Within the next few weeks the women's clubs will resume their sessions and delightful programs of interest and entertainment have been provided. We have been for some time inclined to the opinion that these organizations do not fully avail themselves of their many opportunities for directing public sentiment toward needed improvements and reforms in the places in which they live. Outside the town meetings in the towns the men have but few opportunities of coming together and shaping public sentiment. In their clubs they can be of far less service to the community than the women in their clubs. Every day needed changes in a community are seen and every one agrees they are needed but what is everybody's business is nobody's business and the improvements remain unattended to because no one directs public attention to it. The women's clubs have a great opportunity for service along these lines which will make them very effective.

An amusing incident was told at a recent meeting of the Atlanta (Ga.) Woman Suffrage League by Mrs. Albert Howell. She said: "I asked a neighbor to join our league. She was quite horrified that anyone should suggest to her to leave her children and neglect her family by voting. I asked her how many bridge clubs she belonged to."

"Only three," she told me. "Yes," I replied, "I see. Each of these clubs meets once a week, taking you from home about nine hours per week, about 450 hours per year. It is not to be wondered at that you fail to find five minutes twice a year to cast your ballot." [Woman's Journal.]

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and the tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surface. We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free. F. J. CHENEY, & CO., Toledo, Ohio. PARKER'S HAIR BALM
Cures itching scalp, keeps the hair from falling out, restores the hair to its natural color, prevents hair falling out, and is the best hair dressing.

Entered at the post-office at Winchester, Massachusetts, as second-class matter.

TELEPHONE NUMBER 29

A man by the name of Gadey is president of the Cambridge School committee. A very appropriate name.

Congressman Deitrick has asked congress for an appropriation of $150,000 for a postoffice at Wakefield. This makes Winchester $80,000 appropriation appear very modest.

Why not give the people an opportunity to subscribe to the $67,522,000 bond issue contemplated by the New Haven railroad? The great profits of banking houses in underwriting bonds of this kind could be saved, and this would mean considerable to the railroad. Why not try it? One of the greatest bond issues was that of the Pennsylvania railroad some years ago, when the amount was oversubscribed three fold, so great was the demand for them by the people.

It is lamentable that something cannot be done to put a stop to the robbing of fruit trees by boys. The police are almost helpless and discouraged. When these boys are arrested and taken to court they are almost always placed on probation, and the boys seem to know that this will be the sum total of their punishment. It is exasperating to the owners of fruit trees to have them robbed repeatedly and know that but little can be done to stop it. The juvenile law appears to have a tendency toward juvenile depravity, and there is fast arising a demand for a more severe treatment of this class of offenders.

Supt. of Streets Spates did not get the appointment of superintendent of streets in Malden as many expected that he would. It went to the superintendent of the Malden Gas and Electric Light Company. For some time there has been considerable fault found with the bad condition of the streets in that city by the citizens, who hoped that a practical road builder would be called upon to look after the work. But the city government evidently preferred to show favoritism. What qualification has a superintendent of a gas plant that fits him for building streets? However, the rejection of Mr. Spates is Winchester's gain. Now why not give him a salary commensurate with his ability?

Last Saturday there was a concert by the Mission Church Band and a ball game at the State Prison in Charlestown. At the end of the concert the musicians marched down the prison yard, halted under the cell windows of Jesse Pomeroy and struck up "The Star Spangled Banner". The prisoners all arose and removed their caps, the ball players stopped and everybody turned toward the band as in military custom. That is about as near as Jesse Pomeroy will ever get to the Star Spangled Banner. Since he was twelve years of age Pomeroy has been a solitary prisoner in the jail. Had he money or friends he would have been liberated many years ago. His mother has been faithful to him, and prayed for his release, but the Boston newspapers have never given him even half a chance.

Holland, pkg rolled oats; Edward Boyle, pkg salt; Joseph Higgins, vase; Edward Donovan, pkg Ivarine.

"CIRCUS" HAS GONE.

Middlesex Fells Reservation Scene of Relief.

The remnant of a country circus which was put up in the barn of George A. McCormack of Forest street, near Border road, of the Middlesex Fells Reservation has left its way to Philadelphia much to the relief of Mr. McCormack and a number of women and other visitors to the Fells reservation who were badly frightened by the big black tame bear tied to a post.

The outfit is owned jointly by a Prof. Wiseman, who is now on his way to Philadelphia, and Loren Hall, a tenant of Mr. McCormack residing on Central avenue, Glenwood district. A seven-foot alligator reputed to be 75 years old, a half dozen monkeys and a score of trained dogs comprised the "circus". The alligator died Saturday. The "zoo" was largely visited by sightseers in the Fells during its stay.

WILL HOLD SIX HOLIDAY GERMANS.

A set of six holiday Germans will be held this winter for the younger set in town. The first will be a Halloween party in Waterfield Hall on October 31st. Others will be held on Nov. 28, Dec. 19, Jan. 23, Feb. 20 and March 20.

The parties will be matronized by the following ladies: Mrs. John Abbott, Mrs. John A. Caldwell, Mrs. Edward O. Clark, Mrs. James M. Bugbee, Mrs. Charles P. Fenno, Mrs. Edwin C. Starr, Mrs. Roland H. Sherman, Mrs. Charles T. Mosman, Mrs. Everett A. White and Mrs. Wendell M. Weston.

MRS. SARAH J. GREEN.

Mrs. Sarah Jane Green, widow of the late Thomas Green of Stoneham, died on Tuesday morning at the home of her daughter, Mrs. William H. Stinson, of 18 Myrtle street. She was 78 years old, and was the daughter of Benjamin Perry and Sarah Pierce, old residents of the town of Stoneham. She is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Stinson and Miss Lawrence Green, and a son, Fred Green of Mattie. Funeral services were held at the residence, 18 Myrtle street, Thursday afternoon at 1.30, and interment was in the family lot in Stoneham Cemetery.

REPUBLICAN CANDIDATE

Middlesex County Commissioner

I am pleased to announce myself as a candidate for Middlesex County Commissioner to the voters of Winchester, because of the fact that many of the citizens with whom I am acquainted will remember me as a former resident of the town. I am confident that my qualifications for the office are satisfactory to those who know me.

FRANK A. PATCH.

For the benefit of strangers a brief reference to my history and experience in business affairs is offered: I was born and reared on a farm and have lived in Middlesex County all my life, with the exception of five years in New York city, where I taught a school a portion of the time.

Have occupied the following offices in my native and adopted town: Chairman, respectively, of selectmen, school committee and overseers of the poor; superintendent of schools, town treasurer, tax collector, chairman of board of water commissioners during installation of plant; chairman of board of electric light commissioners during installation of plant; trustee and treasurer of Ruben Hoar Public Library, president of Littleton Public Library, president of Littleton and member of investment committee of North Middlesex Savings Bank of Ayer, Mass., member of Massachusetts House of Representatives for 1896, member of Massachusetts senate for the years 1899 and 1900, serving on the committee on liquor laws and as chairman of the committee on agriculture, also chairman of committee on prisons, visiting all the penal institutions in the commonwealth. Was County Commissioner by appointment, in 1909, to serve the unexpired term of Hon. Samuel O. Upham, deceased, and have been Associate County Commissioner for the past six years, by virtue of two successive elections by the people.

It would thus appear that I am justified in appealing to the voters as a candidate, by virtue of knowledge gained by six years' experience in county affairs, and upon the sound principle of promotion. I believe that scarcely anyone questions the justice of a County Commissioner being elected this year from Northern Middlesex, the section in which I live.

I fully realize the duties and importance of the office. If nominated and elected, my whole time and best service will be devoted to the welfare of the County.

Very respectfully,
FRANK A. PATCH,
Advertisement. Littleton, Mass.

WHAT ARE WE COMING TO.

The annual issue of the Acts and Resolves of the Legislature is now in the hands of the public. It is the largest document of the kind ever issued and we say without doubt the most absurd one, in many respects, ever put out. It adds commission after commission to a state already overburdened with commissions. It adds immensely to every city and town in the Commonwealth in clerical and other expenses. It makes it almost prohibitive for a corporation or an individual to do business in the state. It makes it almost impossible for a boy or girl under 16 years of age to enter any mechanical or mercantile industry. The absurdity of many of the enactments are being shown up as they develop when attempts are made by school and other authorities to follow them.

WILL GIVE FINE CONCERT.

The Malden Municipal Band is working hard to give the Daughters of Isabella the best concert at their entertainment next Wednesday evening that this town has ever had. The affair is to be given by Santa Maria Court. There will be a concert from eight until ten-thirty and dancing until midnight.

Mr. Frank C. Conant, said to be one of the best tenor singers in the state, has been engaged and will render several selections. Besides Mr. Conant, a xylophone solo and singing by a quartette will be among the attractions in addition to the band music. A large orchestra will furnish the music for the dancing.

NEW HOPE CHURCH.

Both pastor and choir of the New Hope Church have had a month's rest and returned Sunday to their places in the church. The president of the choir, Mrs. W. P. Jones, who has for some time been unable to attend to her duties on account of sickness in her family has also returned to her post. Through the kindness of Miss Roberta White the inside of the church has been thoroughly renovated this summer.

THE READING FAIR.

The detailed program of the Reading Fair to be held under the auspices of the Quannapowitt Agricultural Association Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, Sept. 23, 24, & 25, at the Reading-Wakefield Fair grounds, indicates that the management of the fair intend to put on the "biggest and best show" held in Eastern Middlesex County for a decade.

More than $5000 in purses, trophies, prizes, and premiums will be awarded to the winners in the horse races, grangers prizes contest, open baby show, horticultural, agricultural, cattle, poultry, livestock, and women's exhibits. Three mile heat horse races will be held on Tuesday and Wednesday afternoon for $300 purses with 150 entries from the grand circuit New England Driving Club. Thursday afternoon will be devoted to the matinee horses with six half mile races. Running races will enliven the tedious delay between the heats each afternoon.

Old fashioned plowing and drafting matches and a workhorse parade will open the fair on Tuesday morning Sept. 23. Wednesday is "Traders' Day" and Thursday is "Governors' Day." Gov. Foss, Lieut. Gov. Walsh will be guests. An open baby show in which Physical appearance as well as beauty will count for points, will be a feature with $200 in cash prizes as an attraction.

A full military band will play all day every day. A triple parachute drop will be given in connection with a balloon ascension each afternoon with a high class vaudeville and a novel "mardi gras" for the sporting element who tire of the horse races, and a collection of prize cattle, poultry, livestock, fruit, flowers, and vegetables, that have been gathered together from the countryside for miles around.

Every patron of the fair will get his money's worth at a net cost of a quarter of a dollar.

HOLLIS STREET THEATRE.

There is but little doubt that the most popular of all the early season attractions in Boston will be Julia Sanderson in "The Sunshine Girl" at the Hollis St. Theatre, where that daintiest of musical-comedy stars comes for a long engagement commencing Monday evening, Sept. 22. Miss Sanderson who has captivated playgoers in many tuneful musical entertainments such as "The Arcadians" and "The Siren" is coming to Boston this time as a star, Charles Frohman her manager having elevated the little artist to this high position last season when he produced "The Sunshine Girl" in New York where it scintillated and rivaled the orb it is named after, for over six months. Miss Sanderson plays Dora Dale in her own sweet dainty fashion. Joseph Cawthron is at his best as Schlump and has a song "You Can't Play Every Instrument in The Band" which is destined to become the popular rage. Alan Mudie is the heir and Basil Foster is Lord Bicester. Others in the cast are Florence Morrison, William Sillery and Queenie Visser. The chorus and cast number over 100 persons and the production is a magnificent one. Matinees will be given on Wednesdays and Saturdays during the Boston engagement.

FAVORS DAY LABORERS.

Editor of the Star:—

In last week's STAR I was surprised to read that a delegation of prominent citizens appeared before the Board of Selectmen and strongly urged for an increase of salary for the Superintendent of Streets on the grounds that the Superintendent might go to the City of Malden. The item as it appeared gave the impression to many as they read through the lines that the City of Malden, through its officials, had considered his application most favorably, and he was about as good as gone from the town of Winchester, if they did not heed this timely warning. Now for the benefit of those who might be misinformed and draw two meanings out of the same thing, we will give you the facts of the case as they appear in a Malden paper, in regard to the newly elected superintendent of streets. Mr. Edward P. Elphin was the man elected for superintendent of streets on Thursday night, by the Street and Water Commissioners, on the fourth ballot. On the first three ballots Commissioner Hall voted for Elphin, Commissioner Devir for Maloney of Watertown, formerly of Melrose, and Commissioner Lonergan for G. M. Clukas. On the fourth ballot Commissioner Devir voted for Elphin, and he was elected.

You can judge the case by reading two sides, then use your own judgment in regard to any increase in salaries. I do not believe it is good judgment to retain a dissatisfied man, for the work would surely show itself at the end of the year, which I hope is not the case. Furthermore, if there is any increase in salary, I hope the day laborers will be considered in the town of Winchester first of all, as they are the men who perform the labor and are entitled to recognition as such.

P. E. FITZGERALD,
165 Washington Street.

PROGRESSIVES WILL BE REPRESENTED AT POLLS.

Mr. William J. Daly, Chairman Selectmen of Winchester, Winchester, Mass.

Dear Sir:—As per understanding with the Selectmen: "That the Selectmen would after the opening of the Polls, appoint two Ballot Clerks to represent the Progressive Party at the Primaries and on Election day, and your request that I send you the names of two Progressives who would be satisfactory to our party (whom you have promised to appoint) thus carrying out the will of the Selectmen. By the authority of my associates I request that you appoint Edward F. Parmelee and Eustace H. Brigham, both registered voters of Winchester. These men will be on hand at the opening of the Polls at the Primary and on Election day ready for business.

Very respectfully,
Andrew J. Solis, Chairman
Progressive Town Committee.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

"The Ninety and Nine", one of the most successful romantic melodramas, will be John Craig's attraction at the Castle Square next week. Its dialogue and incidents are filled with the rustic flavor that playgoers like so well. Its heroine is the belle of the village, and its hero a young man from New York.

The entire play will be well staged at the Castle Square, and the cast will include Mr. Craig's entire company. Tom Silverton, the hero, will be played by Mr. Carleton, and Miss Doris Olson, who has already become a favorite with Boston theatre-goers will appear as Ruth Blake, the heroine. There are some twenty other characters, and they will all be cast in the capable hands of Mr. Craig's players.

NATIONAL THEATRE.

The big feature at the National Theatre for the week of September 22 is the Kitamura Troupe of Japanese. These wonderful little brown men from the land of flowers offer a sensational juggling exhibition that is quite out of the ordinary. The children will certainly enjoy Hallway's band of trained monkeys, whose wonderful display of human intelligence has deceived even the most learned scientists. Marion Murray and Hans Robinson Company present that one act farce comedy, "The Judge's Son", with the ability that befits these well known vaudeville artists. Others are Jennings and Dorman, in their skit, "A Little Bit of English"; the Two Quaker girls, petite singers of classy songs; Clara Maye, a comedian of exceptional ability; the Torrelley's bicycle act is a real hummer.

WILL SPEND YEAR IN ARIZONA.

Miss Helen Thompson of Ridge street will leave town next Wednesday for Phoenix, Arizona, where she will remain for the next year, visiting her sister Mrs. Frederick Henshaw.

Rev. John H. Mansfield and Mrs. Mansfield of Crescent road quietly observed their 58th wedding anniversary Tuesday. Mrs. John N. Mason of Mt. Pleasant street is a daughter of the venerable couple.

Corot — Part 1. Jean Baptiste Camille Corot was born in Paris, of humble parentage, July 28, 1796. He did not follow his inclination until he was 22, when he became a pupil of Michallon, then of Bertin, and finally completed his studies in Italy. His method was to work in the country in summer, early and late, in the open air, to catch those effects only to be seen at dawn, at sunset, and by moonlight, in which he delighted. He saw and portrayed nature with his own eyes in a manner replete with poetry and fancy, in which style he has found followers in Tryon, Diaz, and others. He died in Paris February 22, 1875.—Bryan's Dictionary.

THE BOSTON THEATRE.
It has been a good many years since such a scene of patriotic enthusiasm has been witnessed in a theatre as was enacted last Monday evening at the Boston Theatre on the occasion of the first presentation of the New England rural comic opera, "The Courtin'" at the new patriotic flag song, "Old Glory." The orchestra arose en masse after the rendering of the first chorus by the people on the stage and joined in singing the "Old Glory" chorus time and time again.

The production and cast was most satisfactory in every way and Messrs. Atkinson-Brown Company, the producers, have to their credit a genuine comic opera novelty that is bound to attract crowded houses wherever it is presented.

ARLINGTON WINCHESTER

EQUAL SUFFRAGE DEPARTMENT.

Conducted by the Winchester League.

It has been frequently stated by opponents of equal suffrage that no good has come of it in states where women have been given the right to vote, and they support their statement by quoting the opinion of some individual who pretends to know the whole situation. The state of public opinion is pretty accurately shown by the acts of legislators, surely a more reliable indication of prevailing sentiment than the more or less biased opinion of an individual.

The Woman's Journal, in its last issue shows what the last Legislature in California, where women vote, has done. Surely, as it says, "A magnificent batch of legislation." It also adds that the College Equal Suffrage League of Northern California says, in a recent statement, that these were the only measures endorsed by the women voters. We give a general summary without going into details.

1. An act providing for the abatement of houses of prostitution, making such houses a nuisance and enjoining the proprietors and also the owners, lessees or agents of such houses.

2. An equal guardianship act, making father and mother equal guardians of minor children.

3. The bastardy act, requiring fathers and mothers to support illegitimate children.

4. Minimum wage act, regulating the employment of women and children; establishes an industrial welfare commission to investigate and deal with such employment. This commission has power to fix a minimum wage.

5. An act limiting the hours of labor of women.

6. An act regulating the employment of children. It provides that no minor under eighteen years shall be employed more than eight hours in one day, and no minor between the ages of twelve and fifteen shall be employed for wages or profit. Some exceptions are made.

7. An act defining the crime of rape. This act raises the age of protection to eighteen years.

8. An act raising the penalty for rape—maximum, from ten to fifty years.

9. An act establishing a State Training School for girls, with an appropriation for the same.

10. An act providing for the free use of all public schoolhouses and property, and for establishing a civic center at each and every schoolhouse in the State.

11. An act making kindergarten a part of the public school system.

12. An act providing for the payment of pensions to public school teachers' pension fund.

13. An act establishing a standard of weights and measures.

14. The net container act, providing for indicating on the label the net quantity of food stuff in a container.

15. An act providing for the State regulation of nurses.

16. An act providing for cases in which a married woman may sue and be sued separately from her husband, as when her separate property is concerned, her right to homestead property, etc.

Such legislation shows where California was when men alone did the voting and the legislating. In many other states there is the same crying need for such beneficial legislation.

In Massachusetts the equal guardianship law was only secured after fifty years of earnest effort. The women of California have only been voting less than two years! And this is only one of the many acts which they felt were imperatively needed.

The acquisition of woman's point of view certainly seems to clear the vision and the whole community is elevated and uplifted by her participation in the law-making.

The above was in the hands of the printer on Thursday of last week, but too late for publication. It will, therefore, be seen that it was not written as an answer, in any way, to the article published in that issue of the Star signed "Anti Suffragist". It would, however, have proved interesting reading side by side with that, since it simply gives actual facts, and shows that there were not "plenty of laws already." "We know that American men are quite ready to pass laws in favor of women and children," says Anti Suffragist. It seems such readiness had not been shown in California prior to women's voting; and it is said that Massachusetts is sadly behind in such legislation. What most thinking men and women feel, we believe, is that things are generally better done when they work together, doubtedly killed. When the engineer whistled for him he assumed that as he was walking on the outward track he was safe. The accident caused considerable excitement about the centre, and that together with the work going on, which blocked the crossing to cars and autos except for one small cross-way, congested the centre very much and made it a rather dangerous place for the rest of the day.

And as in pankhurst thought she stood, All in a belmont mood, Milholland came with eyes aflame And drummond through the wood.

She had her cristobel in hand, With brannan axe and pen, She smote and stabbed the bogie-man Again and yet again.

One, two! One, two! And through and through Her brannan axe went snicker-snack! And then along came politics To pat her on the back.

"And hast thou slain the bogie-man? Come to my arms, my cristobel! We'll go to jail, and the bogie-man May go to—well!"

B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE.

George McManus, the famous creator of "The Newly Weds," at the antics of whom so many New Englanders have laughed every morning, will make his vaudeville debut at B. F. Keith's Theatre next week. Mr. McManus will be assisted by Mrs. McManus, and will present a brand new and unique cartoon novelty, entirely different from anything of its kind ever seen on the American stage. Another star feature of the week will be Digby Bell, the popular legitimate comedian, who will appear in a new comedy entitled "It Happened in Topeka." Other strong features of the week will be the Carl Eugene Troupe of sensational acrobats in startling feats in midair; the Florentine Singers, who present a splendid series of operatic selections; Newhoff and Phelps, two singing comedians, in a brand new sketch; John T. Murray, the lightest of light comedians; the Gardner Trio of terpsichorean experts in the latest society dances; F. Artusa, the world's greatest hand balancer; the Pathe Weekly, world's current events in motion pictures; and many others yet to be announced.

THE WORD HELL.

A Little Book That Contains Some Startling Information.

A little book selling at only five cents, postpaid, is having a very wide circulation—running up into the millions. It contains some very startling information respecting the meaning of the word Hell. It claims to demonstrate, both from the Hebrew and the Greek of our Bible, that Hell is NOT a place of eternal torment, but merely another name for the TOMB, the GRAVE, the STATE OF DEATH. It affects to show that man was not redeemed from a far-off place of eternal torture, but that he was REDEEMED from the GRAVE at the cost of his Redeemer's LIFE and that the Scriptural Hope, both for the Church and the World, is a resurrection hope based upon the death and resurrection of Jesus. The book is certainly worth the reading. The information it furnishes is certainly valuable, far beyond its trifling cost. Order it at once from the Bible and Tract Society, 17 Hicks Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

THE GOLDEN CALF.
Exodus 32:15-20, 30-35—Sept. 21.
"Little children, keep yourselves from idols."—1 John 5:21.

THE Israelites experienced a severe trial of faith and obedience soon after entering into covenant relationship with God. In this trial they failed utterly. The Covenant was broken. However, after punishing them, God graciously renewed the Covenant.

The circumstances of this testing are part of this lesson. After making the Covenant, Moses, by Divine direction, went up into Mt. Sinai, taking Joshua with him. He was gone forty days. His prolonged absence gave room for the cultivation of faith, patience, trust.

The Israelites remembered the trying experiences through which they had passed. The Egyptians were behind them; the Amalekites might renew their attack. What would they do without Moses, whose upheld hands brought them God's favor and victory?

Here worldly wisdom came in. Aaron was perplexed as to how Some Christians use the cross to keep the people crucified to assist faith. from utter discouragement. Apparently they were unable to trust the God whom they could not see. The leaders took counsel together and determined to make a representative of Jehovah—an image which the people could use as an instrument of worship.

We are not to suppose that the Israelites recognized the golden calf as their God Jehovah, but used it merely as a symbol, just as the heathen use their idols as representations of their gods, and as some Christians use the crucifix—not to worship, but to assist faith and hold attention.

Today's lesson seems clearly to indicate that God was greatly displeased with their symbolic representation of Himself. One of His commands had been, "Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven image," to bow down before it and worship it as a symbol.

Making the Golden Calf.

We are not to suppose that the calf was made of solid metal. Probably it was made of either clay or wood, and then covered with molten gold, which in turn was graven or tooled. Having made the idol, the people rejoiced in it as an evidence of God in their midst, and gave themselves up to a season of feasting and dancing.

After forty days, Moses came down from the mount with the tables of the Law. He heard the people shouting, and then beheld them worshipping the golden calf. Moses was justly angry; for he was the mediator between God and Israel—the representative of both, charged by God with the responsibility of that nation, and he realized that a serious crime against the Covenant had been committed.

Moses dashed the tables of the Law into fragments, indicating that the Covenant had been broken. Armed with Divine authority, he let fall upon the people a just penalty for their rapid retrogression into sin. Then he went to God in prayer, and besought that, if the penalty of this sin was the casting off of Israel, he might himself be blotted out instead.

"Keep Yourselves From Idols."

Let us apply the lesson to Spiritual Israel. After the Christian has left the world, passed the bitter experiences of Marah, had manifestations of God's favor, partaken of the Bread from Heaven, and entered into full covenant relationship with God—there comes a time when he must walk by faith, not by sight. If he fails to learn this lesson, as did the typical Israelites, it will be a serious matter.

This making of images which divert and absorb our worship of God is one of Spiritual Israel's greatest tests. The golden calf which some set up is business, to which they sacrifice both time and energy. The love of money and of things which money can procure leads into idolatry, and another idol—Bacchus—thoroughly breaks our covenant.

Others idolize the opposite sex, giving all they possess for its favor and fellowship. They make the great mistake of worshipping the creature more than the Creator, as the Apostle explains in the book of Romans.

Still another idol is sectarianism, against which St. Paul warned the Church. (1 Corinthians 3:3-5). The same principle we may apply today. If one says, I am of Calvin, Luther, Wesley, are these not evidences of carnality? Is there not serious danger of worshipping the human institutions bearing these names, and thus of having something come between the Christian and his God?

Christendom's creeds are Christian traditions respecting the Truth. God's purpose evidently was that His people should have no creed but the Bible as a whole. They were to search the Scriptures daily, to ascertain God's teachings, and thus to grow in grace and knowledge. Christians should destroy their creeds, which misrepresent God's Character and Plan.

REV. JOEL H. METCALF
Who Has Become Distinguished in Astronomy

REV. MR. METCALF DISCOVERS A COMET.

Has Discovered Two Others, Has Five Medals in Recognition Of His Work.

It is entirely appropriate that a minister of the Gospel should study the heavens, if for no other reason than to equip himself thoroughly as a "sky pilot," says A. J. Philpott in the Boston Globe.

But in point of fact the theological schools have never laid any particular stress on the study of astronomy as a preparation for the ministry, nor have ministers ever particularly distinguished themselves as astronomers until Rev. Joel H. Metcalf of Winchester announced a few weeks ago that he had discovered a new comet, which is now known all the world over as Metcalf's comet.

And Metcalf's comet is being watched and studied and recorded in every well-equipped observatory in the Northern world of today, and the Harvard Observatory has been publishing almost daily since Rev. Joel H. Metcalf discovered the comet, the results of the observations made in the principal observatories of Germany, France, England and the United States. In fact, Metcalf's comet has very largely dominated the attention of astronomers since it was discovered on the evening of Sept. 1 by Rev. Joel H. Metcalf from a little, rude observatory in his camp at South Hero, Vt.

Immediately after he discovered this latest heavenly wanderer in the northern sky, about 10 degrees above the horizon and almost directly under the North Star, Rev. Joel H. Metcalf wired the facts to Prof. Pickering at the Harvard observatory, and the latter at once cabled the great German observatory at Kiel, which latter notified all the principal observatories of Europe. Then the principal observatories in this country were notified by telegraph of the discovery, and telescopes were at once turned at the point in the heavens where the comet had appeared and its every movement from that time has been carefully noted and recorded. It isn't visible to the naked eye as yet.

But how comes it that a Unitarian minister should make this discovery? Where were the professional astronomers with their big telescopes on the evening of Sept. 1?

These questions have naturally arisen in the minds of many people, but after you have seen and become a little acquainted with Rev. Joel H. Metcalf you are not in the least surprised that he should have discovered this comet, especially after he tells you that he has discovered two other comets in years gone by—one an annual—and that he has discovered several small planets, known as asteroids, in our solar system, and that he made with his own hands, a few years ago the largest photographic telescope in the country for the Harvard Observatory—a 16-inch double.

He Is a Keen Astronomer.

Seeing him at his home on Crescent road in Winchester, not far from the little Gothic church in which he preaches Unitarian doctrine each Sunday you may quickly become conscious that the youthful-looking, smooth-faced Rev. Joel H. Metcalf is one of the keenest astronomers in this country and that he is respected as such by authorities all the world over, and that he is probably much more famous as an astronomer than as a divine—as a minister of the Gospel.

But this is not surprising, for one astronomical discovery touches the popular imagination more deeply than would even a new religious doctrine or 1000 sermons.

When asked how he happened to discover this particular comet, he said:

"I was at my camp at South Hero, Vt., and on the evening of Sept. 1 I went into the little observatory I have flitted up there and in which I had set up my comet seeker. I turned the comet seeker on the space between the North Star and the horizon. It was about half past eight in the evening. As I was working slowly over that part of the sky I came across this comet. It was rather faint and nebulous and without a tail, as far as I could see.

"Unlike Halley's comet this comet was moving in an opposite direction from the earth, and in fact it is outside of the earth's orbit. It is apparently a small comet, but it is not possible to tell very much about it yet. I notified Prof. Pickering at the Harvard Observatory and he notified all the other observatories."

"What is this comet fonder you speak of?"

"That is a broken telescope—one in which the lower section in which is the eyepiece, is at right angle to the upper portion, with a prism that refracts the light from the outer lens into the eyepiece. This enables you to sit down and scan the heavens much more easily than with a regular telescope. When it is mounted you can revolve the telescope and tip the upper part at any angle and maintain the eyepiece at practically the same level. I call it my comet seeker because I use it largely for that purpose."

"What particular interest attaches to this comet?"

"Only the interest that attaches to comets in general. We know very little about comets. Astronomers are now trying to determine the orbit of this comet to see whether it travels in an ellipse like Halley's comets and others or whether it sort of runs wild in a parabola or a hyperbola. The queer thing about these comets is how a body so tenuous as most of them appear to be even in the head, can have motion, or can last at all. The head of this comet is so tenuous you can see the stars through it, as you can through Halley's comet."

"How do you account for the fact that it has light?"

"The only way you can account for it is on the theory of radio activity. Somebody has said that Halley's comet consists of what would be equal to about six square miles of our atmosphere. Just fancy six square miles of our atmosphere rushing through space at the rate of speed that Halley's comet travels at. I don't quite agree with that theory, for it must have some inherent power, and motion of its own—something that is a source of light—some substance that we know nothing about, for otherwise it would become exhausted. When you see the tail of a comet it means that the substance it consists of is being burned up by the sun. I observed Halley's comet when it was last here one night and the head was below the horizon, but the tail reached to the zenith."

"How comes it that this comet is going in an opposite direction from the earth and the other planets?"

"That can be accounted for only on the ground that when it departed from the original nebula of which it was a part the impetus it received sent it off in that way."

Space Is Full of Flying Meteors.

"Do you believe that the space between the earth's atmosphere and the moon is full of flying meteors?"

"There must be a great many of them there, for I have noticed when I am scanning the sky at night, if I hold the telescope at a given point for an hour I will see on an average of three meteors. Of course, the meteors are not seen until they strike the earth's atmosphere, but if at one particular point in the sky you can see three in an hour what must the number be in the whole sky. Most of them burn right up the moment they strike the earth's atmosphere."

"What other heavenly bodies have you discovered?"

"I have studied the movements of some 35 small planets—asteroids—between Mars and Jupiter. In all there are about 400 of these small planets and they are very interesting and are being studied very carefully by astronomers. One of these small planets makes with the sun and Jupiter a perfect equilateral triangle, showing that it is subject to exactly the same gravity force as Jupiter. It offers a problem in astronomy that has never been worked out. I have also discovered a number of variable stars."

"When did you take up the study of astronomy?"

"When I was about 14 years old. It has been my relaxation very largely by my other studies."

As Mr. Metcalf is 47 years old he has been studying astronomy for 33 years, and as he says, it is one of the most fascinating studies in the world. But it hasn't apparently interfered with his other studies, for there is little in the field of modern scientific knowledge with which he is not more or less familiar, and he is as ready to discuss the philosophy of Bergson or the theology of Jonathan Edwards as he is astronomy. He is in the broadest sense a student, and he also has an undoubted genius for mechanics.

He has an observatory beside his house in Winchester which does not look in the least like the ordinary observatory. It looks like a tent. But after you enter this little house he pulls a rope and one half the roof rolls back. Then he pulls another rope and the other half rolls back, giving free play to the double telescope that is mounted in the centre of the floor.

The whole arrangement shows the experienced, practical astronomer. The tubes of the two telescopes lie one on top of the other so that both are operated by the same mechanism. The under one is a seven-inch Clark refractor and the upper one a 12-inch siderer, photographic telescope. The latter instrument Mr. Metcalf made himself and with it he and his two boys have made hundreds of photographs of the night sky and on many of these are his own particular discoveries. Every clear night the two boys are engaged in this work, over which they are almost as enthusiastic as their father.

In photographing the stars the movement of the earth on its axis must be taken into consideration.

This is regulated by means of a clock mechanism regulated by weights, so that once the photographic telescope is pointed at a star and the mechanism started it is not necessary to bother further except to shut off the exposure at the proper time. It is delicate work and work that requires experience and fine judgment in the matter of light and the sensitiveness of photographic plates.

Photographing the Heavens.

It should be known that the principal observatories of the world have been engaged for years in photographing the heavens, each covering an allotted space, and that more than 2,000,000 stars from the first to the tenth magnitude have been thus examined, definitely located, and cataloged, and that this catalog will be jointly printed and published in a short time. This achievement of modern astronomical science, aided by photography, would amaze the earlier astronomers, such as Galileo, Huygens, Halley, Newton or Herschel.

When asked if he had made any particular study of Mars, and if he believed there was a high form of life and artificial canals on that planet, Mr. Metcalf said:

"I haven't made any particular study of Mars, but from what observations I have made I am inclined to doubt that there are artificial canals on the planet. There are perturbations on the surface of Mars not unlike those we see on the surface of the moon, but I am inclined to think that these lines, which have been seen by some astronomers, are in the nature of optical delusions."

"It is a well known fact that when you look steadily through a telescope for any length of time at the surface of a planet you begin to see lines, very faintly, of course, but my belief is that such lines are due to the strain in the eye. And another thing, these single lines will frequently seem double. So when we hear people say that where there was a single canal to be seen on the surface of Mars there frequently appears in the space of a few minutes a double canal. I think it is due to this physical peculiarity or weakness of the eye and perhaps also to refraction and to light waves."

"As far as life on that planet is concerned I am inclined to doubt if life as we know it could exist on Mars. There may be a form of life we know nothing of conditioned to that planet and to all planets, and to all heavenly bodies. I know a thoughtful man who believes that the sun is inhabited and that its light and heat all come from the atmosphere that surrounds the sun. That does not seem possible when you consider the power and intensity of the sun's heat and light."

Is There Life on Mars?

"The only life we can rationally form any opinions of is the kind of life we are familiar with on this planet, and I doubt if such life could exist on Mars or any of the other planets. Take the moon for instance, without any atmosphere; such life as we know could not exist on the moon. At the same time it would be foolish to suppose that the power which produces life here is not capable of using the other heavenly bodies for a definite purpose and it does not seem reasonable to suppose that these bodies are simply inert masses of gas or matter rolling through space without purpose."

"When you consider infinite space and all it contains the mind is appalled. We are not yet—from our knowledge and experience here—capable of comprehending what it means. We deduce certain laws from our experiences and observations of life here, but whether those laws would apply to another planet we know not. There are certain mathematical, and chemical, and physical laws which seem to be fundamental and it is possible that by a close study and application of those laws and principles we may be able to arrive at more satisfactory conclusions regarding the Sideral universe, but as yet it is very largely a matter of speculation."

As has been said, astronomy is and has been very largely a matter of recreation with Rev. Joel H. Metcalf, for he is a seriously busy man with his ministerial work and duties and he is very deeply interested and concerned in the sociological and the spiritual problems which confront the world today. In point of fact about the only time he devotes to astronomy is his vacation period, and it was during this period that he made his latest discovery. His boys have become so interested in astronomy that they carry forward the photographic work with little assistance from him.

Yet to show how highly regarded he is as an astronomer it is only necessary to point out that he is chairman of the visiting committee of the Harvard Observatory and that he has been awarded five medals for astronomical discoveries, including one a few years ago from the Astronomical Society of Mexico. He is a member of the Astronomical Society of America. That gives a fair idea of the astronomical side of this man.

He also has a fine record of achievement as a divinity student and minister. He was born at Meadville, Penn., Jan. 4, 1866, and graduated from the Meadville Theological School in 1890. He attended the Harvard Divinity School that same year. He got a degree of PhD from Allegheny college in 1892 and studied at the University of Oxford in 1903. He was ordained in 1890, and was pastor of a church in Burlington, Vt., from 1893 to 1903. He then accepted a call to Taunton where he remained until 1910 when he came to the Unitarian church at Winchester where he has been pastor since.

A CONVINCING SILENCE TEST.

Two motorists were discussing the respective merits of their cars with great vehemence, according to a story going the rounds. Finally, one said: "Why, my car's so quiet that—see that dog over there? I can run over him without touching him, and he won't wake up!"

The dog was calmly lying in the middle of the road, but to all outward appearances seemed no less nervous or dead than most dogs.

"It can't be done!"

"Bet you $5 I can do it!"

"I'll take you." It looked like easy money.

So the car was cranked, and went slowly and fairly quietly over the dog. The animal didn't stir an inch. Back at the curb again, $5 changed hands.

Then the motorist with the quiet car started to repeat the stunt. But this time he opened the cut-out and pressed on the Klaxon button. In all the racket without a wobble or a waggle, the dog lay still.

"Say, you, that dog's dead!"

"Sure, I ran over him coming in!"—Automobile Topics.

Editor Hoag Confesses

"For many years, as Editor and Proprietor of the Pine Plains, N.Y., Herald, I have advertised Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy. While I enjoyed not only the business relationship but the personal friendship of Dr. Kennedy, I have never, until now, paid him a long standing obligation. For many years, as my friends so well know, I suffered excruciating pains from rheumatism. Many were the nights when it was impossible to sleep. Without much faith, I admit, I tried as a sort of last resort, a bottle of Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, just as thousands of others had done before, and like them I found permanent relief. Favorite Remedy has stood the test of time and I believe it is the best medicine in existence for effectually expelling the cause of rheumatism—uric acid. My regret is that I have neglected to make this frank confession long ago. It makes my kidneys do their work properly, tones up the liver and makes one feel that life is worth living. I publicly and earnestly advise all my friends who are suffering from troubles that arise from unhealthy kidneys and liver, to get a bottle of Favorite Remedy at once. There is no use in putting it off as I did. S. T. HOAG, Editor."

MRS. CARIE F. WHEELER

MRS. HARRY A. WHEELER.

As President of The Fortnightly Was Prominent in all Civic Affairs.

The death of Mrs. Harry A. Wheeler, which occurred at Intervale, N. H., last Saturday afternoon, came as a shock to many of the Winchester people who were not aware that she had been gradually growing weaker during the past few weeks.

Mrs. Wheeler (Carrie Emerson) was born Sept. 3, 1870, at Somerville, Mass. She was educated in the public schools of Medford, graduating from the High School, after which she took a special course at the Emerson School of Oratory. On October 11, 1893, she was married to Harry A. Wheeler, of Wellington, Mass., and he and two sons survive her. Shortly after they were married they came to Winchester, where they have since made their home.

Mrs. Wheeler was an active member of the First Congregational Church, the Mothers' Association and the Visiting Nurse Association of this town, and was also one of the "Daughters of Massachusetts". She was long a devoted member of "The Fortnightly" and served as its president from 1907-1909, during which time her characteristic enthusiasm and interest in all civic affairs showed in the steady progress and increased membership of the club.

On April 12, 1908, the city of Chelsea was almost destroyed by fire. Early the next morning, Mrs. Wheeler divided the club into sections, soliciting was begun and enormous bundles of clothing and furniture were dispatched to the stricken city. An all day sewing meeting was called in which 900 finished garments were made for the sufferers. The Fortnightly also raised $250 for the same object and all of this was accomplished very largely as the result of Mrs. Wheeler's energetic leadership.

She was deeply interested in the Vacation School and the Scholarship Fund and was the founder of the fund for the equipment of the playgrounds. Near the close of her first year as president, the Biennial Convention of the National Federation of Women's Clubs was held in Boston, at which time she served as Chairman of the Platform Committee. This was a temporary committee but Mrs. Wheeler's work was so efficient that a permanent committee was formed, called the "Committee on Meetings", of which she was made chairman.

At the annual meeting of the Mass. State Federation last spring she was elected a director.

No better testimony can be given to the value of the service she rendered in whatever line of work she was interested than is expressed in the words of one under whom she served—"I had so much confidence in Mrs. Wheeler's ability and judgment that, when I knew she was on a committee, I gave the result no further thought."

The funeral services were held from her home, 6 Cliff street, on Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, and the large attendance of friends and the profusion of flowers testified to the love and esteem in which she was held by all who knew her.

The services were conducted by Rev. J. E. Waterhouse of Reading, who married Mr. and Mrs. Wheeler, assisted by Rev. Frank W. Hodgdon of the First Congregational Church, Winchester. Music was furnished by the Adelpi Quartette. The pall bearers were Messrs. Wm. R. Marshall, J. C. Kennedy, George Neiley and Francis E. Getty.

The State Federation was officially represented by the president, Mrs. George W. Perkins; the "Daughters of Massachusetts" by the president, Mrs. Austin Wellington; "The Fortnightly" by the president, Miss Maude Folts and Mrs. Wm. M. Belcher, who also represented the Mission Union of the Congregational Church.

Among the many beautiful floral tributes was a large spray of chrysanthemums—yellow and white—the Fortnightly colors.

The burial was in the family lot in Wildwood.

WILL PLAY MINUTE MEN SATURDAY.

Owing to the heavy rain of last Saturday base ball was of course impossible, and the local team will play the Minute Men of Lexington, on Manchester Field tomorrow afternoon as scheduled for last week. This team promises to be one of the best attractions of the season, and are just as anxious to play here as the Winchester management is to have them.

MASS MEETING IN INTEREST OF THE WINCHESTER HOSPITAL.

Time Has Come to Decide on Permanent Hospital or Not.

There will be a very important meeting of the people of Winchester in the Town Hall, Thursday evening, October 2, at eight o'clock. This meeting to which all the residents of Winchester are cordially invited will be in the interest of our local hospital.

The need of such an institution has been long felt and a most interesting and successful experiment has been carried on during the past two years. In our modern civil life hospitals are as necessary as schools and churches.

There are few towns that do not maintain fire departments, but many that have no institution to care for the sick. This would seem to imply that we hold the saving of property in higher regard than the saving of human life. Such a condition should not exist in a civilized community.

The time has come for the town of Winchester to decide whether it will have a permanent institution of this kind or whether it will depend upon those already founded elsewhere to the great disadvantage of our own sick people, and of emergency cases in particular where convenient and quick medical and surgical aid is a matter of life or death.

For a community to depend on outside hospitals is very much like depending on the fire departments of other towns in case of conflagrations. At the mass meeting of citizens the Hon. Ralph Joslin will preside. Dr. Alfred Worcester will give the principal address, followed by representative men of Winchester, including the local physicians, who will from various points of view tell what has been done during the last two years and what are the needs of the present and future.

If you are in favor of a hospital come to this meeting. If you are opposed to it, come also and hear those whose experience makes them competent to tell why a hospital is a necessity in our modern community life.

HORACE J. ADAMS.

Former Resident Dies at Stowe, Mass.

Mr. Horace J. Adams, formerly a well known resident of this town, died very suddenly at his home in Stowe early Wednesday morning. About three o'clock he was taken ill, and passed away before medical aid could be summoned. His death was due to apoplexy.

Mr. Adams was 63 years of age. He was well known in this town, having lived for years with his family on Hillside avenue. Last spring, upon his retirement from the leather business, he purchased a farm at Stowe and moved with his family to that place.

He was born in Boston on July 7, 1850. John Adams and John Quincy Adams, Presidents of the United States, were common ancestors of his and of his wife, Mrs. Grace A. (Thwing) Adams.

In his younger days Mr. Adams was engaged in journalism and periodical management. Under special arrangement with the publishers, he issued for a time an American edition of the London Illustrated News. But in his more mature years he was engaged principally in the manufacture of extracts used in leather tanning.

He was well known in leather circles and was treasurer of the American Crown Leather Company of Arlington. He is survived by his wife and three daughters, Misses Helen, Elsie and Bertha, and one son, Joseph.

He also leaves three sisters, Mrs. J. Frank Brown and Mrs. Philip Johnson of Somerville, and Mrs. E. Albert Wood of Boston.

Funeral services, under Christian Science auspices, were held at the family residence in Stowe yesterday (Thursday) afternoon, and also at the village cemetery, the readings being from the Bible, Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures, by Mary Baker Eddy, and the church hymnal. A large number of people from Boston, Winchester and surrounding points were present to pay their last tributes of respect and love to a friend and neighbor whose life had been quiet, useful and blameless.

Mr. Ordway Furbush left town Wednesday for Farmington, Maine, where he will enter Abbott Preparatory School.

The Winchester Teachers' Club held a reception in the Assembly hall at the High School last evening to the new teachers.

LITTLE INTEREST.

Smallest Vote Since Primary System Went Into Effect.

The Primary election Tuesday was attended by the smallest number of voters yet, comparatively little interest being taken. The total vote was 371, divided among the three parties as follows: Republican 247, Democrat 86, Progressive 38.

The contest between Benton and Gardner for the Republican nomination for governor, the contest in the same party for county commissioner, and the Democratic contests concerning local candidates promised at least a fair turnout of our voters. But even this interest was not enough to arouse the general apathy.

Last year the Republican vote was 755; the previous year it was 562. Last year's Democratic vote was 174.

Gardner defeated Benton in Winchester 164 to 78, over two to one, and Patch won over Barlow in the County Commissioner contest by 19 votes. Tuck won over Dean by 13, Holland over Barrett by 7, and the delegates and town committee members were taken from the two sets offered about equally. The Progressives had no contest and about one-half of the voting strength of the party visited the polls.

The polls opened at 5.45, Chairman William J. Daly of the Selectmen presiding. The Progressives had two members present to act as tellers, but they were not taken as it was not deemed necessary. Following is a list of the election officers:

RAILLOT CLERKS—James R. Livingstone, Rep. Robert H. Sullivan, Dem.

TELLERS—Francis E. Rogers, Dem. John F. Donaghy, Dem. D. D. Mavin, Dem. William Adair, Rep. Harry V. Nutter, Rep. Fred A. Parsch, Rep. George E. Lake, Rep.

The vote in detail was as follows:

YOUR AFFAIRS AND MINE

There are a great many good men and women here in Winchester who believe that the suffrage should be extended to the women. The Spectator is one of those who maintain that our women should be accorded statewide suffrage. The agitation and aggressive work of the good people interested in woman suffrage will win in the end. The State of Massachusetts should be placed in the same enlightened class as Colorado and other states where the vote is freely accorded the fair sex and where it is exercised to the great good of the community. Our women have been heretofore but dumb spectators of the process of government without being permitted to assist. They now want to have an expression so that they may be able to tell the lawmakers their views upon subjects vital to the cure of industrial ills, to the advance of morality. These matters of life and death, of social uplift and the diffusion of happiness come close to the interest and lives of our women and are matters upon which they should have the opportunity to give the effective expression by the ballot. Who can gainsay the efficacy and the justice of the conferment they seek? Today the most enlightened men in every community stand for the recognition of identical political rights for women and men. The enlightened press takes the same stand. Rapidly the lines are being widened, and the easy sneer against the practicability of woman's suffrage is giving place to a full acknowledgment of the inherent and practical justice, as well as the social necessity, for the infusion of new ideals and new enthusiasm in the political structure of society. The women have captured the breastworks of industry; they have seized the laurels of literature; they have caused the arts to honor them; they have fortified themselves at every step along the road of their public advance until they now stand before the bulwarks of political rights. American sanity and chivalry are with them, and they will win. Winchester should be in the advance line of the movement.

There is a very great difference between men. There are not very many men even here in staid Winchester whose lives are free from the weaknesses of ordinary mankind. It is not often that one runs across a human being who doesn't drink nor gamble, who doesn't follow the race track, and who doesn't pay attention to every woman he meets. Generally, one will meet men who have the entire quartette of weaknesses. But when you do run across a man who does not have any one of the four distempers (and doesn't have to go to Sunday School in order to avoid them), he is generally a pretty clean sort of a fellow to fasten to. And then when he is a gentleman, too, the combination is worth anyone's time and attention. But there are crooked men who frequently assume the moral attitude, and with people who do not understand motives, oftentimes the prater of morals gets by. One has to be a pretty good student of human nature, in many instances, to get at the real motive behind righteous advice. It is, of course, not always that righteous advice is deceptive, but it is always a thin sort of thing when there is a bad motive behind it. Platitudes count for nothing. It is the circumstance that counts—the condition that prevails. The woman doesn't make any mistake when she has tried out a man for years, and finds him true blue all the time—in sunshine and shadow. And no man errs when he finds a fellow above the ordinary weaknesses and puts some confidence in him.

One of the hopeful signs of the times for the pessimist to consider in his dark moments is the fact that women's clubs here in Winchester and elsewhere have as their guiding note today the motto of "service"—not to be ministered unto, but to minister. Our women's clubs have outgrown their original narrow bounds and are reaching out beyond the pages of Browning to the broad study of human life, its needs, the possibilities for improvement; and, most hopeful of all, they are learning and teaching the beneficent lesson of the brotherhood of man. There are fields to conquer here in Winchester. There are certain abuses to overcome. Our women's clubs will view Winchester hopefully, will note the need of the town and will try to get in touch with its life. Of course, there are certain members of these clubs who will bluster a bit, skim the surface and settle down to old time dilettante life. This is characteristic of individuals the world over. It is very unfortunate when we note the superficial, yet the Spectator is not sure that even the slight effort, that simply uncovers the surface and then stops, has not accomplished a goodly bit, for there are always serious-minded souls who are ready to step into the breach and go on with a good work well begun. Study clubs serve a useful end, but the world most needs service; and women's clubs that have recognized the call for work and have paused in the pursuit of happiness, the quest of culture, to extend a hand to the weak and to spread the spirit of civic duty and civic pride are entitled to sympathy, support, and, most of all, to public understanding of their aims and purposes. For their accomplishments, The Spectator extends a word of praise; for their hopes, his best wishes.

Public spirited men and women of Winchester who have been agitating against the unsightly billboards will be interested in the following extract from Leslie's. Perhaps something of the kind might be accomplished in Winchester:

"A method of billboard advertising to which no one can object has at last been found. France imposes a progressive tax on the billboards that disgrace the country side, but an enterprising firm has hit upon an ingenious way to escape the penalty of the law, and at the same time to secure effective advertising. In place of an unsightly billboard it has substituted a large bed of flowers in a field adjoining a railroad leading into Paris. The design represents a yellow cow which is the trademark of the article advertised. The experiment has met with popular favor, and as it is not a violation of the law, it is expected that the idea will spread throughout France. A rivalry in creating artistic and effective floral advertisements would afford a welcome relief from unsightly billboards."

BUYING RAILROAD TIES.

One Way Whereby A Railroad's Revenue Flows Back To The People.

There are many ways in which the money contributed to a railroad for service finds its way back to the people. In the year just passed, for example, nearly $1,200,000 of the revenue of the New York, New Haven and Hartford went to people living in its own territory in return for railroad ties and fence posts which they had furnished to the road. In five years the amount would probably approximate $5,000,000.

Last year there were purchased for the New Haven properties, including the trolleys, a total of 2,904,640 ties. For the New Haven road alone 2,376,000 ties were bought. Some of these ties were creosoted ties and these were of Southern pine. But from people living along its own lines the New Haven bought a total of 2,100,000 native ties and for these ties it paid the sum of $1,075,000.

Oftentimes ties are rejected because of imperfections, but in such cases the railroad makes a practice, whenever possible, to buy them at a lower figure for use as fence posts. For this another $100,000 might be added, making $1,175,000 as the total amount distributed by the railroad in this manner along its own lines in a single year.

The money expended for this purpose is not paid to a few large lumber companies. On the contrary, it has a very wide distribution and is paid to many people in small amounts, such payments running all the way from $12 to $10,000. Much of this money goes to small farmers, to people owning small woodlots; very often to widows for whom it means additional revenue from their modest farms. For such people the railroad is generally a ready and convenient market.

Anybody can supply ties to a railroad like the New Haven providing the ties offered meet the specifications, and there is no more bother about it than that of cutting, sawing and stripping the timber and hauling it to the nearest railroad station. When a railroad wants to buy ties it takes care to post at all of its stations a copy of the specifications with the prices it will pay for different classes of ties. There are three classes of railroad ties used on the New Haven system, the difference being in their thickness, but all ties to come up to the requirements have to be eight feet in length with ends sawed square, a one-inch variation being allowed either way. They can be of three kinds of wood—oak, fine chestnut or cedar, though all switch ties must be of chestnut. As all of this wood is native to New England it will thus be seen that it is an open field to the farmer.

In general, anyone desirous of cashing in on some of his wood lot simply has to write to the railroad company and is then told when the tie train will be along to call for his ties. All that he need do then is to pile them up at his railroad station and wait for the inspector of the tie train to examine them. If he accepts them as conforming to the specifications they are loaded on the train at once, a notice is sent by the inspector to the railroad purchasing agent of the number and class bought and usually in about thirty days the man who sold the ties gets his money.

While ties are picked up on many points of the system, the larger number obtained by the New Haven are purchased in Western Massachusetts and Connecticut. Frequently the tie train on its trips will pick up as many as 2,000 ties in a single day.

TOWN AND CITY PLANNING.

Governor Foss has issued a proclamation calling attention to the officials of all communities over 10,000 to the new law regarding the appointing of a planning board that shall study the future location of houses and public buildings with regard to health and civic beauty. The scope of the board is very large and it is to be hoped that everywhere the most public-spirited men will be appointed. It means that towns and cities must look ahead. American communities have been obliged to spend millions because somebody in the past failed to see ahead of their nose, says the Melrose News. But from now on the tax payers desire the money for improvements to be spent judiciously. The suggestions of these planning boards ought to have great weight in beautifying our streets and squares as well as to prevent the mutilation of these localities already attractive.

EDWARD H. KENNERSON HAD NARROW ESCAPE.

Mr. Edward H. Kennerson, formerly residing on Brooks street, this town, and now living at Bellows Falls, Vt., and Cambridge, had a very narrow escape from serious accident on Highland avenue last Friday afternoon. His automobile was completely wrecked.

According to report Mr. Kennerson was travelling up Fallon's Hill at the same point where a serious accident occurred in July. In common with the earlier accident the cause was the same, being due to the auto skidding. The car struck a tree with terrific force, and both right wheels were broken off at the hubs, and the rear axle broken. Mr. Kennerson was alone in the car, having just left some friends who had accompanied him from Bellows Falls at their home in Stoneham. He was thrown clear of the wreck and escaped with a few bruises.

RELIGIOUS VACATIONS.

If the famous divine who advises church-goers to take a vacation and "rest up" religiously makes any converts to his doctrines, it is likely to be among those who can least afford to follow the advice. There is a thin, finely drawn shred of truth in the philosophy underlying the observation that constant dinning of religion into people dulls the sharpness of their spiritual perceptions, but for nearer to quitting the job than to taking the much-needed rest.

It may be laid down as a safe proposition that the person who feels that he is getting too much religious instruction is the very one who needs more of it. True spirituality, which is the logical and legitimate result of church attendance, "grows by what it feeds on," like Hamlet's increase of appetite—if the growth is at all normal and healthy. The church's trouble is not indigestion, overfeeding, gout or dyspepsia, so much as it is downright spiritual anemia brought on by underfeeding. Many people go on a spiritual hunger strike without knowing it. While it is theoretically and academically true that reiteration tends to dull perception, as an alarm clock ultimately loses its power to arouse if not immediately responded to, the large and more important fact is that one cannot really get too much of a good thing spiritually.

If the churches would work an extra force of clergymen during the heated term and arrange that strongest efforts should be put forth at the psychological time when spirituality is at its lowest ebb, valuable results might be accomplished. The illogic of the situation is that at the season when the attack of evil is the strongest owing to the fact that the resisting power of the forces of god is the weakest, the assault languishes, the batteries cease firing or continue in desultory fashion with substitute gunners, while the main artillery makes for the seashore. And it is at this time that one of the commanders suggests that everybody "rest up."—Haverhill Gazette.

ENGAGEMENT ANNOUNCED.

The engagement of Miss Helen Glines Edelfson, daughter of Mr. William F. Edelfson of Pine street, and Mr. Robert Cooper Barr, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Barr of Wedgemore avenue, was announced on Monday noon at a luncheon given by the bride-to-be to twelve of her most intimate friends. During the luncheon which was given at Miss Edelfson's home, favors were drawn by the party at the table, and as the hostess received a diamond ring she was showered with congratulations.

No Restful Sleep for Seventeen Months!

Dangerous, distressing kidney and bladder trouble removed by Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy.

Mr. C. H. Smith, 320 Washington St., Providence, R. I., writes: "I thank you for the free sample bottle of Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy you sent me. Since taking this I have continued its use and have used three large bottles, with much relief. I had been troubled severely with constipation for years. My case was supposed to be chronic. Now my bowels are regular. I was also a great sufferer from kidney and bladder trouble and for seventeen months I had no rest at night, as it was necessary to get up so often, sometimes as often as twice an hour. I am pleased to say that now I do not have to get up more than twice during the night and sometimes only once. Your Favorite Remedy has proved a blessing to me. I feel better all over. The heavy 'loggy' feeling has left me, as well as the bloated eyes. I sincerely thank you, for if I had not first tried the sample bottle I would to-day probably be in the same old condition, with aches and pains and all tired out."

Write Dr. David Kennedy Co., Rondout, N. Y., for free sample and helpful booklet. A standard kidney, liver and blood remedy. 40 years successful. All druggists.

POST OFFICE SITE.

Suggestion That $25,000 Additional be Appropriated for the Land.

So far as can be learned no action has been taken as yet by the federal authorities in the matter of choosing a site for the new postoffice for this town. The various properties have been brought forward and presented for consideration, and there the matter rests.

It has been suggested that in order to facilitate matters, and to insure a site which will be both central and desirable, together with a building which will be a structure to adorn the business centre, a bill be placed before Congress calling for an appropriation of $25,000 for the purchase of a site alone.

With this idea in mind, Mr. Harry F. Lunt, who was very active in securing the passage of the original appropriation of $75,000 for a federal building here, entered into communication with Representative Frederick S. Deitrick to see if the matter was feasible.

Mr. Lunt has received from Mr. Deitrick a letter stating that he would place a bill before Congress raising the appropriation to $100,000, provided he received some endorsement from the citizens of the town. Furthermore that he would give it his support and earnestly work for it.

While this bill, if passed, would provide for the whole sum suggested, Mr. Lunt's idea is to separate the appropriation for the site from that for the building, this being to insure first—a suitable site regardless of the building, and second—a building of architecture and appointments which will be an addition and ornament to the town. It is feared by some that either the site must be sacrificed for the building, or vice-versa, under the present appropriation of $75,000 for both edifice and location.

It has been some time now since the bids of the land owners have been forwarded to Washington, and as no action has apparently been taken there is no reason why any of those who have presented their land should continue to hold it for a postoffice if an acceptable offer is made for it by outside parties.

THE BOSTON THEATRE.

The third of the Century Theatre dramatic spectacles, "Joseph and His Brethren," will come to the Boston Theatre, beginning Monday, Sept. 29th. In some respects it is built on a larger scale than either of its predecessors, for it has thirteen scenes where "The Garden of Allah" and "The Daughter of Heaven" had only eight. There are more than two hundred people in the production and more than sixty speaking parts. Its success has been phenomenal.

To present "Joseph and His Brethren," The Liebler Company has selected a cast of unusual ability. Brandon Tynan, will play the role of Joseph. James O'Neill, of "Monte Cristo" fame, will have the part of Jacob, and in the third act will play Pharaoh.

The curtain will rise promptly at two o'clock in the afternoon and at eight in the evening. Mail orders with remittances will be filled in the order received.

TELEPHONE NUMBER 29

Nowadays when the people are all home from vacations, shrewd merchants get busy and advertise; and there is no medium as valuable as the local paper.

Middlesex County, with its 122,931 registered voters, is the largest county outside of Suffolk; and last Fall it polled the largest vote in the State with a total of 112,887. Suffolk County has 124,127 registered voters, of which 97,851 voted.

Sec. of State Bryan closed his Chautauqua lectures last Saturday evening. Now that he has received his pay for the same, it is presumed that he will again take up the duties of his office, content in the thought that he will be able to keep the wolf away for another year.

Miss Amy Lowell, sister of President Lowell, of Harvard, denies that she smoked cigars while sailing across the Atlantic, but adds: "Every one smokes cigarettes, outside of a very conservative circle." The majority of women, are, however, in the conservative class.

A movement is on foot to place all employees of Middlesex county, those employed by the commissioners, the registrar of deeds, the treasurer, the registrar of probate and the sheriff, on the classified civil service list. The suggestion meets with approval, but it has been claimed that when such a reform has been advocated heretofore the county rings, of which we hear so much about, lobby the legislature against it because they do not wish to lose the patronage connected with the disposing of these positions. If the employees were under civil service not so much would be heard of the so called "ring."

One reason for the excellent ball team that Reading has each summer is because the games are played in an enclosed field and an admission of twenty-five cents charged. This enables the managers to obtain the best of base ball talent. The efficiency of a ball team lies greatly in the matter of dollars and cents. Here in Winchester the field is open to all, and the managers of the team collect what they can from the spectators. Some times there is a surplus to work with and again there is not. It costs from $10 up to meet the expenses of each game. And yet Winchester by careful paring by the managers, has one of the best teams in this section, and no doubt would make Reading work pretty hard to beat it.

HIGH SCHOOL FOOTBALL.

The prospects are fairly good for a fast football team at Winchester High this year. Although the material is very light Coach Hanson and Capt. Leonard have succeeded in getting together a team that should make its opponents travel to win.

It is very evident that the proper school spirit is not shown at this time. This should not be so for in past years the Winchester spirit and enthusiasm were big factors in the team's success. It is to be hoped that more candidates will report, for it is not yet too late, as the season does not open until Oct. 4th.

The most promising candidates for the team are Leonard, Cullen, Cobb, Warner, O'Sullivan, Johnson, Bradley, Stephenson, Murphy, Lane, Apsey, Locke, Eldridge, McCarthy, Reynolds, Hight, Ledwidge, Wright, Russell, and Hight.

Douglas Case is manager and he has arranged a very attractive schedule. Perhaps the most important factor in the welfare of the football squad is the attendance of the townspeople at these games. This is absolutely necessary as it inspires and encourages the boys and insures the financial success of the team. Everybody come and buy a tag and by doing so show your interest in the school.

16 HIGH SCHOOL BOYS TO SEE GAME TOMORROW.

Sixteen members of the High school football squad will attend the game at the Stadium tomorrow between Harvard and the University of Maine. Coach Hanson has been presented with the tickets for use by the boys by the Harvard Athletic Association. A limited number are given in this way each year for some of the first five games which Harvard plays.

D. R. Hanson, the coach, is a senior at Harvard, and is much liked by the boys. He is conducting daily practice on Manchester Field and the indications are that Winchester will have a good team this fall.

No use in talking, the laundered negligee shirts are the most popular garments in shirtdom.

The "STAG" BRAND

Laundered Negligees now have many new novelties in color combinations and stripes and figured effects that are different. They are made in all the new shades, such as blue, pink, helio, brown, tan and wine color. All colors are warranted.

These come not only in the plain coat style with attached cuffs, but are also made in the plain front, not coat style, with detached cuffs, because we find that many people want this style. We also always carry a large stock of "Stag" brand extra-size laundered negligees in all the standard patterns—neck sizes, 15 1/2 to 19.

Look over our stock and see what you need for the fall and winter.

ENGAGEMENT OF WELL KNOWN WINCHESTER BOY ANNOUNCED.

The second engagement of a captain of one of Harvard's major sports to be announced within a few days is that of Dana J. P. Wingate of this town, Harvard '14, captain of last Spring's victorious baseball team and of next year's varsity nine, to Miss Mildred Mansfield of Wisconsin, which has just been made public at the latter's home.

Capt. Wingate, who is a son of Charles E. L. Wingate of Stratford road, a well known Boston newspaperman, prepared for college at Phillips Exeter Academy, from which he graduated in 1910. While there he acquired a reputation as a fast infielder and a good all-around baseball player. He also became well known as a golf player, being elected secretary of the Interscholastic Golf Association in 1907. In February, 1909, he was elected president of the New England Interscholastic Athletic Association. Entering Harvard in the Fall of 1910, young Wingate played third base on his freshman baseball team, of which he was also captain. His sophomore year he played shortstop on the varsity nine, and at the end of the season of 1912 was elected captain for the coming year. Last Spring he again played shortstop on the nine, which was victorious over Yale, and has been re-elected captain for next Spring, his last in college.

Wingate first met Miss Mansfield while he was at Exeter. At that time she was attending the Rogers Hall School in Lowell, from which she recently graduated. Wingate was singing on the Exeter Glee Club and met his future fiancée at the annual concert which that organization gives at Rogers Hall.

Miss Mansfield's father was formerly a resident of Lowell, but went West some years ago, going into business in Wisconsin, where he remained until his death.

During the past summer Wingate has been acting as counselor at a camp in Pennsylvania, after which he went to visit at Miss Mansfield's home in Wisconsin. He is now on his way back to Winchester.

W. H. S. NOTES.

The foot ball squad will go to the Harvard-Maine game tomorrow as the guests of Coach Hanson. The team leaves on the 1.10 car for Arlington.

Tuesday, in chapel, Mr. Wixom gave an interesting talk based upon statistics showing the per cent. of men attaining high positions due to greater education.

There are more post graduates in school this year than ever before. They are: Lawrence Love, Henry Harris, Helen Lewis, Benj. Hodges, Laura Hodges, H. W. Rohman, Melvin Freeman, Doris Wilkinson—Medford High, Ethel McEwen. Several of the class of 1913 have entered colleges. Gilbert Swett and Charles Downer are enrolled at Dartmouth, Richard Noyes has entered Yale, Franklin Lane and James Penalan are in Tufts, Madeline Little is in Wheaton, Marion Trott is in Jackson, Barbara French is in Simmons, Arthur Adams entered Norwich University, Marjorie and Langworthy Burwell are in the University of Wisconsin, Helen Rowe entered Jackson, Preston Rowe is in Tufts, Barbara Wellington is in Mt. Holyoke, Miriam Foster is in Vassar, Olive Randlett entered Bradford Academy, Alice Romkey is in Bridgewater Normal School.

MARTINO BADASSARE.

Martino Badassare of Irving street, who had been confined to the Boston City Hospital since last April, died at that institution Monday. He was 35 years of age.

The remains were taken in charge by undertaker Sullivan, and funeral services were held at St. Mary's church Tuesday. Rev. Francis E. Rogers officiated. The burial was in Calvary cemetery.

Badassare was a laborer by occupation. He leaves a wife, one son and two daughters, living in Italy.

SUDDEN DEATH OF EDWARD P. NOYES.

Edward Parish Noyes, 57 years of age, a well known resident of Everett avenue, passed away very suddenly at his home on Saturday morning. Mr. Noyes was alone at his home, his family having left during the day previous to spend Saturday and Sunday elsewhere. He awoke during the night and called a physician, who found him suffering apparently from heart trouble. He expired soon after the doctor arrived.

Edward Parish Noyes was the son of Rev. Daniel Parker Noyes and Helen McGregor Means and was born in New York city, Sept. 26, 1857. His father was a Congregational minister and his boyhood was spent in Orange, N. J., Brookline and Rockport, Mass. He fitted for college at Phillips Andover Academy and entered Yale, graduating in the class of 1880.

After graduating he entered the employ of the Lowell Machine Works and made a study of cotton machinery. In 1884 he took a special course of one year at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and for the nine years following was interested in the Neviers Horseshoe Company. In 1894 he became associated with the Hancock Inspirator Company, with whom he remained till July, 1896. Since that time he has been engaged as a mechanical engineer. He has resided in Winchester since 1892.

Mr. Noyes was married Nov. 7, 1891, in Hastings, Eng., to Jessie Porter, daughter of Richard and Harriet Winter Hill of Davenport, Ia. His wife died July 22, 1897. Three children survive, Miss Helen McGregor Noyes, Richard Atherton Noyes and Miss Hester Noyes. A brother, Atherton Noyes, is a professor at Colorado College, Colorado Springs, Colo. He had been a resident of this town for the past 20 years.

A service, conducted by Frank W. Hodgdon, was held at the family home in Winchester on Monday afternoon. Members of the choir, to which Mr. Noyes has belonged for the past two years, sang "Hark! Hark! my Soul" and the hymn "O Love That Will Not Let Me Go."

The following gentlemen acted as honorary pall bearers: Mr. Henry C. Ordway, Dr. George N. P. Mead, Hon. Samuel J. Elder, Mr. Charles C. Jackson, Hon. Frederic Adams, Dr. George A. Brown, Dr. Roger B. Merriman.

At the Byfield Parish Church, on Tuesday afternoon, services were conducted by Rev. David C. Torrey of Bedford, Rev. Herbert E. Lombard of Worcester and Rev. N. T. Dyer, pastor of the church. A volunteer choir led the singing of old and familiar hymns at this service and at the grave. The pall bearers were Mr. George N. Whipple, Mr. Henry C. Ordway, Dr. Charles S. Ingham, Dr. Robert M. Lawrence, Hon. Samuel J. Elder and Mr. James Means.

The burial was at Byfield, Mass.

WINCHESTER LADY MEMBER OF COMMITTEE.

Mrs. M. Ella Gleason, of Winchester, president of the Massachusetts Women's Christian Temperance Union, has been chosen a member of the women's committee of the Boston Columbus Day celebration. In the great pageant-parade of all the nations which has succeeded the annual procession of the Knights of Columbus, the organization which Mrs. Gleason directs will have both floats and marching bodies in costume, these being designed to show the progress of the temperance movement. These features will be part of the women's division whose chairman is Mrs. Frank L. Young, president of the Massachusetts Federation of Women's Clubs. The equal suffrage societies of greater Boston are taking keen interest in the parade. Both the Massachusetts and Boston societies will have floats and the School Voters' League will show a feature designed to call attention to their forthcoming lecture course at Ford Hall. The Massachusetts Society Opposed to Further Extension of the Franchise to Women was invited by the Supervisor of Parade Features, A. J. Sheafe, to take part in the celebration but declined to do so.

MRS. RESSELAS W. IRELAND.

Mrs. Adeline Ireland, widow of the late Resselas W. Ireland, died at her home, No. 700 Washington street, at the Highlands on Monday. She was 60 years of age, and had resided in this town for the past 25 years. She was the daughter of Francis E. and Helen (Phillips) Perkins.

Mrs. Ireland is survived by four daughters and two sons—Mrs. Addie B. Stevens of Philadelphia, Mr. Edward W. Ireland of Boston, Mrs. Ruth M. Bruce of this town, Mr. Stephen Ireland of Worcester, Mrs. Nathaniel B. Mason of Boston and Mrs. Stanley B. Bowman of Reading.

The funeral services were held from the residence on Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

The burial was in Wildwood cemetery.

AUTO STRUCK LAUNDRY TEAM.

A touring car owned by J. H. Osborne of Ware street, Lynn, collided with a Winchester Laundry team at the corner of Church and Fletcher streets Monday noon, badly damaging the wagon. The laundry wagon was driven by William Lutes of Main street. It was going along Church street when the auto came out of Fletcher street, and before it could be brought to a stop the car struck the wagon and threw the horse down. Lutes was thrown from the wagon, but fortunately escaped injury. The auto was driven by James J. Dunning of Lynn, the Osborne chauffeur, who was not injured. The body of the wagon was badly cracked and strained, and it is said will require extensive repairs. The auto was travelling slowly at the time, otherwise the result would have been more serious.

SELECTMEN'S MEETING.

September 22, 1913.

The Board met at 7.30 p. m., all present.

Constable Edward F. Maguire was present with a venire calling for three traverse jurors for the Superior Court at Cambridge to be held on the first Monday in October, and James Johnston, A. Miles Holbrook, and Henry A. Goddard were drawn to serve as such jurors.

A letter was received from Andrew J. Solis, Chairman Progressive Town Committee, in regard to the appointment of ballot clerks and the Clerk was instructed to send the reply of this Board as follows:

Mr. Andrew J. Solis, Chairman Progressive Town Committee, Winchester, Mass.

Dear Sir:—Your letter of September 17th relating to the appointment of ballot clerks at the primaries addressed to the Chairman of this Board has been received and considered, and I am directed to say that so far as this Board is concerned there was no understanding or promise that the Selectmen would, after the opening of the polls, appoint two ballot clerks to represent the Progressive Party.

All inquiries and Jobbing promptly attended to

BANKERS HAD ENJOYABLE TRIP

The American Institute of Banking which has just closed its Eleventh Annual Convention in the city of Richmond, Va., was attended by a delegation of fifty-four from Boston and vicinity. Winchester was represented by Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Bean, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Merrill, Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Stone and Mr. H. W. Hildreth.

Mr. Bean, who was the Chairman of the delegation, is the president of the Boston Chapter of the Institute and is also a member of the Executive Council of the National Organization.

The party had private cars attached to the special Pennsylvania Railroad train which took over two hundred delegates from New England.

A stop of a day was made in Washington, where visits were made at Arlington, Fort Lee and Mt. Vernon.

After the Convention, which was the largest and best ever held by the Institute, the Boston party returned by steamer from Newport News to Boston. Special trains were provided from Richmond to Old Point Comfort and a stop was made at Williamsburg, where visits were made to the historic places in the old town.

The entertainment provided for the delegates by the bankers of Richmond was on a most lavish plan, both for the ladies and the gentlemen, and the returning members of the party have a new conception of southern hospitality.

HIGH SCHOOL ELECTIONS.

The following elections have been made at the high school:—

Class of 1914—Douglas Case, President; Martha Locke, Vice-President; Philip Wait, Treas.; Elizabeth Symmes, Sec.

Class of 1915—Marion Kendall, President; Warren Johnston, Vice-President; George Apsey, Treas.; Bertha Kelley, Sec.

Class of 1916—Stewart Lane, President; Elizabeth Passano, Vice-President; Rebecca Rowe, Treas.; Paul Bean, Sec.

Class of 1917—Katherine Starr, President; Henry Jones, Vice-President; Julia Sherman, Treas.; Henry Hart, Sec.

Douglas Case, Football manager; George Saltmarsh, Baseball captain; Paul Cole, Baseball manager; Warren Johnston, Basketball captain; Loring Gleason, Basketball manager; Lloyd Goddu, Hockey captain; George Apsey, Hockey manager.

Recorder staff—Miss Marjorie Braddock, Editor-in-chief; Harold Bugbee, Assistant editor-in-chief; Elinor Hudson, Exchange editor; George Saltmarsh, Business manager; Donald Cole, Assistant business manager; Percy Bugbee, Class editor; '16: Miss Hester Noyes, '14: Miss Betty Garland, '15: Robert Metcalf, '17: H. Wray Rohman, Alumni editor; Henry Maguire, A. A. editor; Miss Frances Foster, Girls' A. A. editor; Miss Celina Coburn, Artistic editor.

SUCCESSFUL AFFAIR.

The concert and dance given in the Town Hall on Wednesday evening by Santa Maria Court, D. of A., proved very successful. The concert was given by the Malden Municipal Band and lasted until after ten, being followed by dancing. The Band was assisted by Miss Frances Borowski, pianist; Mrs. Roy S. Whitcomb, soprano and Frank K. Conant, tenor. Dancing was enjoyed until a late hour.
